Henry Hamilton Dils, third, was born at Parkersburg, April 6, 1876, and received a public school education. After leaving school he was a clerk with the Parkersburg Sentinel and the Parkersburg National Bank until he left to bank to take up the business of his father at the latter's death. He was then only nineteen. He has been one of the city's merchants now for a quarter of a century and is president of Dils Brothers & Company, and also a director of the First National Bank. He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Rotary Club, a director in the Y. M. C. A., and a member of the Methodist Church.

February 25, 1912, he married Edna Cook, youngest daughter of Spencer and Florida (Neal) Cook, both of whom represented old time families in this section of West Virginia. Henry Hamilton Dils and wife have two children: Henry H., fourth, and Samuel Spencer.

The younger brother, Samuel M. Dils, who is secretary and treasurer of Dils Brothers & Company, was born June 6, 1878. He graduated from the Parkersburg High School, attended Washington and Jefferson College, and since then has been identified with the business at Parkersburg and in later years has given much of his attention to fruit growing, especially in the Panhandle section of the state. He owns two farms, with about 25,000 trees. He was organizer and is now president of the local Kiwanis Club. He is a thirty-second degree Mason, and a member of Nemesis Temple of the Mystic Shrine and of the Methodist Church.

JAMES B. CLINTON, M. D., was an early volunteer for service in connection with the nation's participation in the World War, and his initial work in his profession was with the Medical Corps of the British Royal Army. He lived up to the full tension of the great conflict and made a record that shall ever reflect honor upon his name. He has been engaged in the practice of his profession at Fairmont, Marion County, since the autumn of 1919.

Doctor Clinton was born in Scotland, November 2, 1888, and is a son of John and Christina (Mason) Clinton, the former of whom was born in Ireland, in 1853, and the latter in Scotland, in 1851. John Clinton became a deep-sea fisherman in his native land, where he remained until 1889, when he came to the United States. In 1893 he returned to Ireland, and two years later, on coming again to the United States he was accompanied by his family and here he continued his residence more than forty years, having recently returned to Ireland, where he expects to pass the remainder of his life. His wife died in 1914. Mrs. Clinton was a daughter of John Mason, who was a native of Scotland and who came to the United States in 1848, he having been one of the argonauts in the California gold fields in 1849. His brother James served as colonel of a New York regiment in the Civil war, and two sons of Colonel Mason were killed in battle while likewise serving as gallant soldiers of the Union.

Dr. James B. Clinton received his preliminary education in the public schools of Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania, and in 1908 he entered Geneva College, at Geneva, New York, where he continued his studies two years. He then, in 1910, entered famous old Jefferson Medical College in the City of Philadelphia, and in the same he was graduated in 1916, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Thereafter he gave nearly two years of service as an interne in the hospital of Jefferson Medical College and in other Philadelphia hospitals. He thus had not engaged in independent practice at the time when the nation became involved in the World War. In April, 1917, the month that the United States entered the war, Doctor Clinton applied for a commission in the Medical Corps of the United States Army, and in the following month he was commissioned first Lieutenant and immediately was assigned to duty overseas. He crossed the Atlantic in August of that year and was given assignment to the Medical Corps of the British Royal Army. From September 3 to December 24, 1917, he was in service at the Base Hospital at Norwich, England, and on the 26th of December he received sailing orders and proceeded to France. On New Year's day of 1918 he was in the trenches. In France he was attached to the First Cambridgeshire, recruited from Cambridge University, and with this unit he was in active service eighteen months. He was almost continuously at the front, was present at nine major battles, went "over the top" five times, was five times knocked down by shell concussion, and for two hours was held a German prisoner. He was at Peronne during the great battle at that point; during the "big push" of 1918 was before Ypres and, later, Albert, at the crucial period of that great drive. He served in support of the French at Montdidier, and was in the great retreat of the British and French armies before the German drive of 1918. In August of that year he was sent with his regiment to the Somme to prepare for the drive that was destined to end the war. October 11, 1918, he was on the "Hindenburg Line," near the Canal du Nord, where he first came in contact with the fighting units of the American Expeditionary Forces. Later he was sent back to Vimy Ridge, and he was at Mons when the historic armistice was signed.

In April, 1918, at the battle of Vomerzelle, Lieutenant Clinton was awarded the British military cross, a decoration for which only commissioned officers are eligible. Later he received two citations, and September 14, 1918, at the Somme, he again won the British military cross, at that time as a captain. On March 23, 1919, Captain Clinton was formally decorated at Buckingham Palace, by King George, he having been the first American to win twice the British military cross of honor. In April, 1919, Captain Clinton was transferred to the American forces, and in the following month he sailed for home, his honorable discharge having been received at Camp Dix, New Jersey, May 29, 1919.

After leaving military service Doctor Clinton served as hospital interne in the City of Philadelphia until October, 1919, on the 10th of which month he established himself in active general practice at Fairmont, West Virginia. He is a member of the staff of Cook Hospital in this city, and is a popular member of the local Kiwanis Club. The doctor maintains affiliation with the American Legion.

June 25, 1919, recorded the marriage of Doctor Clinton and Miss Beulah L. Harbison, who was born at Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania, December 5, 1887, a daughter of William and Etta (Graham) Harbison. They have two children, Barbara Jean and Christine Lorraine. Mrs. Clinton is a popular figure in the representative social activities of Fairmont.

CARL CLOVIS SMITH, D. D. S., a prominent and popular young dentist at Fairmont, is a member of an old and well known family of Greene and Fayette counties, Pennsylvania, where his ancestors have lived through five generations or more.

Doctor Smith was born near Pinebank in Greene County, Pennsylvania, December 4, 1894, son of Joseph Benson and Mary Avaline (Clovis) Smith, and grandson of John and Eliza (Fordyce) Smith. Mary Avaline Clovis was born in Greene County, daughter of Marion Jasper and Sarah (Eakin) Clovis, of Fayette County, Pennsylvania.

Joseph Benson Smith, a native of Greene County, owns and operates a fine farm of 265 acres in Jackson Township of that county, though since 1913 his home has been in New Concord, Ohio, where he is manager of the Co-operative Meat Market and also of the New Concord coal mine, of which he is part owner.

Carl C. Smith acquired his early training in the country schools of Greene County and in 1911 entered Muskingum Academy, the preparatory department of Muskingum College at New Concord, where he was graduated in 1915. October 5, 1916, he entered the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery at Baltimore, and was graduated D. D. S. in June, 1919. On October of that year Doctor Smith began practice at Cameron, West Virginia, but in July, 1921, moved his home and office to Fairmont.

Doctor Smith is a member of the Psi Omega dental fraternity and the Sigma Nu Delta Southern fraternity at the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery. He is a member of the Grange at Woodruff, Pennsylvania, and is affiliated with Cameron Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and Moundsville Lodge of Elks. In July, 1921, he married Lulu May Bell, of Cambridge, Ohio. She was born in 1897, daughter of O. O. Bell.

HENRY W. DISHER. When an individual has lived honorably and industriously, strenuously employing energy toward the acquirement of sufficient capital to justify his retirement from active affairs in the evening of life, he has earned repose and the quietude of his home. Many men prefer to work hard for a certain period, never sparing themselves, so that in their declining years they can retire upon their means and give attention to the carrying out of cherished plans and perhaps engage in civic affairs. Henry W. Disher, one of the old and honored residents of Berkeley Springs, however, does not belong to this class. This veteran of the Civil war and long-time business man, while he has spent his long career in active work and has accumulated a modest competence, has not thought of retirement, but continues to look after his daily affairs in the business world with as much interest and care as he displayed in the days when hard work was a necessity.

Mr. Disher was born on a farm $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Willenport, County Lincoln, Province of Ontario, Canada, a son of Henry Disher, who was born about 1800, at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Henry Disher was reared and educated in his native state, and in young manhood, accompanied by his widowed mother, went to Canada and bought a farm in County Lincoln, where he was engaged in general agricultural operations for many years. Late in life he came to Berkeley Springs, West Virginia, where he passed his last days, dying when eighty-four years old. Henry Disher married Margaret Patterson, who was born in the State of New York, daughter of Rev. Jacob Patterson, who was descended from Revolutionary ancestry and was a minister of the Methodist faith. Removing to Canada, he settled near Fenwick, in County Welland, and for several years was away from home, teaching for the greater part of the time and traveling on horseback through the wilds of Canada West, as the Province of Ontario was known at that time. He organized numerous churches, became widely known throughout that part of Canada, and spent his days at his home near Fenwick, where his death was greatly deplored. Mrs. Disher died at the family home in County Lincoln, having reared a family of four children: Henry W., Ezra Edwin, Johanna M. and Almond, the latter of whom died young.

Henry W. Disher attended school rather regularly in his youth, but at the age of seventeen left home and went to Ohio, where in 1864 he enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Eighty-second Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, with which he went to Nashville, Tennessee, where his regiment assisted in defeating the Confederate forces under General Hood. After the battle of Nashville he was detailed to do guard duty at Johnsonville, Tennessee, and was there until the close of the war, at which time he accompanied his command to Columbus, Ohio, where he received his honorable discharge. He then went to Toledo, Ohio, but in the same year left that city for Chicago, Illinois, and then pressed on to St. Louis, Missouri, where he was night clerk in the Southern Hotel for a time. He then engaged as second engineer on a steamer plying between St. Louis and Omaha, and made several trips between these points, as well as a trip to Fort Benton. His next employment was in the construction department of the Union Pacific Railroad, the first railroad built across the western plains, when Omaha was only a good-sized village, Indians were numerous on the western prairies and desert lands and vast herds of buffalo and antelope were still to be found. The building of the road formed one of the greatest romances of American history, and Mr. Disher shared in the numerous adventures and hardships incident to this mighty labor until the road had advanced some 1,500 miles, his employment during the latter half of his connection with the road being that of shipping agent at the far end of the line, stretching out beyond the frontier.

In 1869 Mr. Disher, tired of adventure and constant wanderings, resigned his position and came to Berkeley Springs, where he engaged in the mercantile business in partnership with his brother-in-law, John Buckhann. After about five years he bought his brother-in-law's interest in the business, which he conducted alone until 1880, and then turned his attention to the drug business, which he has been engaged ever since. He has a splendid patronage, which has been attracted by courteous service, fair representation and honest dealing, and his business reputation and standing are of the best.

In 1869 Mr. Disher was united in marriage with Mary Ann Crosfield, who was born in County Lincoln, Province of Ontario, Canada, a daughter of Rev. George A. Dorothy (Botterell) Crosfield. Mrs. Disher died December 29, 1903, and left four sons: Charles M., George W., William F. and Harry. Mr. Disher is an Episcopalian and a vestryman of the church at Berkeley Springs. He was formerly a member of Gen. Lee Somers Post, Grand Army of the Republic.

Mr. Disher's second union was with Miss Lillie Hedding, a daughter of Noah Hedding. Mr. Hedding was born in Fulton County, Pennsylvania, in 1841, a son of Ephraim Gettys Hedding, who was born in Juniata County, Pennsylvania, and a grandson of Rev. Noah Hedding, local preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church and pioneer in that part of Pennsylvania, in whose home the first services of a religious character in the vicinity were held and the society organized. He passed his last year in Juniata County. Ephraim Gettys Hedding acquired good education, and as a young man engaged in teaching school in Fulton County, Pennsylvania. About 1880 he moved to Paw Paw, Morgan County, West Virginia, where he established an apriary, his large quantities of honey being shipped to Baltimore, Washington and Wheeling. He continued to make his home at Paw Paw until his death at the age of seventy-nine years. Mr. Hedding served as a notary public for some years, and was a man who was held in high esteem in his community. He married Frances Hughes, who was born in Juniata County, Pennsylvania, a daughter of James Hughes, a prominent farmer and life long resident of Pennsylvania, who at one time represented his county in the Legislature of the state. Mrs. Disher's father, Noah Hedding, engaged in the mercantile business at Paw Paw, where he had accompanied his father in 1880, and later was a clerk in the N. Robinson store. Like his father, he was a notary public, serving as such at Paw Paw from 1899 to 1910, in which year he moved to Berkeley Springs, and he died at this place in June, 1911, aged seventy years. He married Miss Prudence Louise Tabler, who was born in Berkeley County, West Virginia, a daughter of William and Elizabeth (Kreglow) Tabler, descendants of early pioneers of this region. The Kreglow farm was originally a grant from Lord Fairfax and was located in the Hedgesville District, where the great-grandfather of Mrs. Disher spent his entire life. The Kreglow home was near the Village of Hedgesville. The mother of Mrs. Disher died in 1915, aged seventy-five years, her death, like that of her husband, being greatly mourned by a wide circle of friends. She was the mother of four children: Laura Appel, now a resident of Washington, D. C.; Addie Buzzard, a resident of Berkeley Springs; James W., a resident of Tyronne, Pennsylvania; and Lillie, now Mrs. Henry W. Disher. Mr. and Mrs. Hedding were faithful members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

SAMUEL W. PERRY, manager and one of the owners of the property owned by the Katona Coal Company at East Lynn, is one of the best business men and substantial citizens of Wayne County, whose activities have led to a considerable development of the coal fields of this section. He was born at Marion, Alabama, March 30, 1881, a son of Albert J. and Elizabeth (Armor) Perry, both of whom were born in Alabama and come of most distinguished ancestry.

Albert J. Perry was a merchant, banker, and also conducted extensive operations in mining and wholesaling at Birmingham, Alabama, which he left for East Lynn in July, 1902, coming here to take charge of his extensive coal interests. He built the railroad into his coal property of 5,140 acres, and opened up and began mining coal in

INTERIOR OF DISHER'S DRUG STORE, BERKELEY SPRINGS.

003. At present he has an output of 300 tons of coal per day. His father, the grandfather of Samuel W. Perry, was physician and surgeon, and served as such in an Alabama regiment of the Confederate army. For many years the Perry family has been prominent in Alabama, not only at Birmingham, but elsewhere. Albert J. Perry and his wife were married at Mobile, Alabama, in 1878.

Growing up in a home of culture, Samuel W. Perry was afforded unusual opportunities, and after attending the public schools of Birmingham went to Webb's School at Bell Buckett, Tennessee, for a year, after which he spent two years at St. Auburns, Radford, Virginia, completing his course in that institution in 1899. On December 25, 1899, Mr. Perry entered upon what was to be a very successful career, as an employee of the Trussville Furnace and Mining Company at Trussville, Alabama, continuing with that concern until April 1900, when he left it to engage with Jones Laughlin at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, but in September, 1901, returned to Trussville, Alabama, and formed connections with the Lacey-Buck Iron Company, with which he remained until May, 1902. His next connection was that which he formed with the Hillman Land & Iron Company of Grand Rivers, Kentucky, and he sustained it until September, 1902. In November, 1902, Mr. Perry went with the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company at Pueblo, Colorado, leaving that concern in October, 1903, and from October, 1903, until September, 1905, he was with his father at East Lynn. From September, 1905, to July, 1907, he was with the Margaret Mining Company at War Eagle, West Virginia. From July, 1907, to July, 1908, he was with the East Lynn Coal Company and the Naugatuck Coal Company at Mooton, West Virginia, this connection continuing until 1912. He then bought the Warfield Coal Company and organized the Grey Eagle Coal Company, managing both enterprises until July, 1914, when he gave up the Naugatuck Coal Company and concentrated his efforts upon the conduct of the Grey Eagle Coal Company until June, 1916, when he became the Chicago representative of the Blue Ash Company, and continued as such until in July, 1917, he sold his interest in the Grey Eagle and Naugatuck companies, and, in June, 1918, returned to East Lynn and organized the Hill Crest Coal Company of East Lynn. In February, 1920, he took over the operating of the Katona Coal Company as manager at East Lynn, and in June, 1921, converted the latter company into a partnership, and is operating it as such at the present time, being its manager and one of its owners. Mr. Perry is without doubt one of the most experienced coal operators of this region, his long and varied connection with the industry giving him a practical knowledge of all of the details, thus enabling him to conduct the affairs of his company efficiently and profitably.

During the late war Mr. Perry bent all of his energies to producing coal, and he was also very active in Red Cross work, having charge of the local chapter. He also was zealous in forwarding the sale of bonds and stamps, for, like a number of others, prevented from going into the service, he felt that it was of paramount importance that he do all he could at home.

On January 18, 1910, Mr. Perry married, near Wayne, West Virginia, Miss Ona Kyser, a daughter of Andrew and Nannie Kyser, both natives of West Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Perry have one daughter, Katherine. They are communicants of the Episcopal Church.

While Mr. Perry, as one of the recognized leaders in the coal industry of Wayne County, is not of this part of the state, is deeply absorbed in business details, he has found time to follow a subject that is very dear to his heart, that of his family tree, and no record of his life would be complete without devoting a little space to the results of his researches. He traces back his ancestry through the very early settlers of Alabama, North Carolina and Virginia to Scotch and French-Huguenot origin, and has one of the most complete family trees ever compiled. His great-great-great-grandmother was Selnia A. Watkins. His great-great-grandmother was Frances Lockett, and his great-grandmother was Selnia Jones. At one time the family of Mr. Perry had in their possession the silver plate used by the Marquis de Lafayette while in this country, but this valuable heirloom was lost when his house was destroyed by fire. He is one of the rightful heirs to a very valuable Huguenot Bible, the history of which is so interesting as to justify its insertion here:

An old Huguenot Bible, printed in 1657, is the possession of Mrs. A. S. Venable, Millersburg, Kentucky. The Bible was sent to the family of Abraham Mischeaux, a Huguenot refugee, and the first of his family who came to America, by his parents, who thought that there were no Bibles in the new settlement of America and therefore they sent this volume to their children. It is said that the Bible came originally from England. Abraham Mischeaux had married Susannah Rochette in Holland, July 13, 1692, and after a few years moved to Stafford County, Virginia, where they resided for some time. Later they took up land on the James River at the place now known as Mischeaux Ferry.

In the reign of Louis XIV, during the religious persecutions consequent to the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, lived a Huguenot by the name of Rochette in the City of Sedan. He had three daughters, and fearing that they would be forcibly taken from him and put in a Roman Catholic school he endeavored to take them secretly from France to Holland. After many difficulties, and after paying a certain amount of money every year for the privilege of being left alone, he finally succeeded in securing for them a place of safety in Amsterdam. There they were visited frequently by the father and mother. It was the second daughter, Susannah Rochette, who married Abraham Mischeaux.

The Bible received by these early seekers of a new home in a new world descended from Abraham Mischeaux to his daughter Nannie, who married Richard Woodson, of Poplar Hill in Prince Edward County, Virginia. Nannie Woodson left it to her daughter, Mrs. Agnes Watkins, wife of Francis Watkins, clerk of Prince Edward County Court. At the death of Mrs. Watkins it was given to Mrs. Martha Venable, granddaughter of Richard and Nannie Woodson, who at her death left it to her daughter, Miss Martha W. Venable, in whose possession it remained until the time of her death in 1878. It then passed to her niece, Miss Nannie W. Venable, and later was given to her stepdaughter, Sallie E. Garden on the day of her marriage, October 25, 1893, to Rev. Albert Sidney Venable.

The Bible is one of very great value and interest, both because of its age and the associations connected with it. It is expected that some day the Bible will be placed in the library of the Union Theological Seminary at Richmond, Virginia, for safe keeping.

Mr. Perry is a direct descendant of Abraham and Susannah (Rochette) Mischeaux, as follows: Nannie Woodson, Agnes Woodson, Selnia Watkins, Francis Lockett, Selnia Jones, Albert Perry, and Samuel W. Perry, who is the seventh in order of descent. Mr. Perry prizes these ancestors of honor and high character, and has instinctively ordered his life so as to be worthy of them, and to in turn set an equally stimulating example to those who come after him.

JAY WILSON RIFE, M. D. Dealing with the careers of men whose names stand out prominently in the medical profession of Wayne County, who by character and achievement have contributed to the upbuilding and prominence of their profession, the record of Dr. Jay Wilson Rife, of Kenova, is found to be worthy of attention. He has made a lasting impression upon the citizens of his community both for professional ability of a high order and for the individuality of a personal character that has added to his worth as a citizen.

Doctor Rife was born on a tributary of Twelve Pole Creek, near Wayne Court House, Wayne County, West Virginia, August 10, 1883, and is a son of Lieut. Moses and Virginia (Wilson) Rife. Moses Rife was born in Gallia County, Ohio, in 1836, and in 1855 graduated from the Gallipolis High School. He taught in the schools of his native county until 1861, when he enlisted in the Fifty-second Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, as a private, and served until one year after the close of the war between the states, during which time he was advanced to a lieutenancy. He was in the Red River Expedition, commanded by General Banks, fought at Island No. 10, at the battle of Shiloh was wounded, and late in the war was transferred to the quartermaster's department and stationed at New Orleans, Louisiana. On receiving his honorable discharge, in 1866, he resumed his teaching in Gallia County, Ohio, where he remained until 1870, when he removed to Wayne County, West Virginia, and became a pioneer educator. There he donated the land on which was built the Rife School, named in his honor, in which he taught for fully fifteen years, in addition to teaching in a number of private schools. Many of the business and professional men of that part of West Virginia owe their scholastic training to this capable and patient pioneer educator. He was a member of the Board of Examiners of the county, and, always a close student, was the possessor of a fine library. In politics he was a republican. In his death, which occurred in 1889, his community lost one of its valuable and dependable citizens. His wife was a daughter of James Wilson, a pioneer timber man of Wayne County, the Wilson family having come originally from near Staunton, Virginia, being related to the family of ex-President Woodrow Wilson. Virginia Wilson was much younger than her husband, and was born near Fort Gay, where she attended the school taught by her future husband. Her home is now in Wayne County, where she occupies a pleasant residence at Wayne Court House. There were three children in the family: Hon. Oscar J., a sketch of whose career appears elsewhere in this work; Jay Wilson, of this review; and Louay, the wife of J. M. Thompson, an oil and gas well driller of Wayne Court House.

Jay Wilson Rife received his early education in the country schools of Wayne County and at Oak View Academy, taught by T. B. McClure, from which he was graduated at the age of nineteen years. He taught four rural schools in Wayne County, and his earnings materially assisted in gaining his medical education. After some preparation he entered the medical department of the University of Louisville, from which he graduated in 1904, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and at that time commenced practice at Wayne Court House. He remained in that community until 1912, when he came to Kenova. Doctor Rife has built up a large and representative practice in his chosen calling and has gained the unqualified confidence of the people in his skill and reliability. A close student of his profession, in 1921 he took post-graduate work in the New York Post-Graduate Medical School, and is a member of the Wayne County Medical Society, the West Virginia Medical Society and the American Medical Association. In 1911 he was elected county health officer, a position which he still retains, and during the period of the World War served as medical examiner for the draft board at Kenova.

In 1906 Doctor Rife married Grace Thompson, daughter of H. W. Thompson, and who was born on a farm in Wayne County, March 13, 1885. They have five children: Hubert, Howard, Sherrill, Wallace and Helen. Doctor and Mrs. Rife are members of the Baptist Church, in which he serves as a deacon. He is a member of Wayne Blue Lodge, Wayne Chapter, Huntington Commandery and Beni-Kedem Shrines, Charleston, of the Masonic Order, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias at Wayne, of the latter of which he is a past chancellor commander. In his political allegiance he is a democrat.

BENJAMIN HARVEY PALMER, district engineer in charge of road construction in Marion County, is a young official whose technical ability and progressive ideas are enabling him to render a specially valuable service to this county, and he is one of the popular citizens of Fairmont, the county seat. Mr. Palmer was born at Salamanca, Cattaraugus County, New York, on the 27th of January, 1892, and is a son of Olin H. and Flora (Rice) Palmer, both likewise natives of the Empire State, to which the original representatives of the respective families came from New England, where the record of each traces back to the Colonial period of our national history, members of the Palmer family having come from England on the ship Mayflower, and representative of the Rice family having come to New England prior to the War of the Revolution, in which one of its members served as a patriot soldier, he having been an ancestor of the subject of the review. William Rice, maternal grandfather of Benjamin H. Palmer, was a gallant soldier of the Union in the Civil War, and he died in the City of New Orleans, Louisiana, while still in military service. In the Civil War period Benjamin F. Palmer, paternal grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was operating in the gold fields of California. Olin H. Palmer was for many years a traveling commercial salesman, and he maintained his home at Salamanca, New York, until 1909, when he removed with his family to Meadville, Pennsylvania, a point more conveniently accessible to the territory through which he traveled. He served four years as sheriff of Crawford County, Pennsylvania, and is now deputy sheriff at Meadville, the state. He still gives a general supervision to his valuable farm interests in Cattaraugus County, New York.

Benjamin H. Palmer gained his early education in the public schools of his native city and was seventeen years of age at the time of the family removal to Meadville, Pennsylvania. For two years thereafter, 1909-11, he was a student in Allegheny College, and the following year 1911 was in the employ of the Pennsylvania State Highway Commission. In 1912 he resumed his studies in Allegheny College, and in 1914 he was graduated from this institution, with the degree of Bachelor of Science. Thereafter he continued in the service of the Pennsylvania State Highway Commission until May, 1917, when he entered the office of J. R. Wilson, who was then district road engineer of Marion County, West Virginia. In 1918 Mr. Palmer became assistant road engineer of Harrison County this state, with headquarters at Clarksburg, and in August 1918, he entered the Government war service as draftsman in the photographic section of the aviation service. He was first stationed at Madison Barracks, New York, and was thence assigned to service at Rochester, that state, where he was engaged at the time of the signing of the historic armistice that brought the war to a close. After receiving his honorable discharge he returned to Clarksburg, West Virginia, where he remained until the spring of the following year, when the county board of Marion County appointed him to his present office, that of district road engineer in charge of all county road and highway work.

Mr. Palmer is a certified member of the American Association of Engineers, of the U. S. A. Aerial Photographers Association and Society of American Military Engineers. He is also affiliated with the Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Theta Nu Epsilon college fraternities, and he and his wife hold membership in the Baptist Church.

The year 1917 recorded the marriage of Mr. Palmer and Miss Mabel Van Slyke, daughter of Eugene Van Slyke, of Meadville, Pennsylvania, and the one child of this union is a fine little son, Benjamin Harvey, Jr., born February 13, 1920.

ETLEY PRICE SMITH, M. D., who is engaged in the practice of his profession at Fairmont, Marion County, has here served since 1914 as surgeon for the Jamison Coal Company, and he is also a valued member of the surgical staff of Cook Hospital in this city. After his graduation from the high school Doctor Smith was for two years a student in the University of West Virginia, and he then entered the historic old Jefferson Medical College in the City of Philadelphia, in which he was graduated in 1909. After thus receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine he spent two years in service at the Philadelphia General Hospital, in which he gained valuable clinical experience. Thereafter he was engaged in general practice at Barackville, Marion County, West Virginia, until the nation entered the World War, when he promptly enlisted for service in the Medical Corps of the United States Army. On the 1st of May, 1918, he received his commission as captain in the Medical Corps, and he was assigned to duty at the Government Arsenal Hospital near Raritan, New ney, where he continued his able and patriotic service until he received his honorable discharge January 1, 1919. He then established himself in practice at Fairmont, where his unequivocal success has attended his professional labors. The doctor is a member of the Marion County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity and the Knights of Pythias. Doctor Smith was born in Monroe County, West Virginia, September 2, 1884, a son of Wilson G. and Alice (Shanklin) Smith, both likewise natives of Monroe County. His father now resides at Kenova, Wayne County, where he is a successful contractor. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias, and holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as did also his wife, who died in 1911. William Smith, paternal grandfather of the doctor, was one of the pioneer settlers and influential citizens of what is now Monroe County, West Virginia, and he met his death at the battle of Bull Run while in service as a loyal member of the Union in the Civil war. Joseph Shanklin, paternal grandfather of Doctor Smith, was a native of Virginia, and he died of typhoid fever while serving as a federate soldier in the Civil war. Doctor Smith married Miss Jeanette Robinson, daughter of James C. Robinson, a representative of the old and honored family of that name in Marion County. Doctor and Mrs. Smith have two sons, Etley Price, Jr., and James E. Price.

GEORGE PETER COMUNTZIS is one of the successful business men and enterprising citizens of Morgantown, senior member of the firm of Comuntzis Brothers.

He was born February 16, 1885, in a suburb of Sparta, Greece, son of Peter and Demetroula (Costines) Comuntzis, natives of the same locality. His father died there in 1895 and his mother in 1916.

George Peter Comuntzis as a boy worked on his father's farm and attended school until he was sixteen. In 1901 he came to the United States, landing at New York June 1, 1901.

He at once went to Philadelphia, where he joined his older brother, Thomas, in business there. A year later he had opened a confectionery store at Cumberland, Maryland, and George P. accompanied him and remained in his employ at Cumberland, where his brother Thomas remained permanent resident. In August, 1904, George, Thomas and their cousin, Nicholas Comuntzis, who died in July, 1909, bought a store in partnership at Fairmont, West Virginia. The three partners in 1906 opened an additional store at Wheeling. The business at Fairmont was conducted by George P. Comuntzis. The partnership was dissolved in 1909, and at that time George P. and his younger brother, John, established the firm of Comuntzis Brothers, removed their Wheeling store to Morgantown. They started on a modest scale at 367 High Street, and on the day after Thanksgiving of 1911 they opened in a larger and better quarters just across the street at 368 High Street. Here they carried a stock of confectionery and candy, and the business has had a rapid growth and development. In 1915 they put in their own ice plant, and machinery of all kinds for the making of ice cream and ices. They also made a feature of light scones. Today Comuntzis Brothers own the largest and most elaborate establishment of the kind in Morgantown, and one of the best in the state. Their service now includes a complete bill of fare in addition to light lunches, and they also have an extensive trade with surrounding towns in their manufactured product.

In July, 1919, the brothers bought the A. J. Hare residence property on High Street, where they plan the erection of a large business and apartment block. January 10, 1921, they also bought the Hershman property on High Street, opposite their store, including a ninety-five-foot lot. February 23, 1921, another real estate transaction was recorded when they purchased thirty feet of land adjoining this property from the W. C. T. U. Since the foundation has been laid to support a nine-story building, beginning with a one-story unit to accommodate a theater and two large storerooms.

George P. Comuntzis is a member and former director of the Chamber of Commerce. He belongs to the Rotary Club, the Elks and Knights of Pythias. At Butler, Pennsylvania, October 11, 1907, he attended the funeral of his sister, and on the 2d of November following sailed for his old home in Greece, reaching there December 12th. On April 12, 1908, he married Angelina Caravros, who was born in the same community as her husband in 1891, daughter of Constantine Caravros. Mr. Comuntzis returned to America with his bride. Five children were born to their marriage: Demetroula, born May 31, 1909; a daughter who died in infancy; Peter George, born December 27, 1911; Gus, born November 5, 1919; and Chris, born July 8, 1921.

John Peter Comuntzis, younger member of the firm Comuntzis Brothers, was born in Greece in 1887. He came to the United States in 1902, joining his brothers at Cumberland, Maryland, and has been actively associated with George Comuntzis throughout the founding, development and prosperity of the business in Morgantown. In 1914 he returned to Greece and served a brief time in the Greek army. He married in 1917 Miss Anna Psychoyia. Their two children are Peter John, born in 1919, and Demetroula, born in 1920.

JOHN MILTON KISNER, president of the John M. Kisner & Brother Lumber Company, lumber dealers and general building contractors at Fairmont, has had a varied but almost uniformly successful career since he left the home farm thirty years ago. He has been a coal miner, a carpenter and a building contractor, and the business of which he is now the active head has had a successful existence for nearly fifteen years.

He was born on a farm in Preston County, West Virginia, October 5, 1872, son of George W. and Ann (Turner) Kisner, natives of Monongalia County. The father was born in 1836 and died at a hospital in Richmond, Virginia, in 1917, while the mother was born in 1841 and died in 1912. George W. Kisner was a farmer and carpenter, and finally removed his family to the vicinity of Independence, West Virginia. He was a life-long member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and a republican.

John M. Kisner grew up on a farm, attended the Fairfax School in Preston County, and when he was eighteen he left home and went west as far as Terre Haute, Indiana, where he spent about a year working at different things. Returning to West Virginia, he worked at the coal mines at Monongah in Marion County, and spent some four years in mining at different points.

His preparation for the building business began in 1898, when he started to learn the carpenter's trade. About four years later he was made superintendent for a contracting firm at Fairmont. In 1908 he began constructing and building on his own account, and for about four years was in the contracting and lumber business with his brother Clark W., under the firm of John M. Kisner & Brother. Three years later the business was incorporated as John M. Kisner & Brother Lumber Company.

The character of work done by this firm is revealed in a few of the contracts handled in recent years. They put up the First Presbyterian Church, one of the finest church buildings in Fairmont, erected the high school at Monongah, and are just completing the East Side High School and all the three ward schools on the East Side of Fairmont, and the North View High School at Clarksburg and the Raymond Flats and Coleman Building in that city. They built 100 houses for the Consolidation Coal Company at Vanleer, Kentucky, erected most of the town of Ida May, West Virginia, for the same company, and most of the buildings at Rivesville, West Virginia, for the Monongahela Traction Company.

Mr. Kisner was one of the organizers and has since been a director of the Fairmont Brick Company, and he helped organize the East Side Building & Loan Company, of which he is a director and second vice president. With all these business interests he finds time to associate himself with other business men and citizens in promoting their common interests. He has been identified for a number of years as vice president and director of the Fairmont Business Men's Association, and is a director of the Fairmont Chamber of Commerce. He is affiliated with Lodge No. 15 of the Knights of Pythias at Watson, is a member of the Rotary Club and the Presbyterian Church.

February 2, 1899, Mr. Kisner married Mary S. Strauser. She was born near Philadelphia, daughter of Edward and Sarah Strauser, who came from Pennsylvania and located near Charleroi, where her father died. Mr. and Mrs. Kisner have three children. Ora Leona, born in June, 1901, is a graduate of the Fairmont High School and completed her education in the Fairmont State Normal School and the Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburgh, spending a year in each school, and is now at the University of West Virginia. The second daughter, Laura Louise, was born in February, 1906, and is a student in the Fairmont High School. The son, George Edward, was born in February, 1909.

JESSE DANIEL WILSON has given efficient service as assistant postmaster of the City of Fairmont, Marion County, since 1917, and was acting postmaster from 1920 until the appointment of the new incumbent, John S. Scott, in October, 1921. He was born on the old family homestead farm in Clay District, Monongalia County, this state, June 15, 1887, and is a son of John Pinckney Wilson and Dora B. (Toothman) Wilson. On the same farm John P. Wilson was born October 1, 1862, his father, Jesse Wilson, having there settled in the pioneer days. John P. Wilson continued to be actively identified with farm enterprise in his native county until November, 1921, when he removed to Fairview, Marion County, where he is living retired, save for the general supervision which he continued to give to his valuable farm property. His wife was born at Gray's Flats, Marion County, February 27, 1864, a daughter of Daniel and Rachel Toothman, the former of whom is still living, at the patriarchal age of more than ninety years.

Jesse D. Wilson was reared on the farm and was given the advantages of the public schools of his native county. He has been continuously connected with the United States mail service since 1908, in which year he became a carrier on one of the rural routes out from the Fairview post office. In 1914 he was appointed postmaster at Fairview, and April 1, 1917, he became assistant postmaster at Fairmont, the county seat. December 1, 1920, he was appointed acting postmaster, and he continued his service as such until the new postmaster was appointed. His long service has gained to him a wide acquaintanceship in Marion County, where his circle of friends is exceptionally wide and where he has made an admirable record in connection with mail affairs. He is a member of the Board of Trustees of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the church is now (1921) erecting one of the finest church edifices in the city. Mr. Wilson is affiliated with Fairmont Lodge No. 9, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and in the Scottish Rite Lodge of Perfection at Clarksburg he has received the fourteenth degree. He is a member also of the Modern Woodmen of America.

July 4, 1908, recorded the marriage of Mr. Wilson and Miss Stella L. Busch, who was born in Gilmer County, this state, September 8, 1891. They have two children: Helen Pearl, born March 14, 1909, and William Ralph, born April 9, 1911.

LUTHER COCHRAN DAVIS, A. B., M. D., is one of the representative physicians of the younger generation in Marion County, where he is engaged in practice at Fairmont, the county seat. He is a native of the old Keystone State, but on the maternal side is a scion of one of the prominent and influential families early established in what is now West Virginia. His maternal grandfather, Nathaniel Cochran, of Revolutionary ancestry, was a member of Mather's battery of artillery in the Union Army during the Civil war, and thereafter was twice elected mayor of Fairmont, West Virginia, as a republican.

Doctor Davis was born in the City of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, November 15, 1894, and is a son of John L. and Martha (Cochran) Davis. The doctor's mother is a resident of Fairmont, West Virginia, her native city.

In 1912 Doctor Davis was graduated from the Fairmont High School, and thereafter he was for two years, 1912-14, a student in the University of Wisconsin, where he gave special attention to the study of chemistry. In 1914 he entered the University of Missouri, in which he took a special course in bacteriology under Rommell, from which he received the degree of Bachelor of Science in 1916. Thereafter he served as assistant instructor in bacteriology in this university until 1918, and he then matriculated in the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, in which he was graduated as a member of the class of 1920, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. In that year and a portion of 1921 he served as an interne in the Memorial Hospital at Philadelphia, and at the same time did research work in bacteriology under Doctor Kolmer. He has since become well established in practice at Fairmont, and his ability and personal popularity assure him of cumulative success and prestige in his profession. He is a member of the Marion County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. The doctor is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and with the Alpha Iota Sigma (chemical) and the Alpha Kappa Kappa (medical) college fraternities.

His son, William W., was born in Rockingham County, April 8, 1800, and died at Palatine, now Fairmont, West Virginia, January 17, 1882. Of the children of this union Newton J., father of the subject of this sketch, was born in the present Preston County, West Virginia, March 18, 1844, and died at Fairmont, February 2, 1882. For eight years thereafter he was here engaged in the retail flour and feed business. He served as city elector in 1905-7, and for ten years thereafter was secretary of the Fairmont Fair Association. HUGH DONOVAN, JR. Through a career bristling with difficulties and obstacles to be overcome Hugh Donovan, Jr., is achieved that secure position in affairs represented in the ownership of a prosperous industry at Parkersburg, tended interests in other localities, and the appreciation of all citizens and friends who know the essential facts of his life.

Mr. Donovan was born May 27, 1872, son of Hugh and Elizabeth (Gill) Donovan, the former a native of Cork and the latter of Dublin, Ireland. Hugh Donovan, Sr., came to the United States at the close of the Civil war. He was a silversmith by trade, and to that industry he devoted practically all his active years. He worked in New York, at Erie and Meadville in Western Texas, operated a boiler shop or a time at St. Petersburg, Pennsylvania, and later at denburg, that state. As an expert boilermaker he has allowed his industry largely in the oil fields, manufacturing materials for special use in the oil industry. He is now in an eightieth year, hale and hearty, and an honored resident of Parkersburg. He was born April 26, 1842.

One of two children, Hugh Donovan, Jr., grew up in the home of his industrious parents, but since he was ten years of age he has had a working knowledge and experience in the trade of boiler making. Just before attaining his seventeenth birthday he bought his father's shop at Edenburg. He moved his business in 1900 to Cairo, West Virginia, where he continued boiler making and repairing, and in 1910 came to Parkersburg. In Parkersburg he has gained the full fruits of his industrial experience. In 1912 he doubled his floor space, again doubled it in 1914, and in 1919 erected new plant, with 40,000 feet of floor space. This industry, known as the Donovan Boiler Works, furnishes employment at normal times to about 100 hands. It is a specialty shop, manufacturing tanks and boilers exclusively for the oil industry.

With the close association thus gained with the oil industry Mr. Donovan has been interested in oil production since 1907. He is now owner of some fifty producing wells, chiefly in Oklahoma. While these items represent really big achievements, Mr. Donovan did not realize success until in comparatively recent years. He was a laborer with his hands, and had to solve countless problems involved in the material conditions of existence. He was still comparatively poor when he moved to Parkersburg. He had the experience and the resourcefulness of a man of courage, willing to venture to carry out plans that he believed sound. His successes do not represent altogether individual or personal achievement. His domestic environment has favored him. In hardship and in prosperity his life's companion has borne more than her share of duties and responsibilities, uncomplainingly and with a smile on her lips. Therefore her life has been fully as successful as that of Mr. Donovan.

Mrs. Donovan's maiden name was Harriet Maud Peters. They were married June 12, 1899. Their two children are Robert and Josephine. Robert is a graduate of the Culver Military Academy of Indiana, and is now a student in the Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburgh. The daughter, Josephine, is pursuing a college preparatory course at the Mary Baldwin Seminary at Staunton, Virginia.

Mr. Donovan was ready with his personal abilities and sources to cooperate with the community of Parkersburg in carrying out all the campaigns during the World war. He is an independent in politics, a Catholic, a member of the Elks Club, the Country Club, Blennerhassett Club, Rotary Club and Chamber of Commerce.

FLOYD JUDSON PATTON of the Patton Coal Company at Fairmont, is a railroad man by early training and for a number of years has enjoyed the special confidence of the oil interests of the state. During a portion of the World war he handled the duties of fuel commissioner at Fairmont.

He was born at Grafton in Taylor County, West Virginia, September 22, 1876, son of Milton M. and Emily Elizabeth (LaGrange) Patton. The father was born in Ritchie County, this state, in 1846, and died in 1917. For many years he was a passenger conductor on the Baltimore & Ohio between Grafton and Parkersburg. His wife, Emily LaGrange, was born in Wood County, West Virginia, and is now living, in her seventy-fifth year, at Parkersburg.

Graduation from the Grafton High School in 1894 was followed by a business college course, and since then Floyd J. Patton has been allowed a period of about a quarter of a century in which to work out his successful business career. He became a clerk in the office of the agent of the Baltimore & Ohio at Grafton, and with increasing responsibilities he became eventually chief clerk in the office of the superintendent.

Mr. Patton entered the coal business at Grafton in 1917, operating, buying and selling. While thus engaged in 1918 he was, on the advice of coal operators, sent temporarily to Fairmont by the Government to take charge of the office of the United States fuel commissioner. Owing to a vacancy in the regular commission much confusion had resulted, and the office had temporarily ceased to function. Mr. Patton quickly restored order and continued to administer the duties of the commissioner until after the war. By that time he had determined to make Fairmont his permanent home, and as president of the Patton Coal Company has built up a successful business and has established congenial relationships as a citizen. Besides buying and selling coal the Patton Coal Company operates what is known as the Trainer Mine. Mr. Patton is interested in the production of oil, being treasurer of the States Fork Oil Company, whose premier well came in during November, 1921, with a daily production of ninety barrels. Mr. Patton is also president of the Fairmont Company and is a member of the Board of Directors of the Fairmont State Bank.

He is a member of the Fairmont Chamber of Commerce, the Country Club and the Elks and Knights of Pythias, and belongs to the Presbyterian Church. He married Miss Gladys May Jackson, a native of Fairmont. They have two sons, Floyd Jackson, born in 1911, and William Milton, born in 1919.

CURTIS EDGAR AMOS. The technical ability and sterling personal characteristics that make for maximum success in the legal profession have been exemplified in the career of Mr. Amos, who is engaged in the practice of law at Fairmont, judicial center of Marion County, and his achievement has already marked him as one of the representative members of the bar of his native city and county. Mr. Amos was born at Fairmont on the 28th of June, 1887, and is a son of Elias S. and Rhoda Annis (Parker) Amos, adequate data concerning the family being given on other pages of this volume, in the personal sketch of another son, Frank R.

After having profited fully by the advantages of the public schools of Fairmont, Curtis E. Amos here entered the West Virginia State Normal School, and in this institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1908. In preparation for his chosen profession he entered the law department of the University of West Virginia, and upon his graduation in 1913 his reception of the degree of Bachelor of Laws was virtually coincident with his admission to the bar of his native state. He forthwith opened an office at Fairmont, and his ability and personal popularity made his professional novitiate of short duration. Here he has continued in successful general practice to the present time, save for the interval of his patriotic service in connection with the nation's military activities incidental to the great World war. On the 4th of March, 1918, Mr. Amos was mustered into the United States Army, and was sent to Camp Greenleaf, Georgia, in charge of a squad of fourteen other Fairmont "rookies" assigned to the same camp. At this camp Mr. Amos became a member of the Depot Brigade, and on the 26th of the same month he was transferred to Camp Upton, New York, and assigned to the Seventy-seventh Division, with which, two weeks later, he sailed for the stage of active conflict. With his command he landed at Brest, France, and there he was assigned to duty in the medical supply department of his division. In this connection he engaged in the establishing of medical supply stations in the Baccarat, Vesle, Oise, Aisne, and Meuse-Argonne sectors, and he was in active service in the last mentioned sector at the time of the signing of the now historic armistice. He had charge of the advance medical supply stations of the Seventy-seventh Division, and on the day of the signing of the armistice he visited three different stations. On the 13th of June, 1918, he was given the rank of sergeant, and in the following November he was promoted to the office of sergeant, first class. Upon his return to his native land he was mustered out and received his honorable discharge at Camp Meade, Maryland, May 28, 1919. He then resumed his law practice at Fairmont, where he became senior member of the firm of Amos & Amos, this alliance continuing until the 1st of January, 1921, when his brother Frank R., the junior member of the firm, retired to assume his official duties as prosecuting attorney of Marion County, an office to which he had been elected in the preceding November.

Mr. Amos is known as a vigorous and resourceful trial lawyer and well equipped counselor, is a member of the Marion County Bar Association and the West Virginia Bar Association, and he is affiliated with the American Legion, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

A. GLENN SPRINGER, who is now serving as county assessor of Marion County, was engaged in the retail grocery business in the City of Fairmont at the time when the nation became involved in the World war, and he promptly subordinated all personal interests to the call of patriotism, sold his business and entered the military service of his country, as will be more specifically noted in a later paragraph.

Mr. Springer is a native of Marion County, his birth having occurred on the old Swearingen homestead farm in Union District, on the 14th of February, 1887. He is a son of William F. and Viola (Swearingen) Springer, both likewise natives of Marion County, where both families have pioneer distinction, Mrs. Springer having been born on the same farm as was her son A. Glenn, of this sketch, her father, William Swearingen, having been one of the substantial farmers and representative citizens of the county. William F. Springer was born in 1857 and passed his entire life in Marion County, he having been but thirty-six years of age at the time of his tragic death. He was killed in an accident.

A. Glenn Springer was reared on the home farm, and he supplemented the discipline of the public schools by attending Broadus College at Philippi, this state. After leaving college he took a position as clerk in a general store at Fairmont, and later he was in the United States mail service four years. He then, in 1916, engaged in the retail grocery business at Fairmont, and he had built up a prosperous enterprise when he closed out his business to enlist, in June, 1918, in the Government aviation service in connection with World war preparations. He was sent to Camp Morris, Virginia, where he continued in training in the aviation field until after the signing of the armistice which brought the war to a close, he having received his honorable discharge in February, 1919. He then returned to Fairmont, where he established himself in the feed business, in which he continued until January 1, 1921, when he disposed of the same and assumed his official duties as county assessor, to which important office he had been elected in the preceding November. In the primary election he had three good opponents for nomination by his party, and he was nominated by a fair margin, the ensuing general election giving him a majority of more than 2,500 votes over his democratic opponent. Mr. Springer is affiliated with the local lodge of Knights of Pythias, and he and his wife are active members of the Baptist Church in their home city of Fairmont.

March 29, 1918, recorded the marriage of Mr. Springer and Miss Nellie Raikes, who was born at Holly Grove, Upshur County, a daughter of John and Cordelia Raikes.

Mr. and Mrs. Springer have a winsome little daughter, Joan Irene, who was born April 15, 1921.

JAMES D. CHARLTON has been going about over Marion County in the transaction of his business affairs for more than thirty-five years, has earned an enviable reputation as a citizen, and recently he was called from the ranks of business men to public responsibility at the courthouse, and is the present sheriff.

Mr. Charlton was born at Mannington in Marion County, October 9, 1867. His father, the late Benjamin F. Charlton, is recalled as one of the high-minded lawyers and scrupulous citizens of Marion County. Judge Charlton, a son of William Charlton, was born in Washington County, Pennsylvania, in 1830, and died in 1903. As a youth he attended the old Nineveh School, one of the pioneer institutions of higher education in Washington County, and afterwards became a school teacher. It was his reputation as an able school man that caused the people of the Mannington District in Marion County, West Virginia, to secure his services, and he taught school at Mannington until he was elected a member of the West Virginia Legislature, and attended the sessions of the Legislature at Wheeling, the state capital. In the meantime he studied law, was admitted to practice and for many years enjoyed a large clientage at Fairmont. He was elected and for six years served as judge of the Intermediate Court of Marion County. After his retirement from the bench he continued his private practice until his death. He was an earnest Christian, was ordained a local minister of the Methodist Conference, and officiated as such for many years. Judge Charlton married Elizabeth Wallace, who was born in Paw Paw District of Marion County in 1839, and is still living, at the age of eighty-two. Her father, Jars Wallace, came to this part of West Virginia from Maryland.

Sheriff Charlton was educated in the public schools at Mannington. His first independent undertaking in life was as a buyer of cattle and other livestock. He then conducted a livery business and became a contractor for heavy hauling at Mannington. For a number of years Mr. Charlton has had some well placed investments in oil and coal properties.

His ability in public office was first demonstrated in the home community at Mannington, where he served several years as a member of the council and for two years as mayor. He was for eight years deputy sheriff, at first under M. A. Jolliff and then under H. R. Furbee. In 1919 he received the republican nomination for sheriff, was elected in November, and began his duties January 1, 1920. Sheriff Charlton is a member of Mannington Lodge No. 10, Elks and the Methodist Episcopal Church.

He married Miss Alice Critchfield, a native of Mannington District and daughter of the late David Critchfield. Mr. and Mrs. Charlton became the parents of ten children: Benjamin Franklin, deceased; Mabel; Catherine, wife of Arthur Smith, living at Buckhannon, West Virginia; Howard, William, Evaline, Ruth, James D., Jr., Edgar P. and Sarah Alice.

He was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, in 1837, and came to the United States in 1854. While at Baltimore he was employed in railroad construction work until the outbreak of the war. He then enlisted in the Confederate army and served as a private throughout the great American conflict. Several times he was captured, but in each instance exchanged. After the war he resumed his service with the Baltimore & Ohio Company, and gave practically all his business career to that corporation. LAWRENCE A. CATHER during the years since manhood is been active in business as a farmer, timber dealer, and a recent election is now serving as clerk of courts of Marion County.

Mr. Cather was born on a farm in Harrison County, West Virginia, June 20, 1852, son of Millard Fillmore and Mollie (Carder) Cather. This Cather family is of Scotch ancestry. There were two brothers, Jasper and Robert, who left their native Scotland during Colonial times and established themselves on the frontier in Pennsylvania. They were soldiers in the period of Indian hostilities during what is known as the French and Indian war, and their homes were burned and they were driven from Pennsylvania at that time. Both of them subsequently enlisted and served as Patriot soldiers in the Revolution. Jasper was present at the surrender of General Cornwallis at Yorktown. After the war Jasper Cather bought up a lot of army equipment and established a home in Frederick County, Virginia. He was the ancestor of Lawrence A. Cather through his son, Thomas, his grandson John, and his great-grandson, Millard Fillmore. John Taylor Cather was born in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, and was one of the pioneers of Taylor County, West Virginia, and served as a soldier in the Sixth West Virginia Regiment of Infantry during the Civil war. He married Emeline Cather.

Millard Fillmore Cather was born in Taylor County in 1854, and has spent all his active life as a farmer. He and his wife have lived in Marion County since 1907. Millard Fillmore Cather married Mollie E. Carder, who was born in Harrison County in 1854, daughter of Dr. Albert S. and Mary (Barnett) Carder. Doctor Carder was a graduate of the Louisville Medical College of Kentucky, and served as a surgeon in the Confederate Army. Millard F. Cather and his wife had three children: Lawrence A.; Wilbur E., who is a graduate with the degrees A. B. and LL. B. from West Virginia University and is now practicing law at Winchester, Virginia; and Jessie is the wife of Professor R. L. Rowe, a former director of music at West Virginia Wesleyan College, but now residing in Detroit, Michigan.

Lawrence A. Cather lived on a farm until he was about fifteen years of age. After that he attended school at Weston and was also a student in West Virginia University, but left before graduating and for about three years as a clerk in the railway mail service. Since then he has been continuously active in the timber and farming industry, also has some important real estate interests. He moved with his parents to Marion County in 1907, but in 1912 he bought some timber land in Preston County, and as busy handling this property, with home at Terra Alta, until 1916, when he returned to Fairmont. Mr. Taylor was elected clerk of the courts of Marion County in 1920, on the republican ticket, and has been in the office since January 1, 1921. He is affiliated with the Masonic Order, Knights of Pythias and Ancient Order of United Workmen.

He married Miss Elsie Dale Little, a native of Marion County, and daughter of a well known farmer of the county, Thomas J. Little. Mrs. Cather is a graduate of the Fairmont Normal School and for several years was a popular teacher in the county, until her marriage. They have two children: Mary, born September 18, 1914, and Myra Ellen, born December 12, 1916.

HARLIN REX COKELEY represents several generations of thrifty agricultural ancestors, and has qualified himself for and has done some highly successful work in the new profession of agricultural agent or adviser. He is the present agricultural agent for Monongalia County.

Mr. Cokeley was born on a farm three miles south of Harrisville, in Grant District of Ritchie County, West Virginia, June 13, 1891, son of Edmond Elijah and Margaret M. (Amos) Cokeley. Both the Cokeley and Amos families have been Americans since Colonial times. Jeremiah Cokeley came from Ireland about 1750 to Virginia. His five sons were William, Daniel, Edmond, Jeremiah and Elijah. Edmond was a Continental soldier in the Revolution. Elijah Cokeley, son of the immigrant ancestor, died in 1822. He married in 1812 Christina Crofts, who came with her parents from Germany to Virginia in 1790. In 1840 she, then a widow, with her three sons moved to Ritchie County, West Virginia, and settled near Harrisville. Her oldest son, Edmond, married Eliza Waggoner, of Maryland, and moved to Iowa. The second son, Isaac, married a daughter of John Rexroad near Harrisville and lost his life in the defense of the Union. The youngest son was Andrew Cokeley. These three brothers and their uncle, Daniel Cokeley, who came to Ritchie County about the same time, are the ancestors of all the Cokeleys in that county. Andrew Cokeley married Ann Moats, daughter of Jacob Moats, and settled on a farm near Harrisville. Their second son was Edmond Elijah Cokeley.

The Amos family is of German origin, transplanted to America near the middle of the eighteenth century. Henry Amos came into Monongalia County about 1770. He married Elizabeth Hall, of Pennsylvania, whose father came from Delaware. Henry Amos was a Virginia soldier during the Revolution. His second son, George Amos in 1816 married Idna Hawkins, member of an old English family. George Amos with three brothers was a soldier in the War of 1812. His oldest son, Henry Amos, who settled in Ritchie County, in 1848, married in 1849 Malinda Rex, of Marion County. They were the parents of J. W. Amos, who was a soldier of the Union from 1862 to 1865 in Company K of the Tenth Virginia Regiment; George Amos, who for twenty-six years was clerk of County Court and died in 1898; and Margaret M. Amos, who was the wife of E. E. Cokeley and died January 9, 1918. Edmond E. Cokeley spent his active life as a farmer and died on his place near Harrisville in January, 1918. His wife was born seven miles southeast of Harrisville in 1854. They were married October 16, 1877, and their six children were: Harlin R., of Morgantown; L. L. Cokeley, clerk of the Circuit Court of Ritchie County; Howard A., an employee of the Bureau of Fisheries at Leadville, Colorado; Wilbur Cokeley, who lives on the home farm near Harrisville; Mrs. Grace Lewis, of Grafton, West Virginia; and Margaret May, at home.

Harlin R. Cokeley attended country schools in his home district, and afterwards taught four years in district schools. While teaching he was also carrying on his studies in the State Normal School at Huntington, West Virginia, now Marshall College, where he graduated in 1913. During the following year he was business manager and also performed part of the editorial work of the Educator at Charleston. In the fall of 1914 he entered West Virginia University, and by carrying extra work received his Bachelor of Science and Agricultural Degree in 1917.

Mr. Cokeley was appointed county agent for Hardy County in 1917, and was on duty in that county until the fall of 1919, when he resigned to become county agricultural agent of Monongalia County. The success of the county agricultural agent is largely dependent upon his particular qualifications and his personal fitness for the work, since co-operation on the part of the farmers is entirely voluntary, and the agent must inspire confidence and perfect an organization preliminary to his real work. In the case of Mr. Cokeley his personal qualifications have enabled him to perform a work of far-reaching influence and value. Through the Monongalia County Farm Bureau a large proportion of the farmers do extensive cooperative buying and some cooperative marketing. He has also organized farm boys and girls into "4H" clubs, a special feature of which is the establishment of regular camps where the boys and girls spend at least a week's vacation under the direction of instructors. The period is one of practical instruction and recreation at one and the same time. He has also encouraged livestock improvement by influencing the farmers to buy and bring into the county a large number of high grade and registered cattle. In 1921 he was instrumental in inducing more than a hundred farmers of the county to plant Soja beans as an experimental crop. He has also conducted a campaign of education to secure the eradication of tuberculosis among cattle.

While a student at Marshall College Mr. Cokeley's literary society elected him as its representative in the Inter-Society Debate in the spring of 1913, and he was one of the winners. He was also assistant editor of the school Year Book at Marshall, and while at West Virginia University was assistant editor of the West Virginia Agriculturist and student assistant instructor in animal husbandry in his senior year. He is a charter member of the Kappa Sigma college fraternity at West Virginia University. He is also a member of Moorefield Lodge No. 29, F. and A. M., Kyser Chapter No. 19, R. A. M., and belongs to the University Grange. At present he is a member of the Kiwanis Club and Chamber of Commerce.

In June, 1917, Mr. Cokeley married Clara S. McMillen. She was born at Bethel, Ohio, daughter of Saul and Pauline (Fisher) McMillen. They have one son, Edmond Ross, born April 16, 1919.

E. WAYNE HENRY. The Henry family of Morgantown, West Virginia, was established in Monongalia County a short time following the close of the Revolutionary war by Frank Henry, the great-great-grandfather of the present generation.

Frank Henry was of English descent, but when the struggle came to settle the independence of the American colonies he embraced the cause of the latter and during the war that followed served as an officer of the Virginia line under General Washington. As a reward for military services he received a grant of land in Grant District, Monongalia County, where he settled, and eventually became the owner of over 1,000 acres in that neighborhood, every acre of which is owned at the present time by his heirs. He became the father of two sons.

Eli Henry, son of Frank Henry, succeeded his father as head of the family. He married a Miss Barbe, and they became the parents of twelve children, one of whom, Sylvester, efficiently carried on the farm industries in Grant District. He married Virginia Houston, a daughter of Robert Houston, and three sons were born to them: Elroy, Jesse H. and Omar C.

Jesse H. Henry, second son of Sylvester and Virginia Henry, was born May 1, 1872, on the old Henry homestead in Grant District, Monongalia County, and died at Morgantown, April 24, 1921. He began teaching school at the age of nineteen years, and taught continuously for thirteen years, or until he was elected county superintendent of the public school districts in Monongalia County in 1904, to which position he was re-elected in 1908, serving two full terms of four years each.

In 1912 Mr. Henry removed from the farm into Morgantown and took over the management of the Morgantown branch store of the W. F. Frederick Piano Company of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, which position he was filling at the time of his death. He was an active and prominent citizen, and gave largely of his time and ability to advance the welfare of the entire community. Mr. Henry was greatly interested in Christian work and was a most faithful member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, was superintendent of a Sunday school on the West Side of the city and was choir leader of Doctor Armstrong's Bible Class. But a few months before his death he had relinquished the chair of worshipful master of Morgantown Union Lodge No. 4, A. F. and A. M.; was a member of Morgantown Commandery No. 18, Knights Templar, and was a thirty-second degree member of West Virginia Consistory No. 1, Scottish Rite, and a member of Osiris Temple, Mystic Shrine. He belonged also to the Knights of Pythias, the Chamber of Commerce and the Rotary Club.

During the World War Mr. Henry was active in all patriotic movements and did his full share in every drive for funds for war purposes.

In early manhood Jesse H. Henry was united in marriage with Miss Zoe Z. Schafer, who was born in the same neighborhood in Grant District as himself, a daughter of John C. and Miranda (Hildebrand) Schafer. The father of Mr. Henry was born also in Grant District, Monongalia County, a son of Peter Schafer, who was a soldier and lost his life in the war between the states, falling at Bull Run and later dying of his wounds. The mother of Mrs. Henry was born at Opetiski, on the border line of Monongalia and Marion counties, West Virginia, a daughter of Louis and Catherine Maria (Mahoney) Hildebrand. To Jesse H. and Zoe Z. Henry two sons were born: E. Wayne and Reece Rinehart, the latter of whom is a member of the senior class in the Morgantown High School.

E. Wayne Henry was born February 13, 1896, on the old estate of his great-great-grandfather Henry, a part of which he has inherited. He was educated in the Laure Point graded schools, from which he was graduated in 1910, and in 1913 entered the high school at Morgantown and was a junior when he left school. He then became an assistant to his father in the W. F. Frederick Piano Store in 1917, and following the death of his father succeeded to the management of the business. He is a member of Morgantown Union Lodge No. 4, A. F. and A. M., and has received the chapter degrees in the York Rite, and is a Scottish Rite Mason. Mr. Henry belongs also to Monongalia Lodge No. 10, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and to Morgantown Lodge No. 411, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and to the Morgantown Kiwanis Club. Up to the present, political life has had no attraction for him, but he is an earnest and helpful private citizen and one of the valued members of the Chamber of Commerce. Like his late father, he is active in the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he values the honor to which he succeeded his father as a director of the local Chautauqua Association. The Henry family of West Virginia for generations has worthily represented the type of citizenship that Americans are proud to claim.

On January 2, 1922, Mr. Henry was united in marriage with Miss Mildred Rhodes, of Morgantown, a daughter of the late Joshua and Ola Rhodes, of Waynesburg, Pennsylvania.

BENNIE W. RUSSELL. It is perhaps natural that Monongalia County, seat of the state university, should be one of the most progressive in the state in the matter of schools and educational facilities. However, here as elsewhere much progress in this direction is dependent upon the enthusiasm and abilities of the teaching personnel. Outside of the independent districts there is probably no civil district in the county that enjoys a finer record than the Clay District, of which the district superintendent of schools is Bennie W. Russell, whose father has been a teacher and who has devoted the best years of his own life to educational work, and under his leadership Clay District has achieved some splendid results during the past seven years.

Bennie W. Russell was born near Mount Morris in Greene County, Pennsylvania, in 1874. When he was thirteen years of age his parents, L. D. and Flora (Tapp) Russell, moved to the vicinity of Morgantown. Flora Tapp was a daughter of Festus H. Tapp, who came from the vicinity

J. J. Callanan

Winchester, Virginia, to West Virginia about 1835, settling in Monongalia County, near Maidsville, where he lived until where he died at the age of seventy-six and where his daughter Flora was born. L. D. Russell and family lived near Morgantown about six years, and then returned to Pennsylvania, where he and his wife are still living. He has been in the work of the schoolroom forty years, and for years of that time he taught in West Virginia, and taught one or two terms under his son as district superintendent.

During the six years the family lived near Morgantown, Annie W. Russell attended the state university. He taught in Taylor County and later received his degree at Waynesburg College in Pennsylvania. He was principal of graded schools at Simpson, in Taylor County, at Blacksburg, served five years from 1910 as superintendent of Battelle District of Monongalia County, and for the past seven years is been superintendent of Clay District.

It will be appropriate to note some of the distinctive progress made in the district during the past seven years. When he was elected district superintendent the class of teachers numbered twenty-two. There are now thirty-six, and their qualifications are even more impressive than the increased number. When he became superintendent there was not a single teacher under him who had a college, normal or high school training, whereas now twenty-five out of the thirty-six have the equivalent of at least a high school, and some of them still better educations. Frequent teachers' institutes is one means of elevating teaching standards. Seven years ago the district had only one two-room building. At Blacksburg is a first class high school, with an eight-room building, the Daybrook High school, has four rooms, and the Pentress and Mooreville schools are conducted in two-room buildings. Superintendent Russell undoubtedly has the true abilities of a leader, and this great work to his credit is due in no small degree to the enthusiastic cooperation he has been able to create among the taxpayers and patrons of the schools. He keeps in the closest touch with individual schools and even visits individual scholars. He visits every school once a month and part of the year twice a month, and grades many of the examination papers, so that he is familiar with the work of the individual student. The pupils in the grammar grades caught the contagion of education, and most of them are eager to continue through high school and many go from high school to college or university. Mr. Russell is district club agent for the boys and girls in the agricultural program, and has awakened great interest in practical subjects appealing to country children, and there are a number of poultry and pig clubs, and their exhibits have been sent to local county and state fairs.

Mr. Russell is a member of the State Association of Teachers and the Monongahela Valley Round Table. He is affiliated with the Lodge of Masons at Morgantown, with West Virginia Consistory No. 1 of the Scottish Rite at Wheeling, and is the present noble grand of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Blacksburg.

At the age of twenty, Mr. Russell married Miss Maggie Shock, of Gilmer County, West Virginia. She died two years later, leaving a daughter, Oneita, who is a normal school graduate and doing some successful work in educational affairs. Mr. Russell married for his second wife, Laura Tennant, daughter of Perry Tennant, of Mooresville. They have one son, Bennie W., Jr., born in 1907 and now in the second year of his high school work.

JAMES THEODORE CALLANAN, in the words of an editorial that fittingly expressed some of the qualities and sources of the great esteem in which he was held, "was a man among men, and in his death Parkersburg and the community in which he lived suffers an almost irreparable loss. The loss is felt the more in view of the fact that the hand of death reached out and touched him suddenly and when he was in the very prime of life, a time when it would have been possible for him to do and serve even more than he had in the past. Kind, manly, big-hearted, generous, he was respected and loved by all to a fault. 'Jim' Callanan was a man who knew men and who numbered his friends by the hundred. Bluff, genial and sincere in manner, he was a man who made friends easily and who held them always.

"To few men does Parkersburg owe more than to James T. Callanan. Largely through his efforts and business ability there has been given to this city one of the largest and most thriving industries. This, however, is only the smallest part of his service. Never has there been a worthy movement in which 'Jim' Callanan did not take an active part, and he never failed to do more than his full share to make it a success.

"As one of the Big Brothers of the Elks he has done much that will never be known, for he was a man that performed his good works as a pleasure rather than as a duty and who, even to his most intimate friends, did not reveal the extent of what he did to make the path a little easier for his fellows."

Mr. Callanan was born at Crossingville, Crawford County, Pennsylvania, October 29, 1863, grew up in Western Pennsylvania, had a practical business education, and as a young man became an expert in mechanical lines and for some years was in business in his native state. In 1903 he moved from Butler, Pennsylvania, to Parkersburg, and with several local men bought the Parkersburg Machine Company, whose plant was then on Second Street. Later the company bought the U. S. Engine Works at what is now Parmaco, and the entire plant was consolidated there. It was Mr. Callanan's genius in directing a mechanical industry, his executive ability, and a broad vision realized in every department that made this one of the city's largest industries. He was the active head of the business until his death, after a brief illness, on September 28, 1919. Mr. Callanan was also president of the Community Savings & Loan Company and head of the Cole Oil Company.

Business represented only one side of his large and generous nature. He worked for the welfare of the community in which he lived, and was one of the directors of the Parkersburg Board of Commerce, a member of the Parkersburg Rotary Club, and during the World war was a leader in every local campaign. Largely through his individual efforts the success of the War Camp Community Service drive was insured. Generosity was his outstanding characteristic, and he showed that quality in his business and among his employes as well as in his relations to individuals and organizations in the city. He was one of the leading workers and contributors to St. Xavier's Catholic Church, was for many years a member and a former governor of Parkersburg Lodge No. 198, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, belonged to the Maccabees and the United Commercial Travelers.

December 22, 1886, Mr. Callanan married Julia Dunn. At his death he was survived by his mother and a brother and sister at Buffalo, New York, and also by Mrs. Callanan and two sons and one daughter. The daughter is Miss Mary Callanan. The sons, James T., Jr., and Ralph F. Callanan, are progressive young business men, well qualified to carry on and continue the great industry built up by their honored father.

James T. Callanan, Jr., was born at Washington, Pennsylvania, December 22, 1887. He acquired his early education in the Pennsylvania public schools, attended the famous Tome School for Boys at Port Deposit, Maryland, and then entered his father's plant and by successive steps and with experience in nearly every department was well qualified to become president and general manager at his father's death. He is affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Rotary Club. November 23, 1911, he married Miss Laura Williamson. They have a daughter, Laura Anne.

Ralph F. Callanan, the younger son, was born in Butler, Pennsylvania, March 27, 1895, and after completing his course in the Parkersburg High School attended the Georgia School of Technology, also the University of Pittsburgh. He likewise since leaving school has been associated with the Parkersburg Machine Company, of which he is vice president.

During the World war he was a member of the Vocational Training Corps at Richmond, Virginia, but subsequently was transferred to the Field Artillery Officers Training School at Camp Zachary Taylor, Kentucky, and received his honorable discharge November 28, 1918.

WILLIAM RICKS WILSON. Indelibly connected with the history of Kenova, William Ricks Wilson has fairly won his sound position, and is at present efficiently discharging the duties of the office of city recorder, carrying on a large real estate business as the representative of the Kenova-Huntington Land Company, and handling his own extensive interests. He was born at Smithfield, Isle of Wight County, Virginia, June 7, 1877, a son of Joseph Josiah and Lucy (Adams) Wilson, the former of whom died in 1907, when forty-eight years of age. Mrs. Wilson survives her husband, and now, at the age of sixty-four, resides with her sons, a part of the time being at Kenova. Joseph Josiah Wilson was a prosperous Virginia farmer in the peanut, corn and potato region, and owned a number of houses at Smithfield. He was a consistent communicant of the Episcopal Church, with which his widow is also connected. In politics he was a strong democrat. The Wilson family has been connected with the Smithfield section of Virginia for many generations, and there the three children of Joseph Josiah Wilson and his wife were born, they being as follows: Blair P., who is extensively engaged in a real estate business at Huntington, is responsible for many additions to that city; John A., who was a Smithfield merchant, died at the age of thirty-three years; and William Ricks, who is known to his friends as "Dick."

Growing up in his native place, William Ricks Wilson attended its public schools, and when he was eighteen years old entered the employ of Langhorne & Langhorne, railroad construction contractors, and continued with that firm during the construction of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad from Whitehouse to Pikeville, Kentucky, up the Big Sandy. He was also on construction work in the Guyan Valley from Barbersville to Logan, West Virginia, and was then employed by Louis Hankins Construction Company, of the James River Division of the Virginia Railroad, from the main line to Charlottesville. Subsequently he did construction work on the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio Railroad from Jonesboro to Bristol, Tennessee. Mr. Wilson was with these concerns as general bookkeeper and paymaster, and in each case the railroads employing him were the pioneers in the territory. When he came to Kenova the town had no industrial plants, and with his experience and aptitude in pioneer work he applied himself to remedying the various drawbacks, and is largely responsible for the permanent location at this point of the present concerns which make the Kenova of today an industrial center. For some years he has been the representative here of the Kenova-Huntington Land Company. During 1919, 1920, 1921 and 1922 he has served Kenova as city recorder. Since its organization he has served the Kenova Chamber of Commerce as its secretary, and is a great believer in the effectiveness of such a body in any community.

In 1907 Mr. Wilson married Mabel Mudeman, a daughter of Georg Mudeman, of Manassas, Virginia. They have one daughter, Margaret Blair. Mrs. Wilson is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Fraternally Mr. Wilson maintains membership with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. His political convictions are in accord with the principles of the democratic party.

BENJAMIN DOLLIVER GARRETT, M. D. The service of a general medical practitioner is not confined, as a usual thing, to his professional connections with his home community, for his long years of training, varied experience and knowledge of men give him an insight into conditions which make him a valued asset, and his influence is sought in business and politics. One of the tireless members of the medical profession in Wayne County, deserving of more than passing mention, is Dr. Benjamin Dolliver Garrett of Kenova. He was born at Wayne Court House, Wayne County, West Virginia, March 29, 1876, a son of Rev. James Dolliver and Mary Helen (Staley) Garrett.

Rev. James Dolliver Garrett was born on Twelve Pole Creek, below the town of Wayne, March 22, 1845, a son of Benjamin Garrett, a veteran of the War of 1812 from North Carolina. For his services in that war Benjamin Garrett received a grant of 100 acres of land from the Government, which he located on Twelve Pole Creek, becoming one of the earliest settlers of that region, if he was the first. He took an active part in the organization of Wayne County and was spared to live into old age. Very active in politics, he was opposed to secession and became a republican. Benjamin Garrett was a man of small proportions physically, but a brave fighter with his fists, a was never vanquished.

Growing up in Twelve Pole Valley, James Dolliver Garrett there received his educational training. From a child a deeply religious turn of mind, he entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church when only nineteen years of age, and was ordained when he was twenty-one. He was a member of the Holston Conference, and preached in many congregations in Eastern Kentucky and West Virginia, of his life being spent in missionary work. His death occurred at his old home in Wayne County February 1, 1913. Prominent in Masonry, he belonged to Wayne Lodge A. F. and A. M., Wayne Chapter, and Huntington Commandery, K. T., and he also maintained membership with the Knights of Pythias. His political sentiments were in accord with the principles of the democratic party. His wife, Mrs. Mary Helen (Staley) Garrett, was also born in Wayne County, and she now makes her home at Ashlan, Kentucky. Her father, Peyton Staley, who was for many years a prominent citizen of Wayne County, died with recent years, aged ninety-six. Mr. and Mrs. Garrett have nine children, two sons and seven daughters, the sons being Doctor Garrett and John Garrett, the latter of whom is the employ of the Norfolk & Western Railroad at Port mouth, Ohio.

Doctor Garrett received his early educational training in the public schools of Wayne County, supplementing this with a course at Oak View Academy, Wayne Court House when he was twenty-three years of age, although he has been previously engaged in teaching in the public schools of his native county, in this way earning the money to continue his own studies. He taught seven schools in all and received for his work a salary of $30 a month. With a very small amount of money in 1899 he began to carry out his long-cherished plans for a professional career, and entered the medical department of the Kentucky University at Louisville, Kentucky, from which he was graduated in 1903. Immediately thereafter Doctor Garrett located at Cyrus, Wayne County, and was there engaged in a practice for thirteen years, but then came to Kenova, where he has since remained. For some years Doctor Garrett has specialized in children's diseases, and is very successful in this branch of his profession. He is pension examiner, and during the late war was actively engaged in local war work.

On April 17, 1904, Doctor Garrett married Jennie A. Thornbury, a daughter of Dr. J. H. Thornbury, of Dunlow, Wayne County. Doctor and Mrs. Garrett have two children, Mary Lois and Frances June. They belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church. Doctor Garrett is a Blue Lodge Mason, and served for six years as master of his lodge. He also belongs to Wayne Chapter, R. A. M. For some years he has been a Knight of Pythias. A democrat in politics, he is firm in his support of party candidates. Professionally he belongs to the Cabell County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society, and the American Medical Association. Very active in local matters, he is a member of the board of directors of the Kenova Chamber of Commerce.

EDWARD JOHN MEYER. A broad-minded, well-balanced man, always master of himself and knowing how to be firm and resolute, and possessing the full confidence of his associates, Edward John Meyer is a prominent figure in the business life of Kenova, where he has played an important part not only as the superintendent of the Basic Products Company, but as president of the Kenova Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Meyer was born at Sharpsburg, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, near Pittsburgh, November 7, 1874, and is a son of William and Sophie (Miller) Meyer, natives of the same county and of German descent.

William Meyer was a self-made man and successful in business way at Sharpsburg, where for a period of forty-nine years he was engaged in the dry goods trade. He is personal interests were many and demanded a full share of attention, but he also found the time to interest himself in the affairs of his community, in which he was always an active and constructive figure. He served as a member of the City Council, as burgess and as a member of the School Board, and was chief of the volunteer fire department for many years. In politics he was a republican, and his religious belief was that of the Lutheran Church, in the faith of which he died in 1916, at the age of seventy-two years. He and his worthy wife, who survives him as a resident of Sharpsburg, aged seventy-six years, were the parents of eight sons and six daughters.

The fourth in order of birth of the parents' children, Edward John Meyer, passed through the grades of the Sharpsburg schools and was then employed for a few years as a clerk in his father's dry goods store. Subsequently he turned his attention to the electrical business at Sharpsburg, being first employed by others and then engaging in business on his own account as a handler of electrical supplies. Mr. Meyer developed into a contractor along this line, a business which he followed until 1916, when he came to Kenova to take charge of the plant of the Basic Products Company, a business which has benefited greatly by his connection. Like his father, Mr. Meyer has always been interested in local affairs and since 1921 has been a member of the City Council. A meeting called by Mr. Meyer in 1921 resulted in the formation of the Kenova Chamber of Commerce, of which organization he was elected president, and continues to retain that office.

On June 16, 1897, Mr. Meyer was united in marriage with Miss Carrie Palmer, daughter of Henry Palmer, of Sharpsburg, Pennsylvania, and to this union there have been born three children: Wilbert, a graduate of the Sharpsburg High School, who took a course in engineering from the National Correspondence School, Scranton, Pennsylvania, and now holds a responsible position with the Enterprise Foundry and Machine Works at Bristol, Virginia; Carl, who is in his third year at the Ohio State University, taking a course in general business and manufacturing; and Russell, who is attending the Junior High School at Kenova. Mr. and Mrs. Meyer belong to the Presbyterian Church. He is a republican.

REUBEN OSBURN. One of the distinguishing features of Wayne County is the excellence of its public schools, this desirable condition having been brought about through the intelligent co-operation between the school board, the parents and the educators. One of the men who has long given of his best efforts and much of his time to this important work is Reuben Osburn, president of the Ceredo Independent School District, a notable American citizen who in spite of the fact that he is a bank director and holds important public offices, is not above carrying his own tinner pail, and does so without any loss of dignity or prestige.

Mr. Osburn was born at Echo, Wayne County, West Virginia, November 18, 1869, a son of John T. and Louisa (Crabtree) Osburn. John T. Osburn was born in what is now Wayne County, September 12, 1832, and died April 25, 1908. Louisa Crabtree was born near Honaker, Russell County, Virginia, April 22, 1840, and died February 21, 1915. They were married over fifty years. John T. Osburn was noted for his strength and good health. The family home was located at Echo during the entire married life of this devoted couple. He was a life-long democrat, and as a farmer he was fairly prosperous. Both he and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, with which she was connected during her lifetime. He was a Mason and belonged to Vincent Lodge No. 66, A. F. and A. M., at Fort Gay, West Virginia. There were one son and four daughters born to them, and four of these children survive, namely: Florence, who is the wife of William Ferguson, resides at Kenova, Wayne County, West Virginia; Reuben, who was the second in order of birth; Stella, who is the wife of Pharaoh Webb, lives with her husband on the old Osburn homestead at Echo; Louisa, who is the wife of Sam Smith, baggage clerk at the Union depot at Kenova, West Virginia; Virgin, who married J. H. Throgden, lived at Wayne Court House, West Virginia, and died when she was twenty-six years of age.

Reuben Osburn received his educational training in the public schools at Echo. When he was eighteen years of age he began learning the carpenter trade, at which he worked for seven years, during the latter part of that period being on construction work for the Norfolk & Western Railroad. This connection led to his becoming a brakeman on that road, which position he held for a year, when he was made fireman, and for four years he served as such on the first division out of Kenova, south. In 1901 he went on the home farm, but in 1903 resumed his railroading as engineer on the Big Sandy, East Lynn & Guyan Railroad, now the East Lynn branch of the Norfolk & Western Railroad.

With the exception of a year or two spent on the home farm Mr. Osburn has maintained his residence at Ceredo and Kenova, and he is still an engineer on the East Lynn branch of the Norfolk and Western Railroad. In 1913 he was appointed to fill out the unexpired term of Dr. J. I. Miller as mayor of Kenova, and the following year was elected mayor of that city. Mr. Osburn has also served as recorder of Wayne, and he is now a member of the chamber of commerce at Kenova. He is serving his third year as president of the Ceredo Independent School Board, and during his incumbency of this office the Ferndale grade school building and the Ceredo-Kenova High School building have been erected, the latter at a cost of $150,000. It is one of the most modern school buildings in the state, and reflects great credit on the board and the people of this district. It is located on a tract of ten acres, purchased from Col. Joseph S. Miller. Soon after the organization of the First National Bank of Kenova Mr. Osburn was placed on its directorate, and he has since remained a member of it, his connection with this institution giving it extra solidity.

In 1888 Mr. Osburn married Rachel V. Dillon, a daughter of George Paschal and Nancy A. (Booter) Dillon. Mrs. Osburn was born on Beach Fork, Wayne County, February 25, 1870. She is the only daughter in the family, but she has brothers as follows: William J. Dillon, who is engaged in a brokerage business at Huntington, West Virginia; R. C. Dillon, who is the owner of the Huntington Restaurant at Huntington, West Virginia; A. T., who is with the Chaffee Wholesale Grocery Company of Huntington. Mr. and Mrs. Osburn have four children, namely: Lucian, who is a house salesman with the Huntington Wholesale Grocery Company; Lora Bell, who is the wife of Walter Robinson, secretary and treasurer of the Harry S. Stout Coal Company of Ceredo; and Garrett and Reuben, Jr., who are both attending school. Mr. and Mrs. Osburn belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church, which he is serving as a trustee. Mr. Osburn is a both a Scottish Rite and York Rite Mason, and belongs to Kenova Lodge, Wayne Chapter, Huntington Commandery, Beni-Kedem Shrine, Rose Croix, Huntington, and Wheeling Consistory. He served as master of Crescent Lodge No. 32, at Ceredo. For many years he has maintained membership with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Local No. 511, at Portsmouth, Ohio. It is such men as Mr. Osburn who form the great backbone of this country. Performing the exacting duties of a responsible position with conscientious fidelity, he has at the same time found opportunity to render a valuable and efficient public service which has given him a claim to the gratitude of his fellow citizens, and opened the way for further advancement if he cares to take upon his capable hands added responsibilities.

CHARLES E. VAN DEVENDER, a retired lumberman residing in the City of Parkersburg, has honored his native state by his worthy life and worthy achievement, has been one of the world's productive workers and has been in the most significant sense the architect of his own fortunes, as he depended upon his own resources in acquiring higher education, even as he did in his initiation of a business career that eventually was marked by distinctive success.

Mr. Van Devender was born on a farm in the picturesque hill district of Gilmer County, West Virginia, on the 6th of October, 1848, and is a son of Henry and Mary Elizabeth (Beall) Van Devender. The father was born in Rockingham County, Virginia, a member of a family of sterling Holland Dutch lineage, that was founded in the Old Dominion State in an early day. As a young man Henry Van Devender crossed over the Allegheny Mountains and established himself as a pioneer in Gilmer County, West Virginia, in the '30s, when this state was still a part of Virginia. He reclaimed and developed one of the pioneer farms of Gilmer County, and otherwise, as a man of intelligence, energy and good judgment, did well his part in connection with the civic and material progress of that section of the state. There was solemnized his marriage to Miss Mary Elizabeth Beall, a daughter of George Beall, and they became the parents of ten children, of whom only three are living at the time of this writing, in 1921. Henry Van Devender was a strong Union man during the climacteric period of the Civil war, and was one of the very few men in Gilmer County who voted the republican ticket and thus aided in the election of President Lincoln. Mr. Van Devender, by virtue of the very conditions and influences of time and place, led an unostentatious and somewhat uneventful life, but he was true and loyal as a citizen, labored earnestly to provide well for his family and made his life count for good in all of its relations. He was venerable in years, at the time of his death, in 1874, and his wife likewise died in Gilmer County.

Charles E. Van Devender early began to assist in the work of the home farm, and remained with his parents until 1863, when, at the age of fifteen years, he went to Calhoun County, where he found employment and where he remained two years. He then went to the Burning Springs District, where the pioneer oil excitement was then at its height, and soon resumed his association with the work and management of his father's farm. In the meanwhile he gave as much time as possible to study and reading, in line with his desire to gain a better education. In the summer of 1868 he and a one-armed young man named James Taylor rented an abandoned log cabin situated in a cornfield, and while Mr. Van Devender assumed charge of the cooking in this primitive bachelor hall his companion carried the wood and did such other work as his crippled condition permitted. The two young men made this provision in order to enable them to attend a summer school conducted by Charles Preston, an earnest and efficient teacher who later became prominent and influential in connection with educational work in West Virginia. Mr. Van Devender applied himself with characteristic diligence, made good progress in his studies and finally passed the examination which gained to him a teacher's certificate. For a term of years he gave his attention to teaching during the winter terms, and by this means defrayed his expenses while he advanced his own education by attending summer schools. In 1879 he became actively identified with the lumber business, through the medium of which he gained substantial success. He continued his active association with this line of enterprise for many years, and still has interests in connection with the same, though he is now living virtually retired. In 1875 Mr. Van Devender married Miss Alice McMillan, of Roane County, and thereafter he maintained his residence and business headquarters at Elizabeth, the judicial center of Wirt County, until August, 1890, when he established his home at Parkersburg, where he has since resided.

The life of Mr. Van Devender has been one of productive application, and he has been too busy to have any desire for special political activity or for public office. He is well fortified in his opinions concerning governmental affairs, and has been signally loyal and public-spirited in his civic attitude. He is a staunch supporter of the principles of the republican party, and while, as intimated, he has had no ambition for public office, his civic loyalty and his abiding interest in educational matters led him to give specially effective service when, without solicitation or suggestion on his part, he was elected president of the Board of Education of the Parkersburg independent school district in 1914. He gave much of his time and thought to his executive work this office, promoted measures that did much to advance the standard of school work in his jurisdiction, and it was within his administration that the grounds were acquired for and the present high school building erected, this being conceded to be the finest high school in the state and equipment and work being of the best modern standard. Mr. Van Devender continued his service as president of the Board of Education until 1917, when, much to the regret of his associates on the board and that of the people of Parkersburg, he resigned the office. He has received a thirty-second degree of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite in Masonry, is affiliated with the various York Rite organizations in his home city, and has extended his Masonic affiliations by membership in the Mystic Shrine. Both he and his wife hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. They have four daughters: C. Byrd, who is the wife of Edgar Smith; Lou G., the wife of E. March; Beryl, the wife of O. L. Wells; and Frances, the wife of W. C. Bingham.

HON. OSCAR JENNINGS RIFE. While it is not always true that faithful public service meets with due appreciation and reward, there are some cases in which those who give their communities the care and attention they would bestow upon private affairs, receive appropriate honors. It is well for a community when a man has proven his worth and his ability to show material appreciation of such service as to continue such a man in office, for in this way it discharges a debt and secures for its people the services of one who has been found competent. Hon. Oscar Jennings Rife, formerly superintendent of schools of Wayne County for long period, is at present principal of schools of Kenova. He has been prominent in civic and political affairs, and is one of the best known fraternalists in the state, being grand chancellor commander of the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias.

Mr. Rife was born on his father's farm near Fort Gay, Wayne County, West Virginia, April 27, 1879, a son of Lieut. Moses and Virginia (Wilson) Rife. His mother, who was much younger than her husband, and who now resides at Wayne Court House, is a daughter of James Wilson, a pioneer timber man of this section of West Virginia, and belongs to the Wilson family of Staunton, Virginia, related to the family of Woodrow Wilson. Moses Rife was born in Gallia County, Ohio, in 1836, and at the age of nineteen years graduated from the high school at Gallipolis. He adopted the vocation of teacher, and was thus engaged until the outbreak of the war between the North and the South, when he enlisted as a private in the Fifty-sixth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and during his service which extended until 1866, or one year after the close of the war, rose to a lieutenancy. His engagements include Shiloh, Island No. 10 and the Red River expedition under General Banks, and at Shiloh he received a serious wound. During the later years of the war he was with the quartermaster's department and was stationed at New Orleans, Louisiana. Returning to Gallia County when his military service was completed, he resumed his educational labor and remained in the same locality until 1870, when he removed to Wayne County, West Virginia. A pioneer of this locality in the teaching profession, he donated the land on which was erected the Rife School, named in his honor, where he taught for about fifteen years, in addition to acting as instructor in several private schools. In 1921 Oscar J. Rife donated 100 volumes to the library of that school which still bears the same name. Many of the leading business and professional men of the locality owe their early educational training to the efficient and kindly labor of this pioneer teacher. Lieutenant Rife was a member of the board of examiners of the county, was a close and careful student, and the possessor of a large library of carefully selected books. In politics he was a republican. His death in 1889 took from his community a valuable and valued citizen. He and Mrs. Rife were the parents of three children: Oscar Jennings; Dr. Jay Wilson, a sketch of whose career appears elsewhere in this work and Louay he wife of J. M. Thompson, an oil and gas well driller of Wayne Court House.

The early educational training of Oscar J. Rife was secured under the capable tuition of his father, after which he attended other public schools in Wayne County and private normal school near Fort Gay, conducted by Wayne (Farrell) and Naaman Jackson. Later he was a student at Marshall College, Huntington, and did some work at the University of West Virginia, in addition to taking some correspondence courses. He is still a student, as at present he is taking extension work from the University of West Virginia. He taught his first school in Grant District, Wayne County, at the age of seventeen years, and has taught or attended school every year since then. After a few years in the rural districts Mr. Rife became principal of the Wayne schools, a position which he held for eight years, and in 1912 was made superintendent of schools of Wayne County, a position which he retained until 1920. He was superintendent of the Ceredo District schools in 1920 and a part of 1921, and at the present time is principal of the Kenova schools. He has also been known as a newspaper man, having been editor of the Wayne County News for eight years. Public-spirited and with a pride in his community, he has been identified with numerous civic movements, and was a member of the Good Roads Commission when $1,000,000 was appropriated in Wayne County for good roads and ninety-one miles of roads built in the county.

Mr. Rife became interested in politics so early that when he was only eighteen years of age he was making speeches during campaigns for the candidates of the democratic party. He was a member of the Electoral College from the Fifth Congressional District in 1912, when Woodrow Wilson was chosen for the presidency, and has attended congressional, district and state democratic conventions for years. In 1919 he served as clerk in the House of Delegates. Mr. Rife is a member of the Blue Lodge and Royal Arch Chapter of Masonry at Wayne. He became a Pythian in Wayne Lodge when twenty-one years of age, and after being chancellor commander of his local lodge was elected grand chancellor commander at Clarksburg, West Virginia, September 1, 1921. He is likewise an Odd Fellow, and was a member of the Grand Lodge that met at Charleston in 1905, where he made the motion which finally resulted in the building of the Odd Fellows' Home.

In 1900 Mr. Rife married Miss Mamie Wellman, daughter of J. D. Wellman. She was born near Fort Gay and for three years was a pupil in the school taught by her future husband. They have four sons and three daughters: Gemma, who is a reporter for the Herald-Dispatch, through which position she is defraying the expenses incident to her attendance at Marshall College, from which she will graduate in June, 1922; Heber, a graduate of Marshall College, class of 1921, now attending the medical school at that institution; Chester, attending the Ceredo High School; Dorothy, who is a pupil in the Kenova Junior High School; and Jefferson, Dexter and Oscar Jennings, Jr., who are attending the graded schools.

Mr. and Mrs. Rife are members of the Kenova Missionary Baptist Church, of which Mr. Rife is a member of the executive board. For ten years he was superintendent of the Sunday school at Wayne and for two years at Kenova, but resigned the latter position to take charge of the girls' class in the Sunday school.

EDWARD M. McCULLOCH, proprietor of the Men and Women's Mart, one of the modern and prosperous mercantile establishments in the City of Bluefield, Mercer County, here receives a representative supporting patronage in the sale of ready-to-wear apparel for both men and women, with a comprehensive and select stock of goods and the best of incidental service.

Mr. McCulloch was born at Hinton, Summers County, this state, January 25, 1886, and is a son of George M. and Onelia H. McCulloch. George M. McCulloch was born near McDonald's Mill, Montgomery County, Virginia, the only son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Atkins) McCulloch, he having been a child at the time of his mother's death and his father having later married Mrs. Elizabeth (Bower) Bash, widow of Peter Bash. Of the second union were born two sons, Benjamin J. and John R. Benjamin McCulloch was born in Pennsylvania and was young at the time of the family removal to Virginia, where settlement was made on a farm near the Natural Bridge. Robert H. McCulloch, a representative of this family, had acquired a land grant of 35,000 acres in recognition of his meritorious service as a patriot soldier in the War of the Revolution, and this land was situated in what is now Mercer and McDowell counties, West Virginia, in the great coal-producing district of the present day. George M. McCulloch and his two brothers, Benjamin J. and John T., became prosperous merchants at Hinton, Summers County, and in 1885 they purchased the lot where the White Pharmacy is now situated, at the corner of Princeton Avenue and Bland Street, at Bluefield, where they erected a building and opened one of the first mercantile establishments in the village that was later to become a populous and thriving city. The business of the firm of McCulloch Brothers expanded and thrived with the growth of the town, and the brothers were prominent figures in the furthering of other enterprises that contributed to civic and material development and progress in the community. George M. McCulloch was associated with J. E. Mann in establishing the first banking institution at Bluefield, and later he became cashier of the Citizens Bank. He was one of the promoters and organizers of the Flat Top Gas Company and the Georgia Lumber Company, and at the time of his death was president of the Flat Top Insurance Company. He was one of the representative business men and honored citizens of Bluefield at the time of his death, in 1919, at the age of sixty-two years, his widow being still a resident of this city. The two sons, Edward M. and George W., are associated in the ownership and conducting of the Men and Women's Mart, of which Edward M., of this sketch, is the president and George W., the secretary and treasurer. The modern and finely equipped store conducted by the two brothers has frontage on both Bland Street and Princeton Avenue. The father was affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, including the local Commandery of Knights Templars and also the Mystic Shrine, and he was a stockholder in the Bluefield Country Club.

Edward M. McCulloch was afforded the advantages of the public schools and also of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, in which he took a course in the agricultural department. As a boy he began to assist in the store of his father's firm, and he has continuously been identified with the mercantile enterprise of Bluefield, where he is well upholding the high prestige of the family name. He is an active member of the Bluefield Chamber of Commerce, is a member of the Country Club, and is affiliated with the local Blue Lodge, Chapter and Commandery of the Masonic fraternity, besides being a member of the Mystic Shrine. In the closing period of the World war he was in one of the officers' training camps.

TONY IAFOLLA has made an excellent record in connection with coal operations in the West Virginia fields and is now president of the Tony Pocahontas Coal Company, of which he was the organizer and the mine of which is situated at Mile Branch, three miles distant from Iaeger, McDowell County, and on the Iaeger & Southern branch of the Norfolk & Western Railroad.

Mr. Iafolla was born on a farm in the province of Aquila, town of San Sebastiano, Italy, at a point about thirty-five miles distant from the City of Rome, and the date of his birth was January 1, 1886. Mr. Iafolla gained his early education in the schools of his native land, but was a lad of twelve years when he accompanied family friends to the United States. His first knowledge of the English language was gained while he was serving as messenger boy in a bank conducted by one of his uncles in New York City. After a few months he found employment in construction work on the Wabash Railroad at Indian Creek, Pennsylvania, near Oil City and Franklin. In 1903 he made his appearance at Welch, judicial center of McDowell County, West Virginia, and with his modest capital he here opened a little grocery store, from which beginning he developed a large and prosperous general merchandise business, with stores at Welch, War, Canebreak and Logan. He finally acquired an interest in the Ruffin Coal Company, and assumed charge of its commissary department. He later became superintendent of the company's mine, and his mining operations have included productive enterprise in the mining district of Harlan, Kentucky, in which town he is the owner of valuable real estate, as is he also at War, West Virginia, and at Welch, this state. He is the owner of 900 acres of valuable coal land, and on this tract the Tony Pocahontas Coal Company's mine is in operation. He and his brother Samuel are associated in the conducting of a general store at Welch. The parents, Frank and Angeline Iafolia, in company with their other children, came to the United States about five years after Tony became a resident of this country.

In 1910 Mr. Iafolia married Miss Alzina Valence, who was born at Vulcan, this state. They have no children.

CHARLES B. OSMOND, the efficient office manager for the Berkeley Glass Sand Company at Berkeley Springs, Morgan County, has had a somewhat varied career and has won advancement through his own ability and well directed endeavors.

Mr. Osmond is of ancient English lineage on both the paternal and maternal sides of the family, and is himself a native of England, his birth having occurred in the City of Gloucester, in Gloucestershire, on the 29th of December, 1873.

Charles B. Osmond first attended school in the town of Ryde, Isle of Wight, and at the age of twelve years he became a teacher of the junior class, in which service he continued until he was sixteen years old, and in the meanwhile continued his own educational work, in which he made excellent advancement, with annual examinations to determine his proficiency in his various studies. In 1890 he came to the United States, and for the first two years he was employed on a farm in Southern Maryland. On his nineteenth birthday anniversary he went to the City of Baltimore, and there he found employment as bookkeeper in a commission house. Two years later he accepted a position with a tea-importing concern in that city, and this connection continued five years. Thereafter he was associated with the Dixie Oil Works until 1906, from which year until 1913 he was in the employ of the Standard Oil Company.

In February, 1914, he formed his present alliance with the Berkeley Glass Sand Company, for which he has continued as office manager at Berkeley Springs. He and his wife have gained a wide circle of friends in their home community, and both are communicants of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

In 1902 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Osmond and Miss Letitia Cowart Cox, who was born in Northumberland County, Virginia, a daughter of Octavius and Cora (Cowart) Cox. Mr. and Mrs. Osmond have two children: John Baines and Helen Hammond. The son is a graduate of the Berkeley Springs High School and is a student in the University of West Virginia, where he is taking a course in chemical engineering. Miss Helen H. Osmond is a student in the high school at Berkeley Springs.

HOWARD WESTWOOD SHOWALTER is another of the native sons of West Virginia who has here gained prominence in connection with the coal industry, in which he has made a record of successful operation, his home and business headquarters being maintained in the City of Fairmont, Marion County. He was born at Harrisville, Ritchie County, this state, April 4, 1881, and is a son of H. C. and Hattie B. (Brock) Showalter. The Showalter family has long been one of prominence and influence in what is now West Virginia, and adequate record concerning the family appears on other pages of this work, notably in the personal sketch of Emmet M. Showalter.

Howard W. Showalter gained his early education in the public schools, including those of the City of Cincinnati, Ohio, where he continued his studies two years. At the age of fifteen years he took a position in a bank in his native town, his intention being to work merely during his school vacation. But the experience thus initiated proved an end to his school work and the initiation of a successful career in connection with banking enterprise, with which he continued his active association twenty-four years. He served in turn as cashier of the Auburn Exchange Bank at Auburn, president of the First National Bank at Monongah, cashier of the Exchange Bank at Mannington; and as vice president and cashier of the First National Bank of Fairmont, which last mentioned institution he thus continued his connection until it was merged with the Fairmont National Bank in 1915. At one time Mr. Showalter had the distinction of being the youngest national bank president in the United States.

In 1915 Mr. Showalter directed his energies into the coal industry as an operator, and he is now president of the Diamond Coal Company, the Forrest Coal Company, the Westwood Coal Company and the Exchange Coal Company, all of Fairmont, with general offices in the Deveney Building.

Mr. Showalter has been loyal and specially active in civil affairs, and is at all times the apostle of progressive policies in connection with public improvements. As chairman of the good-roads committee of the Fairmont Chamber of Commerce, at the time of its reorganization in 1910, he labored early and late to further the movement for the construction of good roads, and the committee of which he was thus a member had much to do with gaining to Marion County its present excellent system of improved highways. He is a republican in political allegiance, and he and his wife are communicants of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

On the 20th of June, 1906, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Showalter and Miss Anna Sands, daughter of the late Joseph E. Sands, of Fairmont, and the three children of this union are: Howard W., Jr., born June 25, 1913; Emily Sands, born in 1916; and Joseph Sands, born in 1917.

HORACE A. MCNEER, cashier of the Guyandotte Bank of Huntington, West Virginia, has held this executive position from the time of the organization of the bank and the initiation of business, in 1922. James Murphy is president, H. E. Everett, vice president, and H. A. McNeer, cashier. This bank was opened for business July 1, 1922, in a new modern brick two-story bank building on Main Street. Among the organizers are R. L. Archer, D. I. Smith, James Murphy, H. C. Everett and other well-known men of this part of West Virginia. The capital is $100,000.

Mr. McNeer was born at Union, Monroe County, West Virginia, October 23, 1880, and is a son of James W. and Caroline (Brown) McNeer. James W. McNeer, a man of sterling character and marked business ability, was born in what is now Greenbrier County, West Virginia, and was fifty-six years of age at the time of his death, in 1906. He was a cadet in the Virginia Military Academy and as a youth was a Confederate soldier during the final six months of the Civil war. He was for years engaged in the mercantile business, at Union, Alderson and Peterstown, and then became cashier of the Bank of Union, Monroe County, where he continued his residence until his death, his widow being now a resident of Sprigg, Mingo County. He was a staunch democrat and was a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal Church, as is also his widow. Of the seven children six are living, James H., one of the sons, being cashier of the First National Bank at Pocahontas, Virginia.

After attending the public schools of his native town Horace A. McNeer pursued a course of higher study by attending the University of West Virginia. After leaving this institution he was clerk in the store conducted by his father's firm, J. W. McNeer & Company, until he assumed a clerical position in the Bank of Union. Later he was in active service with the Fayetteville National Bank and with the Flat Top National Bank, in the City of Bluefield. Thereafter he was employed four years in the offices of the Loup Collieries Company, and for the ensuing eighteen months he was associated with his brother R. M. McNeer in conducting a grocery store in the city of Huntington. He severed his connection with this enterprise in 1912, to as-

Howard W. Shaw

me the position of cashier of the First National Bank of nawalt, which is one of the staunch and well ordered financial institutions of McDowell County. Mr. McNeer has had desire to enter the arena of practical politics but is a ral supporter of the principles of the democratic party.
th he and his wife being communicants of the Protestant iscopal Church.

In 1913 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. McNeer to les Doris Stark, daughter of William Stark, of Belleville, ood County, and the three children of this union are Helen arshall, Horace A., Jr., and William Stark.

JOHN WILLIAM WEDGWOOD is one of the three inter-ted principals in an auto sales company at Welch, judicial nter of McDowell County, and is the progressive general anager of the business, in which his associates are G. A. vope and P. A. Marini. This concern has the agency e the Hudson, Essex and Chevrolet automobiles, and der the vigorous management of Mr. Wedgwood the enterprise has been developed into one of broad scope and importance.

Mr. Wedgwood was born in Brotton, Yorkshire, Eng-nd, October 25, 1873, and is a son of Joseph and Mary Nelson) Wedgwood. Joseph Wedgwood was employed in e iron mines of Yorkshire, and there his death occurred hen his son John W., of this review, was a child. The fter was ten years old when in 1888, his mother came ith her family to the United States, she now being a resident of Point Pleasant, West Virginia, near which place r second husband, Thomas Goodwin, formerly a miner, is w the owner of a well improved farm.

John W. Wedgwood gained his rudimentary education his native land and after coming to America he attended school in Fayette County, West Virginia, where the family home was first established, at Mount Carbon. When at twelve years of age he found employment in and about coal mines in Fayette County, and with the passing years e acquired intimate knowledge of the practical details of the coal-mining industry. For efficient service he won advancement in this field of enterprise, and in 1910 he became superintendent of the Glen Jean Mine in Fayette County, in the employ of the New River Collieries Company.
e later was made superintendent of the Prudence Coal company at Prudence, that county, and the New Pocahontas Coal Company at Deegans, McDowell County.

Mr. Wedgwood continued his active alliance with the coal-mining industry until 1913, when he turned his attention to the automobile business, the present partnership having been formed in that year and the concern being now one of the foremost of the kind in McDowell County. Mr.
Wedgwood is liberal and public-spirited in his civic attitude and is serving in 1921-2 as a member of the City Council of Welch. He is a trustee and also a steward of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in his home city, besides being a teacher in its Sunday school. His wife likewise is active and influential in the work of this church.
e politics he maintains an independent attitude and gives e support to men and measures meeting the approval of his judgment, irrespective of strict partisan lines.

Mr. Wedgwood married Miss Martha Burnhope, who likewise was born in England. Their acquaintanceship was ormed in West Virginia and after Miss Burnhope returned to England her future husband found it most imperative to visit his native land, their marriage having been solemnized in England. Mr. and Mrs. Wedgwood have three fine sons:
George, Arthur and William. The family home at Welch is known as a center of generous hospitality and good cheer.

WILLIAM WELCH HENRITZ, vice president and general manager of the Welch Lumber Company at Welch, judicial center of McDowell County, was born at Dublin, Pulaski County, Virginia, March 11, 1877. His father, Judge
Thomas Lynch Henritze, was born at Marion, Smith County, Virginia, February 11, 1849, and died at Middleboro, Kentucky, October 8, 1910. Judge Henritze was a son of William Henritze, who was born in the southwestern part of Virginia and who passed the greater part of his life at farmer, that state, he having been a tinsmith by trade and vocation. William Henritze was a gallant soldier of the Confederacy during the Civil war and took part in many important battles.

Judge Thomas L. Henritze depended upon his own resources in making advancement in connection with the practical affairs of life. His early education was that of the common schools, and he learned, under the direction of his father, the trade of tinsmith, which he followed until he was thirty years of age. He then read law in the office of Judge Hudson, of Dublin, Virginia, and after his admission to the bar, upon examination before Judges Fuller and Blair, he engaged in active practice and became a distinguished lawyer, his practice having been largely confined to civil cases. In later years he became actively identified with the development of coal mining. He served as the first judge of the Criminal Court of McDowell County, West Virginia, under appointment by Governor McCorkle, and he continued his service on the bench for three years.
In the years of his active practice he maintained partnership alliance with various others who attained to marked distinction in the legal profession, including Dr. Hale and Judge R. C. McClagherty, of Princeton, M. H. Haythe, Edward Cooper and Judge B. F. Keller. After his retirement from practice he was associated in the organization of a number of important coal-mining corporations, including the following named: Louisville Coal & Coke Company, Alzoma Coal & Coke Company, McDowell Coal &
Coke Company, Empire Coal & Coke Company, Crozier's Coal & Coke Company, Tidewater Coal & Coke Company, and Charleston Coal & Coke Company. In addition to his financial and executive connection with these corporations he was also one of the organizers of the Bank of Bramwell.
While residing at Bramwell, Mercer County, he served as president of the Rock District Board of Education. He was one of the three charter members of the Presbyterian Church at Welch, McDowell County, where he maintained his home a number of years. While a young man Judge Henritze was employed at his trade in the City of Chattanooga, Tennessee, and incidentally was a member of the Chattanooga Red Sox, a ball team which made an excellent record, he having been a young man of exceptional athletic ability. After leaving Chattanooga Judge Henritze lived in turn at Dublin, Virginia; Mount Airy, North Carolina, where he was editor of a newspaper for five years;
Central City, Virginia, where he was employed by the William Mahone Company in transporting freight down the New River to Glen Lyn; Pearisburg, Virginia, where he was engaged in the practice of law for some time. While a resident of Pearisburg his wife, whose maiden name was Frances Welch, died, in October, 1885. He later married Miss Louisa Fairchild, of Hammondsport, New York, and she now resides at Middleboro, Kentucky.

In 1887 Judge Henritze established his residence at Princeton, Mercer County, West Virginia and later he engaged in the practice of his profession at Bramwell, that county, whence he later removed to Welch, McDowell County, where he remained until four years prior to his death, when he removed to Middleboro, Kentucky. In the Masonic fraternity he received the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite, was a past master of a Blue Lodge in Virginia, and was a charter member of Ivanhoe Commandery No. 10 at Bramwell, West Virginia. He was a stalwart advocate of the principles of the democratic party and was influential in its councils. His first wife was a daughter of Cant. I. A. Welch, in whose honor the City of Welch, McDowell County, was named. Captain Welch was one of the historic "forty-niners" in the gold fields of California, and was an officer in the Confederate Army in the Civil war. He was born near Charleston, West Virginia, and lived for many years at St. Albans, this state. He was a member of the Virginia Legislature prior to the creation of the State of West Virginia, and also served as county judge.
He purchased most of the land now owned by the Pocahontas Fuel Company, and was one of the foremost figures in the organization of that great industrial corporation. He owned most of the land in and around the present City of Welch.

Judge and Frances (Welch) Henritze became the parents of four sons, of whom the immediate subject of this review, William W., is the eldest; Benson Price, a mechanical engineer by profession, resides at Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin; Thomas Floyd is a representative member of the bar of McDowell County and is now serving (1921-2) as postmaster at Welch, the county seat; Welch Hudson is associated with the Flannagan Coal Sales Company at Welch. Of the second marriage of Judge Henritze five children were born, and of the number three are living: Mary Helen, widow of Guy N. Forrester and resides at Middlesboro, Kentucky; Walter M. is a civil engineer and in his profession is associated with the Casey Company in the City of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; and Frederick is associated with his brother William W. in the Welch Lumber Company. Three of the sons were in the nation's military service in the World war. Welch Hudson was overseas as a member of the infantry arm of the American Expeditionary Forces. Walter M. was sent with the first American contingent of civil engineers to France, where he became identified with railway construction as a member of the famous Company H, Fifteenth Engineers, with which, in five weeks after arriving in France, he won promotion from private to first lieutenant for valiant and meritorious service. His company was surrounded by a regiment of German soldiers, over whom the gallant Americans won a victory of decisive order, though the available weapons were only pick-handles, rocks and fists. Frederick, a graduate of the Millersburg Military Institute, was sent to the Plattsburg training camp, and after being made a lieutenant became instructor of a class of 400 newly recruited soldiers at Syracuse, New York.

William W. Henritze received the advantages of Princeton Academy, St. Albans Academy (Radford, Virginia) and Roanoke College. He had intended to prepare himself for the legal profession, but when some of his father's coal ventures proved temporarily unsuccessful he left college and took a position in his father's office. Later he was for two years a clerk in a queensware store at Charlotte, North Carolina. He next became a traveling salesman for a Baltimore queensware house, and after leaving this position he was for five years in the employ of the Tug River Lumber Company at Welch. He then organized the Welch Lumber Company, which began business on a most modest scale and with somewhat meager financial resources. The business has become one of the most substantial and important of its kind in this section of West Virginia, the company having supplied the material for the construction of many of the buildings in Welch and other towns of the southern part of the state. The Welch Lumber Company was incorporated March 10, 1902, and the original headquarters were established in a shanty covered with tar paper. Mr. Henritze has been the able and progressive manager under whose direction the splendid business of the company has been developed, and he is now one of the representative business men of Welch. He is a democrat in political allegiance, is affiliated with the local Lodge and Chapter of the Masonic fraternity, Ivanhoe Commandery No. 10, Knights Templars, at Bramwell, of which his father was a charter member, and the Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston, besides which he is affiliated with the Phi Delta Theta college fraternity. He and his wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church of Welch, of which he is a trustee.

In 1907 Mr. Henritze wedded Miss Florence Ide, daughter of Prof. E. L. Ide, of Staunton, Virginia, and the two children of this union are Frances Ide and Mary Elizabeth.

CLINTON D. BREWSTER, a retired merchant and representative citizen of Welch, judicial center of McDowell County, was born in this county on the 18th of April, 1874, and is a son of Andrew Crockett Brewster and Mary (Daniels) Brewster. The father, who died in 1913, at the age of sixty-four years, was a son of Andrew Brewster, who was born in that district of Virginia that now constitutes McDowell County, West Virginia, and who, with five of his sons, was a gallant soldier of the Confederacy in the Civil war. He was long numbered among the prosperous farmers and honored and influential citizens of McDowell County, where he served as a member and president of the County Court. Both he and his wife were active members of the Christian Church.

Andrew C. Brewster was reared on the old home farm and he long held prestige as one of the vigorous and successful exponents of farm enterprise in his native county. In 1897 he removed with his family to Welch and became associated with his son Clinton D. in purchasing a small stock of goods and opening a general store, the business having been conducted under the firm name of C. D. Brewster & Company and, with its splendid expansion, having been incorporated in 1913, under the same title, Clinton D. becoming president of the corporation and his father continuing to be an interested principal in the enterprise until his death. Andrew C. Brewster was one of the honored citizens of McDowell County, and in addition to having served as county assessor he was a valued member of the City Council of Welch and finally was elected mayor, in which office he gave a most effective administration. He was one of the organizers and a director of the First National Bank of Welch, was a republican in politics, and was a zealous member of the Christian Church, as is also his widow, who still resides at Welch, she having been born in Tazewell County, Virginia. Of their four children, all sons, three are living: Robert G. is a citrus-fruit grower and also engaged in the real estate business in Florida; Dr. George W. is a representative physician at Roderfield, McDowell County; and Clinton D., of this review, is the youngest son. John D., the eldest son, was engaged in the mercantile business at Cucumber, this county, at the time of his death, when fifty years of age.

The public-school discipline of Clinton D. Brewster was supplemented by a course in the Concord State Normal School at Athens, and he made an excellent record in the pedagogic profession as a teacher in the village schools of Ashland, this county. Thereafter he was clerk in a store at Keystone, and in 1897, as previously noted, he became associated with his father in the opening of a store at Welch. He developed the business to one of most substantial and prosperous order, and continued the business until he finally sold the same to advantage. In 1918 he organized the Welch Flour & Feed Company, a wholesale concern, and he still continues president of the same. He sold his mercantile business in 1920, and he now gives the major part of his time and attention to the supervision of his fine farm near Graham, Virginia. He is a loyal supporter of the principles of the republican party, and he and his wife are members of the Christian Church.

December 12, 1902, recorded the marriage of Mr. Brewster and Miss Mary Huffon, a daughter of Charles H. Huffon, of Tazewell County, Virginia. The four children of this union are: Rita, Clinton D., Jr., and Miriam and Mildred, who are twins.

WILLIAM HENRY SOMERS, of Berkeley Springs, Morgan County, now holds the position of chief of the West Virginia Bureaus of Markets, and he has long been influential in public affairs and as a leader in the ranks of the republican party in Morgan County. He has been a member of the Republican State Central Committee and of the party's committee for his congressional district, besides which he has given timely and effective service as a member of the National River & Harbor Commission and was a member of the House of Delegates of the West Virginia Legislature, to which he was elected in November, 1916, and in which he served during the regular and extra sessions of his elective term.

Mr. Somers was born at Ellerton, Frederick County, Maryland, January 20, 1860, and at the same place his father, John Frederick Somers, was born in the year 1825, a son of John Somers, likewise a native of Maryland, where his father settled upon coming to America from Somersetshire, England. John Somers owned and operated an iron foundry at Ellerton, and there his death occurred when he was fifty-five years of age. He married Mary Leatherman, who likewise was born in Frederick County, and after the death of her husband she removed to Indiana, her death having occurred near Pendleton, that state, when she was ninety-eight years of age. They became he parents of nine children: John Frederick, John, Elias, Jacob, Aaron, Christopher, Caroline, Sarah and Cassie. John Frederick Somers gained his early education in subscription schools maintained in his native county, and there he studied medicine under the effective preceptorship of Doctor Wächter. He passed examination before the Maryland and State Board of Medical Examiners, and then initiated his practice of his profession at Ellerton, his native place. He soon came to Virginia and settled in what is now Morgan County, West Virginia. Here he continued in the practice of his profession until 1869, when he removed to Alfont, Indiana, where he was established in practice until 1878. He then returned to Morgan County, West Virginia, and established his residence at Berkeley Springs, where he built up a representative practice and where he remained until his death, in 1897. The maiden name of his wife was Catherine Smith, she having likewise been born in Frederick County, Maryland, a daughter of William and Catherine (Westinghouse) Smith. William Smith was born in England and was a young man when he came to the United States and established a private school at Wolfsville, Maryland, he having conducted this excellent school during the remainder of his active career. Mrs. Catherine (Smith) Somers was about seventy-six years of age at the time of her death. Her children were six in number: Dr. Martin Luther, eldest of the number, is engaged in the practice of medicine at Altoona, Kansas; Rev. Amos Newton Somers is a clergyman of the Unitarian Church and resides at Grafton, Massachusetts; Elsie J. was next in order of birth; Dr. Ira Clinton Somers is a representative physician and surgeon at Chanute, Kansas; William Henry, of this review, was the next in order of birth; and John Clement likewise resides at Berkeley Springs, West Virginia.

William H. Somers gained his early education in the public schools of West Virginia and Indiana, and he then entered J. C. Vincent's home school at Plainfield, New Jersey, in which institution he was graduated. His first independent business venture was as a carriage manufacturer at Luray, Virginia, where he remained five years. He then entered the employ of the Roanoke Machine Company, which corporation held a contract for remodeling railroad cars in order to accommodate them to the newly established standard gauge. After leaving this company Mr. Somers became foreman at the shops of the Ensley Car Company at Huntington, West Virginia, and he continued his association with this company until he removed to Berkeley Springs and engaged in the sale of farm implements, in which he continued five years. He was then appointed postmaster of the village, under the administration of President McKinley, and by successive reappointments he continued the incumbent of this office twelve years. For the ensuing five years he was engaged in the wholesale lumber business, and in the meanwhile he had acquired land in Morgan County and become actively identified with horticultural industry. He now has two fine orchards in this county, besides being a stockholder in two companies which have well developed orchard properties respectively in Nelson County, Virginia, and Wood County, West Virginia. Aside from his official duties as chief of the West Virginia Bureau of Markets he gives much of his attention to his orchard interests. At Berkeley Springs he is affiliated with DeFord Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and at Martinsburg he is a member of Lebanon Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M.

February 22, 1882, recorded the marriage of Mr. Somers and Miss Mary Ann Rider, who was born at Ridersville, Morgan County, this state, a daughter of Edward and Phoebe (Rockwell) Rider. Mr. and Mrs. Somers have four children. Vernon Conrad married Daisy Cross, and they have one son, Donald Benton. Mabel Loraine is the wife of O. L. Olson, a veteran of the World war, and they have three children, Oscar M., William and Mabel Loraine. Marvin Witmer married Marguerite Holton. Ethel Mae, who remains at the parental home, graduated from the local high school as a member of the class of 1921.

JOHN R. GILDERSLEEVE, president of the Beech Fork Coal Company and until recently the secretary and treasurer of the Tony Pocahontas Coal Company, is one of the successful coal producers and business men of McDowell County, with residence and headquarters in the Village of English.

Mr. Gildersleeve was born in Tazewell County, Virginia, December 29, 1878, and is a son of Gilbert Snowden Gildersleeve and Louise (George) Gildersleeve, the former of whom was born in the City of Richmond, Virginia, and the latter in Tazewell County, that state. Gilbert S. Gildersleeve was a skilled civil engineer, was graduated from Richmond College, gave two years of service as a loyal soldier of the Confederacy in the Civil war, and as a young man he taught school a few years in Washington County, Virginia. He established his residence in Tazewell County in 1868, and at Gratton, that state, his death occurred in 1919, when he was seventy-two years of age. As a civil engineer he did a large amount of important work in the coal fields of Virginia and West Virginia, from 1890 to 1910. He was the engineer in the famous controversy Sperry-Butt vs. the D. G. Sayers Estate, was employed for a term of years as engineer for the New River Pocahontas Consolidated Coal & Coke Corporation, and had charge of the work of an efficient engineering corps. He was a democrat, and both he and his wife, who likewise attained to advanced age, were members of the Presbyterian Church. Of the eight children John R., of this sketch, was the third in order of birth.

After attending the Tazewell High School John R. Gildersleeve continued his studies in the Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Blacksburg, where he specialized in mathematics and civil engineering. In 1901 he began working as a civil engineer in the coal fields, and during a period of two years in the employ of the New River Pocahontas Consolidated Coal & Coke Corporation he, like his father, has charge of the work of a corps of engineers. For sixteen years he served as county surveyor of his native county, and in this connection he became an expert in title and abstract work and an authority on the topography of that section of Virginia and also McDowell County, West Virginia. In April, 1919, he came to English, McDowell County, he having organized the Beech Fork Coal Company in 1916, and later having organized the Tony Pocahontas Coal Company. Of the former corporation, which is successful producing coal in its mines near English, he is the president, and he is agent for the Elkhorn Coal & Coke Company, the Island Creek Coal & Coke Company and the Con Coal Company. He has charge of thousands of acres of valuable coal and timber land.

Mr. Gildersleeve is a democrat and is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and the Junior Order United American Mechanics. He and his wife are zealous members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and he is district steward of the English District, in the establishing of which he was largely instrumental, even to the extent of appearing before the Holston Conference and personally guaranteeing the salary of the clergyman to be assigned to the district.

January 12, 1915, recorded the marriage of Mr. Gildersleeve and Miss Laura L. Beavers, daughter of A. D. Beavers, of English. The two children of this union are John R., Jr., and Martha Beavers.

DAVID DAVIS HATFIELD, M. D., of Yukon, McDowell County, is associated in practice with Dr. Walter A. Carr, of War, this county, of whom individual mention is made on other pages, the two having charge of medical and surgical practice in leading mining camps of this district, besides which each of them controls a large and representative general practice.

Dr. Hatfield was born at Matewan, Mingo County, West Virginia, May 21, 1883, and is a son of Ephraim and Virginia Bell (Davis) Hatfield, aged respectively sixty-seven and sixty-one years, in 1922. Ephraim Hatfield was born at Matewan, on Tug River, this state, and his wife was born at St. Joseph, Missouri. Her father, William Davis, was a pioneer producer in the gold mines at Butte, Montana, and other points in the West, and in later years was engaged in the harness business at St. Joseph, Missouri.

Ephraim Hatfield was long and actively identified with farm enterprise and the timber business, in which latter line of business he rafted timber down the Tug and Sandy rivers to the Ohio River markets. In early days he was a skilled and enthusiastic hunter, and killed many deer and other large game long before coal development had been initiated in West Virginia. His father, Valentine Hatfield, was the leader of the numerous representatives of the Hatfield family and owned large tracts of land in Mingo County, now valuable coal-producing properties. He was a democrat, was a Confederate soldier in the Civil war, and, as a man of sterling character and mature judgment, he was a guide and counselor in community affairs for many years. Ephraim and Virginia B. Hatfield became the parents of eleven children, of whom four sons and four daughters are living. The eldest son, Dr. Samuel D., was formerly a leading physician and surgeon in McDowell County, and is now a resident of Kokomo, Indiana, where he specializes in the treatment of diseases of children, he being a graduate of the medical department of the University of Louisville, Kentucky. D. V. is a representative business man at Roanoke, Virginia. Albert D. is engaged in the insurance business at English, McDowell County. All of the sons received much of their preliminary education at home, under the effective direction of their mother.

Doctor Hatfield attended school at Matewan and Williamson, and thereafter was a student in the Concord State Normal School at Athens. He taught four terms of school and proved successful in his pedagogic service. As a boy the doctor ran away from home and went to Colorado, where he found employment in the service of the Colorado Coal & Iron Company. After his return home he continued his school work, and finally entered the Kentucky School of Medicine, which is now the medical department of the University of Louisville. He was an ambitious student and made high standing in his class, his graduation and reception of the degree of Doctor of Medicine having occurred in 1908. In 1911 and 1912 he took special work in the New York Post Graduate Medical College and the New York Polytechnic, where he specialized in surgery and bacteriology. On his graduation he became associated in practice with his brother Dr. Samuel D. at Yukon, McDowell County, and later, after his brother's removal to Iaeger, this county, Dr. Walter A. Carr became the assistant and finally the professional partner of Dr. David D. Hatfield. Doctor Hatfield is a member of the McDowell County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, in which he is, in 1922, master of Berwin Lodge No. 141, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and a member of Tazewell Chapter, Royal Arch Masons. He is loyal and progressive as a citizen and is liberal in support of religious and educational work. He has been at various times interested in coal and oil production, and he is a director of the Citizens Bank at War.

December 14, 1909, recorded the marriage of Doctor Hatfield and Addie P. Philpott, daughter of George Philpott, of Virginia, and the two children of this union are Ethel Virginia and Elva Jean.

JAMES GRAINGER, general manager for the Flat Top Coal Mining Company at English, McDowell County, was born in Durham, England, December 9, 1879, a son of James Grainger, a miner in that section of England. Mr. Grainger has stated that all of his days have been school days, and that his education has been obtained in the college of practical experience. It is certain that he has absorbed much and profited by that experience, which was initiated when he became a trapper boy at one of the deep mines of his native land, from which minor post he advanced through the various grades and became familiar with all details of mining industry. At the age of twenty-six years he came to the United States and found employment in the Ohio coal fields, whence he soon came to West Virginia and took a position as a miner in the coal mines of the New River District. He there was employed one year by the firm of Whipple & Scarborough, which then advanced him from coal digger to slate boss, next fire boss and finally mine foreman. He was one of 200 men out of a total of 900 who passed examination successfully in the first examination conducted by the State of West Virginia in connection with the mining industry, and on this occasion he gained a first grade certificate as a miner. He remained in the New River District six years, and then became mine boss for the New River & Pocahontas Consolidated Coal Company at Berwin McDowell County. One year later he came to the Flat Top Coal Mining Company, and he has since been the efficient and valued general manager of the company's mines in English.

Mr. Grainger has broadened his intellectual ken by much well directed reading and study, and his fine private library contains a large collection of standard historic works, encyclopedias and general books of reference and information. He is in full accord with the institutions and customs of his adopted country, and is a loyal and progressive citizen who commands unqualified popular esteem. In the World War period he contributed his aid to the cause by seeing that coal from the mines was kept moving day and night and by contributing to and working vigorously for the Government war loans, Red Cross work, etc. In this connection it is interesting to record that he was influential in the movement that caused English to be the first town of McDowell County to "go over the top" in subscription for the Liberty and Victory loans, and in recognition of this fact the village was presented with a Victory flag. He and his wife are earnest members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at English, and he is a steward and trustee of the same.

In England was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Grainger and Miss Alice McDavmount, and they have five children: Edna, James, Charles Robinson, Jennie and Noreen.

C. FRANK WRIGHT is one of the influential figures in the business affairs of the Village of War, McDowell County where he is the cashier of the Citizens Bank. He was born at Memphis, Tennessee, August 27, 1867, and is a son of Oliver C. and Isabel (McDowell) Wright, the former of whom was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, where the Wright family home has been maintained for several generations, and the latter of whom was born near the City of Belfast, Ireland. Oliver C. Wright became a successful contractor and builder, and both he and his wife died when their son C. Frank, of this review, was an infant.

After the death of his parents C. Frank Wright was taken into the home of one of his father's sisters in Cincinnati, and there he was reared to adult age, his early education having been acquired in the public schools of the city and there supplemented by a course in the Nelson Business College, in which he was graduated in 1886. He then entered the employ of the American Book Company, publishers of school textbooks, and in addition to working in the Cincinnati offices of the company he became one of its successful traveling representatives, in which connection he visited all parts of the Union. He thus continued his services as a valued employe of this corporation until 1901, when he came to McDowell County, West Virginia, and became identified with the insurance business at Welch, the county seat. Later he served four years as deputy Circuit Court clerk for that county, and he next assumed a similar office in Mercer County, where he remained until 1914, when he resumed his former position in the office of the Circuit Court clerk of McDowell County. Later he was appointed assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Welch, in the service of which he thus continued until October, 1919, when he assumed his present executive office, that of cashier of the Citizens Bank at War, the success of which institution has been signally advanced under his efficient administration in this executive office.

Mr. Wright is a stalwart in the local ranks of the republican party and is serving, in 1921-2, as associate chairman of the Republican County Committee of McDowell County. He is affiliated with Kilwinning Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, in the City of Cincinnati, and also with a Chapter of the Royal Arch Masons in that city.

James. K. Grubb.

t Bluefield, West Virginia, he is a member of the Lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He is a member of the Congregational Church and his wife of the Presbyterian Church.

February 23, 1905, Mr. Wright wedded Miss Ina Barber, daughter of George Barber, of Pipestone, Minnesota. The new child of this union is a son, C. Frank, Jr.

JAMES KARL GRUBB, who is, in 1922, the efficient mayor of the Village of Bolivar, Jefferson County, was born in his town, on the 14th of July, 1884, and is a son of Capt. James W. Grubb, who was born on a farm in Loudoun county, Virginia, and who was a son of Hon. John Grubb, he later having represented that county in the Virginia legislature in the '40s. In this connection it is interesting to record that when this early legislator returned home from the fair old capital city of Richmond he brought with him an equestrian statue mounted on a platform and presented the same to his son James W. as a plaything. This ancient relic being now in the possession of the subject of this sketch, who places high valuation on it.

John Grubb was born near Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and it is supposed that his father likewise was born in that county, the latter having been removed to Loudoun County, Virginia, where he purchased a tract of land that was a part of the Lord Fancier grant, the deed to the property, now in the possession of James K. Grubb, of this review, showing that for this land two pounds, two shillings and a pence an acre were paid. John Grubb succeeded to the ownership of a part of this landed estate, and there he continued his activities as an agriculturist until his death. His sons Hiram and William were loyal soldiers of the Confederacy in the Civil war, and thereafter the other members of the family lost all trace of them. The sons Joseph and James W. entered the Union army, and thus showed how definitely the Civil war was fratricidal.

Capt. James W. Grubb acquired a really liberal education, and as a youth of seventeen he became a successful teacher in the schools of Virginia, one of his pupils having been John Mosely, who later became the commander of the famous Mosely Guerrillas, a band that gave effective service in the cause of the Confederacy in the war between the North and the South. Soon after the inception of the war James W. Grubb entered the Union service, as a member of Company B, Loudoun Rangers, a command that was attached to Cole's Cavalry. He won promotion to the rank of captain, took part in many engagements and continued his loyal service until the close of the war. While out with his scouts on one occasion he was captured by a force commanded by his former pupil, John Mosely, of Mosely's command, who permitted him to escape at night. At the close of the war he established his residence at Bolivar and engaged in active work as a civil engineer. There he continued his residence, an honored and influential citizen, until his death, March 5, 1895. The maiden name of his wife was Sally Neer, and she likewise was born in Loudoun County, Virginia, a daughter of George and Amelia (Derry) Neer and a representative of an old and prominent family of Virginia. The marriage of Captain Grubb was solemnized in 1864, while he was in camp with his military command, his father having secured for the bride a pass through the lines, this pass being still in the possession of the family. Mrs. Grubb passed to the life eternal on the 9th of April, 1919, her children being four in number, Helen, John H., Beulah and James K.

The public schools of Bolivar afforded James K. Grubb his preliminary education, and thereafter he continued his studies both in New York City and Norfolk, Virginia. At the age of fifteen years he began an apprenticeship to the trade of telegraphist with the Postal Telegraph Company, and two and one-half years later he became a brakeman on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. He won promotion to the position of conductor, and continued in active railway service until 1909, when he met with an accident that necessitated the amputation of his right foot. Thereafter he was engaged in the grain business at Harpers Ferry until 1917, when he sold out and became a representative of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, with which he has continued his connection to the present time, his insurance agency at Bolivar being one of the most prosperous in his native county. He is a staunch republican in politics. In 1914 he was elected recorder of Bolivar Township, and of this office he continued the incumbent until 1916, when he was elected mayor of Bolivar, a position which he has since retained through successive re-elections, which have attested the high local estimate placed upon his administration.

June 12, 1904, recorded the marriage of Mr. Grubb and Miss Agnes O'Brien, who was born at Halltown, this county, and who is a daughter of Patrick and Sally (Reid) O'Brien. Her paternal grandparents were Dennis and Margaret (Trout) O'Brien, both natives of Ireland. The Trout family, one of wealth and influence, made objection to the marriage of Margaret to the young Irishman, who could claim neither wealth nor family importance, and the result of that came was that the young couple eloped, were married and came to the United States on a sailing vessel of the type common to the period. They settled in Maryland, and there passed the remainder of their lives. Patrick O'Brien bought a farm near Halltown, West Virginia, and there remained until his death. Monsignor James M. O'Brien, his brother, is a distinguished clergyman of the Catholic Church. The names of the children of Patrick and Sally (Reid) O'Brien are here recorded: James W., Virginia, Thomas, Robert L., Edward, Minnie, Agnes, Mary and Rose. Robert L. O'Brien graduated from the Baltimore Medical College, and thereafter served as an interne in a leading hospital in Washington, D. C., where he married Avie M. Herbert, a trained nurse. He later established himself in the practice of his profession at Akron, Colorado, where he met his death in an automobile accident. His two sons were then taken into the home of his sister, Mrs. Grubb, and they are now attending the public schools of Bolivar. Mr. and Mrs. Grubb have no children of their own, and thus they take the deepest interest in their two foster-sons, Herman F. and Austin P. O'Brien.

GEORGE W. THOMPSON. From almost the beginning of consecutive history in the Ohio Valley to the present time, there have been three men named George W. Thompson, representing three consecutive generations, each of them men of more than ordinary distinction and prominence in business or in public affairs.

The first was Judge George W. Thompson, whose career is especially identified with the early history of Wheeling. He was born near Wheeling, in Ohio County, Virginia, May 14, 1806. His father was a native of County Armagh, Ireland and married Sarah Talbott, of the same county. On coming to the United States they settled in Ohio County, Virginia, and subsequently moved across the river to Belmont County, Ohio. Judge Thompson therefore, grew to manhood in the country around Wheeling, graduated in 1822 from Jefferson College of Canonsburg, Pennsylvania, read law at Saint Clairsville, Ohio, with Hon. W. P. Hubbard, one of Wheeling's greatest lawyers, and was admitted to the bar in 1826. For two years he lived at Richmond, Virginia, then practiced at Saint Clairsville, and in 1837 located at Wheeling. In 1838 he was appointed postmaster of that city by President Van Buren, and in 1844 was appointed United States district attorney for the Western District of Virginia by President Polk, filling that office four years. In 1851 he was elected to Congress, and while in his first term was chosen judge of what was then called the Superior Court, now the Circuit Court, for the Twelfth Judicial District. He resigned from Congress to go on the bench and was re-elected in 1860. A former history of Wheeling says of him: "George W. Thompson, who was the first judge elected by the people, had a long and varied career in the public service. He was past middle age and had seen many years of public service when the war came on. As a loyal Virginian he was unable to adjust himself to the forces which were evolving a new state, and being conscientiously unable to take the oath of allegiance to the restored government he was removed from office in July, 1861. In a charge to a jury during that year he gave instructions to bring in a verdict of treason against defendants refusing to comply with the mandates of the State of Virginia. During the remaining years of his life he was retired, and gave much of his time to authorship, dealing with themes of religion and philosophy. He represented Wheeling in the controversy over the location of the route of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, was a member of the Virginia-Ohio Commission to settle the jurisdiction of these states on the Ohio, and while in Congress he introduced and urged the passage of the bill, which, in opposition to the decree of the Supreme Court, declared the Wheeling suspension bridge not an obstruction to navigation." Judge Thompson died February 2, 1888. In 1832 he married Elizabeth, daughter of Daniel Steenrod, Sr., one of Wheeling's oldest and most prominent citizens. The children of Judge and Mrs. Thompson were: Anne; William P., who became a lawyer at Fairmont; George Western; Sallie; D. S.; and Lewis, who was killed in the Confederate service.

George Western Thompson, of the second generation bearing that name, had much to do with the commercial development of the Ohio Valley, and he was intimately concerned with the building of railroads and other enterprises that fortified the commercial prestige of Parkersburg. He was born at Wheeling, June 23, 1845, and had many of the intellectual gifts of his father. He completed his education in Jefferson College in Pennsylvania, and in 1865 removed to Parkersburg. For three years he was employed as a clerk, and in 1868 he and H. C. Jackson bought out a wholesale grocery establishment that had been started early in the Civil war and which is still continued under the ownership of the Dana Company. Mr. Thompson was associated with this business until 1894. He then retired to look after other important duties. When the Ohio River Railroad Company was organized he was elected vice president, but resigned to become general manager of the Ohio Valley Construction Company, consisting of the capitalists who built the Ohio River Railroad. In June, 1884, when the road began operating between Wheeling and Parkersburg, Mr. Thompson resigned from the construction company and in 1885 was elected president of the railroad company. To a large degree the success of that railroad was due to the energy and wise guidance of Mr. Thompson who was exceedingly popular throughout the district served by the road. He was still its president when he died at Washington, D. C., February 26, 1895. Though always identified with important business and public enterprises, he was naturally of a retiring disposition, and his happiest hours were spent in his home with his family and friends. Kindness was his distinguishing trait, and he was exceedingly charitable to those who needed his help. He was a member of the Episcopal Church, and was affiliated with the Masonic Order and Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

In 1869 he married Fannie Belle Jackson, daughter of General John J. Jackson, of the distinguished West Virginia family of that name. The children of George W. Thompson II were: Jane Jackson, wife of Preston Brooks Tobin; Elizabeth S., who married Charles S. Pearey; George W., third; Frances Belle, whose first husband was Nelson Young, and she is now the wife of Louis Schirmer; and Anna Camden, wife of Walter Henry Gerwig.

George W. Thompson, III, was born at Parkersburg, November 29, 1880. He was educated in his native city and attended the Lawrenceville Preparatory School in New Jersey. After leaving school he had three years of experience as a reporter with the Pittsburgh Leader, and for another three years had charge of the insurance department of the Citizens Trust & Guaranty Company of Parkersburg. Since 1907, Mr. Thompson has had the increasing responsibilities in connection with the Standard Oil Company's interests at Parkersburg. He is now superintendent of the Camden Works of this corporation. Mr. Thompson is a member of the Episcopal Church.

October 19, 1912, he married Miss Anna Mehen. Their two children are Nancy and George W. IV.

W. FRANK STUCK has been a resident of Preston County throughout the half century of his life, is a well known merchant at Newburg, and while his career has been chiefly concerned with civilian grouping of affairs, he has some of the sturdy traits and courageous spirit that have marked his ancestors. His Americanism is featured by several ancestors who have been in the wars of this nation from the time of the Revolution.

His first American ancestor was John Stuck. John Stuck was born in Germany, in a town of which his father was burgomaster. The family was introduced to Germany by an immigrant from Palestine of Jewish blood. John Stuck has a brother, Henry, but there is no record that he came to America. John Stuck arrived in this country just before the outbreak of the Revolutionary war. He was then a youth and had left Germany to evade compulsory military training. However, he was not a pacifist, since in a few years he joined heartily with the Colonists in their struggle for independence, and was with the Colonial army five years. After the revolution, he married a woman of English and Dutch ancestry. They had four sons and two daughters, and that generation became somewhat widely scattered, John going to Indiana, Peter to Kentucky, while Jacob and Mathias remained near the old homestead in Somerset County, Pennsylvania. By a second marriage John Stuck had three other children.

Mathias Stuck, above mentioned, was the great-grandfather of the Newburg merchant. He married Nancy Frazee, whose father, Thurman Frazee, brought his family from Denmark to the American Colonies before the war of the Revolution and from New York, his first place of settlement, moved to New Jersey and finally to Virginia, establishing his home seven miles east of Brandonville, in Preston County, and from there moving over the Maryland line to what is the Frazee community of Garrett County. Thurman Frazee also participated as a soldier of the revolution for seven years.

The grandfather of W. Frank Stuck, son of Mathias and Nancy (Frazee) Stuck, had an active career as a commercial man in Preston County. He was a merchant at Terra Alta at the beginning of the Civil war. His devotion to the Union amounted to a passion, and he became so enraged when a detachment of Confederate troops entered the town that, though a civilian, he fired his rifle at them, and for this he was taken prisoner and carried South to be dealt with as his conduct seemed to merit. On the way he was dismounted, tied and stood upon a stump to be shot. His courage did not desert him, and he defied his captors and called them cowards for shooting a defenseless captive. Seeing his doom and resolving upon a last effort to save himself, he made himself known as an Odd Fellow, at which sign the commander stopped the proceedings, ordered him untied, placed him upon a horse and started him back home. He afterward joined and served in the Union Army.

A son of this staunch Unionist was John E. Stuck, for many years an honored merchant at Newburg. John E. Stuck was born at Terra Alta in August, 1847. He left school, and without his father's consent on March 24, 1864, joined the Union forces in Company E, of the Sixth West Virginia Cavalry, under Col. R. E. Fleming. He remained in service until the close of the war and was then sent west with his company to the Indian border. He received his honorable discharge at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, May 26, 1866, as a result of General Order No. 33. He then returned to West Virginia, was in the Baltimore & Ohio Railway service for a time, and later a railroad man in Texas. On coming back from the Southwest he was for a period clerk in a store at Newburg and then engaged in business for himself there. In his later years he was book-keeper and buyer for the large and well known mercantile firm of Allen & Ellis, and continued in their service until his death on February 27, 1886, the result of a fall on the 14th of that month. John E. Stuck was active in local politics, always a republican, member of the Board of Education of Lyon District, was past grand chancellor of the Knights of Pythias of the state, and widely known as a gifted speaker and debater in politics and in fraternal affairs. He was very much interested in Sunday School work as a member of the Methodist Church, and the cause of public education found in him one of its choicest supporters.

John E. Stuck married Clarissa Adaline White, who was born March 12, 1849, and died October 16, 1914, being laid to rest beside her husband at Newburg. Her parents are Thornton T. and Catherine (Stoyer) White. The children of John E. Stuck and wife are Etta M., born July 27, 1869, now Mrs. W. R. Stewart, of Fisher, Pennsylvania; W. Frank; John Earnest, born March 16, 1875, and unmarried January 23, 1896; Mida Belle, born August 1878, a resident of Newburg; James A., born June 25, 1881, a locomotive engineer for the Baltimore & Ohio Railway at Newburg; Howard P., born August 16, 1883, is Baltimore & Ohio station agent at Oakland, Maryland; and Laura Emma, born November 11, 1885, died May 10, 1920, the wife of G. T. Silcott.

W. Frank Stuck was born at Newburg, September 21, 1871, and as a boy he acquired a public school education. From 1886 to 1893 he clerked in a store, then entered business for himself as a general merchant, sold out in 1893, and, going to the Pacific Coast, was for five years a traveling salesman with headquarters at Seattle, representing Fishp Brothers, wholesale grocers. Returning home in 1903, Mr. Stuck for a brief time resumed his work as a clerk at Newburg, and then again went on the road as a salesman, a vocation he followed until 1915. Since that year he has been building up and extending a prosperous business as a hardware and builders' supplies dealer. He is one of the original stockholders of the First National Bank of Newburg, is a stockholder in the Winchester Repeating Arms Company, and was an original stockholder and is vice president of the West Virginia Drilling and Development Company, which has done considerable development work in the oil and gas territory.

Mr. Stuck served one term as president of the Board of Education of Lyon District, and during that time several new schoolhouses were erected. He has put forth his efforts constantly for general improvement, is a staunch republican in politics, casting his first vote for Benjamin Harrison for president, and has been a member of a number of conventions, including the first convention at Wheeling, when the noted Charles Swisher figured as a candidate. In more recent years politics has been an after consideration with Mr. Stuck, though he has never failed to vote and according to his party faith. He is one of the oldest ten of twelve surviving members of Grafton Lodge No. 308, benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. While not a member, he believes in the good work of churches and gives them his financial support.

At Newburg, September 20, 1903, Mr. Stuck married Miss Arlina G. Menefee, daughter of John W. and Ruhama (Hanshaw) Menefee. Her father spent his life as a West Virginia farmer on York's Run near Newburg and died in the village of Newburg in January, 1891. Mrs. Stuck was born June 3, 1871, and the other children of her parents were Belle, Frank and Mollie, wife of E. E. Rush of Winchester, Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Stuck have one daughter, Mildred Virginia, who graduated from the Masontown High School in 1922.

JOHN F. CROGAN. In a life of seventy years, John F. Crogan has justly earned the reputation of having been one of the most effectively useful and public spirited citizens of Lyon District in Preston County. By hard work he provided for those dependent upon him, thus achieving a primary ambition, but at all times he has manifested a keen and generous interest in the welfare of others and has worked in behalf of schools, better roads and other facilities that represent the advance and progress of the times. His father, James Crogan, was a native of Ireland, married after coming to the United States, and as a laborer employed on railroad construction followed the westward progress of the Baltimore & Ohio through West Virginia to Preston County. His first home here was at the west end of the tunnel, near Tunnelton, later at a point just below Austen, and after many years as a wage worker he bought a farm on Raccoon Creek, where he lived until his death. He had a limited education, and found means of making himself useful, always voted the democratic ticket, and sought none of the honors of politics. He married Rose Doyle, who died in October, 1897, and they were the parents of four sons and one daughter.

John F. Crogan, the second child, was born at the west end of the tunnel, near Tunnelton, October 31, 1851. He spent most of his youth on the farm near Raccoon Creek. He attended school at Newburg, the Concord country school, and when he left home he became teamster about saw mills, an occupation he followed for eight years. After that he resumed farming, then for two years drove a team in the oil district below Fairmont, and after that experience his time and energies were faithfully devoted to farming. In 1888 he bought the farm where he had his home and the center of his activities until the beginning of 1922.

Mr. Crogan on reaching manhood chose the republican instead of the democratic party of his father, voting for General Grant in 1872, and for fifty years has steadily cast his ballot according to his first choice. Mr. Crogan was chosen a member of the county court in 1904 as the commissioner from Lyon District, succeeding Commissioner Burgoyne. When he went on the court the other members were Emanuel Dixon, chairman; James C. White, P. S. Knotts, Thomas Ryan, Jehn Jenkins, P. J. Knaap and Commissioner Strawser, and other members who came on the board later were John E. Jenkins, W. F. Menear and Harrison Zinn. Some money was then being spent making new roads and repairing old ones, building bridges, but no permanent road bed was yet on the program for Preston County. At the present time Mr. Crogan still has official interests in roads, being in charge of certain road work and maintenance in Lyon District. He is also overseer of the poor for that district.

His fellow citizens perhaps best appreciate his public service as a member of the district board of education. He was on the board with Rev. Mr. Ingle, Dr. Frank Fortney and Ashford Moore, secretary of the board. During his incumbency, the new high school of Newburg was begun, attention was paid to improved teaching facilities and the securing of better qualified teachers, and a generally higher standard of school work. Mr. Crogan retired from the board in July, 1921, closing a public service which reflected credit upon his efforts to give the best of his ability to his duty.

In Preston County, December 9, 1875, Mr. Crogan married Miss Frances Wilson, daughter of Eugenius and Julia Ann (Jeffreys) Wilson, her mother being a daughter of Thomas Jeffreys. Mrs. Crogan was born at the old point known as Denver in Reno District, August 22, 1855, being one of thirteen children, named as follows: Alpheus Wilson; Margaret, who married John Myers; Melissa, who was the wife of George Fortney; Amanda, who married Isiah Bolyard; Adaline, who married Irvin Shaw; Eugenius; Samantha, who was the wife of John Spring; Mrs. Crogan; Columbus, who died as a young man; John, a resident of Fairmount; Sarah, who married Jacob Bolyard; Greenland, a carpenter at Pittsburgh; and Gideon, who died in childhood.

Mr. and Mrs. John Crogan have reared a fine family of children and have a number of grandchildren, most of them living near this venerable couple. Addie, wife of Thomas Pyles, a farmer near Newburg, is the mother of Rose, Agnes, Edward, Frances, Nellie and Lloyd. The oldest son, Hubert, is a young attorney at Kingwood, who married Hazel Snyder, and they have a son, Patrick Richard. Lloyd, whose home is at Hiawatha, Utah, married Catherine Clark and has a son, Frederick. Bessie, of Newburg, widow of Morgan Bell, has two sons, Charles and Morgan. Walter, a locomotive engineer on the Baltimore & Ohio between Grafton and Cumberland, married Martha Shelton and has a son, Dorsey. The youngest of the family, John Dewey, was in the Students' Army Training Corps at Morgantown, and is now finishing his education in Toledo, Ohio.

JOHN LAWRENCE HECHMER graduated in law and began the practice of his profession at Grafton in 1876. Subsequent service has brought him a high position in the bar of the state, and no less in the public spirited citizenship of the community.

He was brought to Grafton when he was five years old from Baltimore, where he was born December 8, 1855, son of Louis and Dora (Dreher) Hechmer, the former a native of Bonn and the latter of Bremen, Germany. Louis Hechmer was with the forces of the Prussian government during the revolution of 1848, fighting such men as Schurz and Kunkel, but his sympathies were with them, and as soon as he was released from the army he came to the United States, and was married in Baltimore. He had learned the trade of machinist in the Krupp factories of Germany, and he became a machinist for the Baltimore & Ohio, first at Baltimore and then in the shops at Grafton. After leaving the railroad he was a hotel man at Grafton until he retired. He died in Detroit, Michigan, in 1902, at the age of eighty-two, and his wife died a year later in the same city. They had three sons: John L., Frank, of Youngstown, Ohio, and George, of Grafton.

John Lawrence Hechmer was reared in Grafton, attended private schools, finished his literary education at Georgetown University, near Washington, and took his law course in the University of Michigan. From the time he was admitted to the bar at Grafton in 1876, he has always practiced alone and for many years he was one of the busiest lawyers of the city, and still looks after a large general practice. He is a member of the local and state bar associations and the American Bar Association.

Politics has been only incidental to his profession. In 1876, though he was not qualified by age to vote that year, he made some campaign speeches for Samuel J. Tilden, but before the next general election he decided to act with the republican party, casting his ballot that year for James A. Garfield, and has been staunch in the same party faith since then. He has been a member of the Grafton City Council and for one term was mayor. He is a Knight of Columbus and is president of the local branch of the National Council of Catholic Men.

In Taylor County, November 25, 1878, Mr. Hechmer married Josephine Luethke, daughter of Henry Luethke and a native of Taylor County. She died in 1889, leaving three children: Frances, wife of Peter Dooman, of Parkersburg, and mother of three children, named John, Miriam and Nancy Dooman; John Hechmer, who is in the coal business at Grafton; and Mary, a sister in the Visitation Convent at Parkersburg. In June, 1890, at Grafton, Mr. Hechmer married Anna Luethke, also a native of Taylor County. Of the children born to this union, Adrienne J. has spent several years in the Government service and is now connected with the London, England, offices of the United States Shipping Board. Antoinette D., a graduate of George Washington University, is a Washington attorney, associated with C. R. Marshall and Charles E. Bell, specializing in interstate commerce litigation. Arthur B. volunteered early in 1917, was put on special duty, and was in overseas service from January, 1918, until the close of the war. As an ex-service man he has a Knight of Columbus scholarship in West Virginia University, being a member of the class of 1923. Bernadine and Petronelle are students in Pierce Business College at Philadelphia. Charles was formerly a seaman in the merchant marine. Rosemary is a student at Parkersburg, and Edward L. is attending school at Westchester, Pennsylvania.

ROBERT RENWICK VAUGHAN, M. D., is county coroner in Logan County, and has an extensive professional business as physician in charge of the mine practice at the Dehue Mine of the Steel & Tube Company of America, the Thurmond Coal Company's mines at Dabney and the Argyle Coal Company at Yokum. These mines are on Rum Creek, and the doctor's home is at Dehue.

Doctor Vaughan was born at Lobelia, Pocahontas County, West Virginia, December 22, 1881, son of Henry Mason and Miriam Nancy (Walton) Vaughan. His father was born near Lewisburg in Greenbrier County, this state. The grandfather, Joshua Burwell Vaughan, came from Lynchburg, Virginia, and acquired a tract of unbroken land near Lewisburg, and cleared it up and developed a farm. While getting his land into condition he engaged in the work of hauling goods from Lynchburg with a six-mule team and also trading large quantities of the output of the salt works.

During the Civil war he was a teamster in the Southern army. Henry Mason Vaughan was born in 1854, and spent his life as a farmer. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and a democrat. Mrs. Vaughn died May 2, 1921. His surviving children are: Dr. Raymond, a farmer; Joseph Lake, associated with the Logan Mercantile Company at Logan; Leonard A., employed a Rossmore by the Logan Mining Company; Milton D., on the home farm; Orleena Susan, a teacher at Holden in Logan County and wife of Edward Clevenger, an employee of the United States Coal and Oil Company. Another son, Fores B., was a conductor on the Iron Mountain Railway and was accidentally killed at Pine Bluff, Arkansas.

Robert Renwick Vaughan grew up in Pocahontas County where he attended public school, was a student in the Hillburn Academy and in the Dunsmore Business College at Staunton, Virginia. Still later he attended the University of West Virginia two years. He taught four terms of school in Pocahontas County, and by teaching and at other work paid his way through school. His medical education was acquired in Grant University at Chattanooga, Tennessee which he entered in 1902 and from which he graduated in 1906. He stood second in his class all the way through medical college. He passed the examination of the West Virginia State Board of Medical Examiners and was first located at Richwood, as physician for the Cherry River Boom and Lumber Company in Nicholas County for three years. Following that he was a physician for the Loup River Colliery Company at Page on Little Loup Creek. In 1909 he came to Logan County as physician for the U. S. Coal and Oil Company at Holden, and looked after the duties arising from this position for six years. In 1916 he removed to Dehue, where his practice has been described.

On July 1, 1914, he married Dixie Cook, daughter of A. H. Cook, of Wyoming County, West Virginia. The two children born to their marriage are Mary Katharine and Lillian Nancy. Doctor Vaughan has been a student since graduating in medicine as well as before, and possesses more than ordinary ability in surgery. He did a great deal of hospital work at Holden, and was also associated with a hospital at Richwood, West Virginia, for three years. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias and Elks, and is a very decided democrat.

KARL H. TRIPPETT, M. D. A former physician and surgeon at Buckhannon, then a medical officer in the army both in this country and in France, Doctor Trippett after his return joined his younger brother in practice at Grafton where both of them are known as accomplished surgeons.

The Trippetts are one of the oldest families of the state. Several brothers established their homes near Morgantown in Monongalia County, about the time of the Revolutionary war. Three of the brothers were soldiers in that struggle and two of them are believed to have been killed in battle. Doctor Trippett is a descendant of the survivor. Doctor Trippett's grandfather became a farmer in Calhoun County and during the Civil war he and two of his sons were Confederate soldiers under Stonewall Jackson. He died on his farm near Brooksville about 1882, at the age of eighty-five. His wife was a Miss Lowe, and their children were: Philip, who was a southern soldier and a farmer near Seacombe, West Virginia; Henrietta, who married John Miller, of Smithville, this state; Caleb after his service as a soldier became a noted Methodist minister and educator in the state; Frank, the other soldier of the Confederacy was a physician practicing at Jordan, New York, and now a resident of Syracuse, New York; Marshall M., a Methodist minister who lived in Calhoun County; Mrs. Rebecca Ramsay, of Calhoun County; Milton, who was a farmer in Calhoun County; and Lemuel H.

Lemuel Harrison Trippett was born in Calhoun County April 24, 1860, and was liberally educated, being an A. B. graduate of the University of West Virginia. He taught school in Calhoun County and in summer normals, and was then engaged in merchandising until 1890, when he was elected county clerk of Calhoun County, and office he filled two terms of six years each. While in office he was chosen cashier of the Calhoun County Bank, but subsequently reigned and moved to Buckhannon to secure the advantages of that college city for his children. In Buckhannon he was associated with the Peoples Bank, the Buckhannon Bank and the Traders National Bank, and conducted an extensive real estate business, representing the local interests of the New York Life Insurance Company. His lands in Calhoun County proved to be rich in oil.

Lemuel H. Trippett is a democrat in politics. He married Miss Blanche Stump, who was born at Stumptown in Gilmer County, and was reared at Stumps Mills, a property belonging to her father, Salathiel Stump, who was a successful farmer and lumberman, proprietor of the mills, the store and the hotel, which constituted the chief assets of the village. L. H. Trippett and wife had only two children, Dr. Karl H. and Dr. Lemuel H., Jr., now associated in practice at Grafton.

Karl H. Trippett was born on his father's farm in Calhoun County, April 7, 1886. After the public schools he was a student one year in Marshall College, then in the Wesleyan College at Buckhannon and in 1907 entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Baltimore, where he completed the course and received the degree in medicine in June, 1911. He served as assistant superintendent of Mercy Hospital at Baltimore a year, when he returned to Buckhannon and was busy in his private practice there until he went into service.

He was a volunteer for the medical corps, was commissioned a first lieutenant, and in 1918 was called to duty at Camp Greenleaf, Chickamauga, Georgia, and a month later to Base Hospital No. 123 at Camp Greene, Charlotte, North Carolina. Just before going abroad he was at Camp Mills, Long Island, and crossed the Atlantic on the Adriatic, landing at Liverpool and thence to Havre. In France he was stationed at Marne-sur-Aisne, at the largest hospital center in France, having sixteen base hospitals in that area. Some time after the signing of the armistice he was granted leave of absence for a course in surgery in the University of Lyons, where he remained from March to July of 1919. He was then made one of the officers in charge at the segregation hospital for venereal diseases, and continued on duty until September 18, 1919, when he sailed from Brest on the Agamemnon, landing at New York. He was discharged at Camp Dix, New Jersey, October 15, 1919, and on the following day joined his brother in Grafton, where they have been associated in general practice and also as surgeons on the staff of the City Hospital.

His brother, Dr. Lemuel H. Trippett, was born at Grantsville, Calhoun County, April 17, 1896, graduated A. B. from the Wesleyan College at Buckhannon and received his degree from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Baltimore in 1918. For a year following he was resident physician at St. Joseph's Hospital in Baltimore, and then opened the office in Grafton which he and his brother now occupy.

At Buckhannon, August 16, 1916, Dr. Karl Trippett married Miss Willard Farnsworth. She was born in that college town and finished her education there. She is a daughter of Thomas O. and Nora (Trowbridge) Farnsworth, her mother representing one of the old and prominent families of Preston County. Dr. and Mrs. Trippett have one son, Karl Harrison, who was born October 4, 1918, while his father was in France.

Doctor Trippett is a member of the Upshur County Hospital Society, belongs to the professional fraternity Chi Zeta Chi, and is affiliated with the Masons, Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, Elks, Moose and Red Men. He is a democrat, while his brother is a republican. He is a member of the Andrews Methodist Episcopal Church, the Grafton Chamber of Commerce, and Grafton Post No. 78, American Legion.

JOHN CALVERT. Now retired at Independence, John Calvert has a long retrospect of life, including a useful service as a Union soldier in the Civil war, many years of sturdy devotion to a mechanical trade, later to merchandising, and in all the years his associates have appreciated his honesty, his integrity and his reliability.

He was born at Greensboro, Pennsylvania, January 28,

1846, but since he was three years of age his life has been spent in West Virginia. His father, Noah Calvert, was a native of Pennsylvania, in early life was a glass blower, and after leaving that trade became a farmer. He lived for a quarter of a century in Monongalia County, where he died in April, 1876. His wife was Mary Sullivan. Her father was a native of Germany and lived to the age of 102 years, while his daughter, Mary, lacked only six months of attaining the same age. She died in 1914 and is buried in Monongalia County. They were the parents of eleven children: David, who as a young man went to Illinois and later went further West; Margaret, who married Michael McLaughlin and died at Walkers Station in West Virginia; Nancy, who married Thornton Johnson and died at Point Marion, West Virginia; Sophia, who was the wife of Clark Morris and also died at Point Marion; Philip, who lived as a farmer in Tyler County; John; Barney, who died near the old family homestead in Monongalia County; Pernelia is the wife of Luke Durrell and lives at Pittsburgh; Christiann, who died in Monongalia County, the wife of Richard Johnson; Marinda, wife of Grant Wright, of Morgantown; and Mary, wife of Benjamin Davis, of Morgantown.

John Calvert left the home of his parents when he was ten years of age and grew up in the home of a neighbor. All his schooling was compressed within seven months of school attendance. As a boy he served an apprenticeship in a blacksmith shop and when past seventeen years of age, and about the time West Virginia was admitted to the Union, he enlisted in the Union Army, in Company 1 of the Fiftieth Pennsylvania Infantry, under Captain LeVann and Colonel Broom. His regiment was part of the Ninth Army Corps of the Potomac. His first important battle was March 18, 1864, when the Confederates drove his regiment out of its works in front of Petersburg. He was in the battle of Hatcher's Run and in some of the fighting in the concluding campaigns of the war, and he witnessed the surrender of Lee at Appomattox. His command was then ordered to Washington and was scheduled to go south and support General Sherman against Joseph E. Johnston. The surrender of the latter caused the regiment to be retained at Washington, and there it remained until the Grand Review, when Mr. Calvert was ordered to Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and mustered out in June, 1865.

On his return home he resumed his trade as a blacksmith at Rosedale, Monongalia County, and in 1872 moved to Preston County and located at Kingwood. While living there his first wife died, and for four years following he worked at his trade in Independence and abandoned it to enter the hardware and undertaking business. After disposing of this business he moved to Wetzel County, conducted a general store six years, and since closing out that business has been practically retired. He then returned to Independence, and about his only active connection with business today is as a director of the First National Bank of Newburg.

In the election campaign of 1864 the privilege was granted all soldiers of the field of voting, and thus it was that Mr. Calvert had the honor of voting for Abraham Lincoln while in the breastworks in front of Petersburg, though he was not yet nineteen. He thus established himself in the party faith from which he has found no reason to depart, and in earlier years he attended some local conventions and took part in some strenuous campaigns, though never as a seeker for political honors himself. He has been a trustee of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Independence.

In Monongalia County, March 28, 1866, Mr. Calvert married Miss Leann Llewellyn, who was born at Cheat Neck in that county and died in 1877. Mr. Calvert's children are all by his first marriage: Cora Ella, wife of George Baker, lives at Fairchance, Pennsylvania, and has two children, George and Elenora; Mary Jane is the wife of Rev. S. K. Arbuthnot, of Buckhannon, West Virginia, and her two daughters are Mary and Virginia; Jasper Newton is an electrician of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and he and his wife, Laura, have a daughter, Margaret; William Franklin, the youngest, is a machinist at Fairmont, and married Bonnie Cunningham. In 1881, at Independence, Mr. Calvert married Mrs. Senath E. Moore. Her mother was Elizabeth Wolf. Mrs. Calvert was born near Independence, was an infant when her father died and her mother bravely took the responsibility of rearing her young children until they could take care of themselves. Mrs. Calvert had a subscription school education, and for many years her interests and sympathy have gone out to the helpless and needy and she has participated in community work of different kinds. However, she has not been interested in politics, has not availed herself of the privilege of universal suffrage, and is a member of the Methodist Protestant Church.

MALCOLM JUDSON ORR, for many years a farmer and stock man, and more recently a factor in the orchard and horticultural development of the district around Newburg, in Preston County, is a member of a family that had an honorable record in Preston County since the close of the eighteenth century.

The founder of the family and his great-grandfather was John Dale Orr, who came to Preston County in 1798. His sister, Mrs. Davy, was living on Sand Ridge in Preston County, and it was her presence that attracted him to the same locality. In 1798 he left his old home near Uniontown, Pennsylvania, and came to his new place on Sand Ridge or Scotch Hill, south of the village of Newburg, where he spent the rest of his life, taking about three hundred acres of land that cost him perhaps twenty-five cents an acre. John Dale Orr brought with him his wife and one child, some household goods and cattle. His goods were transported by the old time "drag" method. This drag consisted of two poles fastened together at one end, the horse standing between the other two ends, which served as shafts, and the weight was so distributed as to fall chiefly on the horse. Two ends dragged on the ground, and boards or timbers were tied crosswise on which goods could be transported. There were two of these crude conveyances in the Orr party. Mrs. Orr rode on the back of one of the horses, carrying her daughter in her arms. John Dale Orr died in April, 1840, and his wife, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Johns, died in October, 1853. Their children were: Catherine, born in 1796, married Joshua Fortney and died in Harrison County in 1860; John, born in 1798, lived at the cross roads in the Newburg locality until 1855; when he sold his property to the old O'Donnell Coal Company and then moved to the Masontown locality, where he lived until his death in 1883; Ruth Orr, who was born in 1801 and died in 1885, was the wife of William Meneer, and they spent their married lives on the old Meneer farm near Scotch Hill; Hiram, was the youngest of the family.

Hiram Orr was born in Preston County in 1804 and died in 1855. He married Keziah Meneer, a sister of Susan Meneer, who was the wife of his brother. Hiram Orr spent his life at the old John Dale Orr homestead. He never went into politics for his own benefit, but was an old-line democrat and occasionally served as election commissioner. His children were: Uriah Newton; Martha J., who was married in 1859 to Andrew B. Meneer and died at Kingwood in 1864, leaving two children; Eugenius J., who married Miss Wathan in 1855 and died in 1868, survived by five children; Morgan D. who married Belle Henry and spent his life at Fairmont as superintendent of the Oral Coal Company; Miles Hiram, who married Miss Ashburn and is a resident of Masontown; Keziah became the wife of S. M. Martin at Reedsville and reared a family of five daughters and two sons; Weightman L. married Carrie A. Pfeil and lived at Baltimore, where he died in 1905.

Major Uriah Newton Orr, one of the conspicuous figures in the life and affairs of Preston County for many years, was born at the old homestead on Sand Ridge, April 24, 1832. He was reared to manhood there, and despite the lack of school advantages he acquired a good education, chiefly through his own efforts. At the age of twenty-two he was elected major of the Seventy-third Virginia Militia, and two years later was promoted to lieutenant colonel. Thus he had a considerable experience and knowledge of military tactics when the Civil war broke out. In August, 1861, he joined Company I of the Sixth West Virginia Infantry in sergeant of his company. He was in a number of skirmishes at Morefield, Bulltown, South Branch and elsewhere, and served until honorably discharged in November, 1864, the Union Army, and in 1862 was promoted to first duty at the expiration of his term. Major Orr always kept in close touch with his old comrades, was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and attended all the county reunions.

Following the war he entered the lumber business near Newburg, in Preston County, and in 1889 removed to Kingwood, where he put up a four-story flour mill. He was a man of strenuous activity, vigorous and determined in everything he undertook, and he kept working until practically the end of his life. He died February 14, 1916 at the venerable age of eighty-four. He was progressive, a useful citizen, and accumulated an abundant prosperity. In politics he was an enthusiastic republican. He cast his first presidential vote in the campaign of 1856 for Millard Fillmore, a candidate of the American or Know-nothing party, but in 1860 he supported Abraham Lincoln and never deviated from that party and its principles the rest of his life. He was an influential man in local politics, and in 1876 was elected a member of the Board of Education of Lyon District, becoming its president two years later, and filled that post for eight years. In 1881 he was elected to represent Preston County in the House of Delegates, was re-elected in 1883, and after an interval of four years was returned to the House in 1889. He served on some of the most important committees and rendered a distinctive service to the state and his home county. In later years he was mayor of Kingwood.

In 1860 Major Orr married Miss Annie Amelia. She died in 1864, while her husband was in the army, leaving two sons, Robert A. and Malcom J. In 1867 Major Orr married Mollie J. Squires, daughter of Samuel Squires. She died in 1912, when they had been married forty-five years. The children of this marriage were: Mattie J., wife of G. W. Robinson, of Kingwood; Agnes A., wife of John B. Ford, an operator and superintendent in the Fairmont coal district; James Morgan in the coal business at Clarksburg; Grace, wife of Samuel B. Montgomery, of Kingwood; Edward U., a resident of Kingwood and married Miss Laura Stone; Clarence, formerly manager of a coal company in the Philippine Islands, and still in the coal business in one of the Rocky Mountain states; Carrie, wife of Noble Montgomery, of Tunnelton; Nellie, Mrs. Charles Allen of California; and Uriah N., Jr., now a druggist at Kingwood, was one of the first young men in Preston County to enlist, volunteering at Pittsburg, and went overseas with the expeditionary forces and saw some of the real fighting in France.

Malcom Judson Orr, who represents the fourth generation of this family in the Newburg vicinity, was born at Independence, West Virginia, May 28, 1863. He was reared near Newburg, attended common schools, and his first experience on the farm gave him the knowledge and opened the opportunities for what has been his permanent vocation. For a time he was associated with his father in the development of a coal property. He also spent about two years, 1905-08, at Gainesville, Florida, in the real estate business, contributing of his efforts toward colonizing that region with northern men to engage in the fruit and truck industry. With these exceptions Mr. Orr has devoted his time to farming and stock raising, and after returning from Florida began developing one of the most promising orchard properties in Preston County. He planted an orchard of 600 trees, principally the Starke Delicious, York Imperial and Rome Beauty apples. His fruit farm has a north exposure on a branch of Raccoon Creek, and the orchard is just coming into profitable bearing and it constitutes Mr. Orr's principal business interest now.

Mr. Orr was elected and served as mayor of Newburg in 1908. He is a republican, has served almost continuously as election commissioner of his district, and has been a delegate to many state conventions of the party, beginning in 1888. He was in the state conventions at Wheeling, Parkersburg, Huntington, Charleston, and helped nominate Governor George W. Atkinson, A. B. White, W. M. O. Dawon and others. He has had a wide acquaintance with old republican leaders in the state from Stephen B. Elkins own. Mr. Orr is affiliated with Grafton Lodge No. 303, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and is a member of the Methodist Church.

Near Newburg in October, 1884, he married Miss Mary A. Boogher, daughter of Alfred Boogher, whose active career was spent in the service of the Baltimore & Ohio Railway, and who was a pensioner of the company when he died at Newburg. Mrs. Orr was born at Newburg in 1863. Of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Orr the oldest is Lottie B., wife of Charles Geldbaugh, a B. & O. conductor, of Newburg and they have two children, George and Charlotte; Nellie A. is the wife of Frank Densmore, Jr., a Baltimore & Ohio engineer at Newburg; Lucy M., of Cumberland, Maryland, is the wife of A. J. Cozad, a telegraph operator with the Baltimore & Ohio Railway, and they have a daughter, Dorothy; Naomi is Mrs. George Barnes, of Homestead, Pennsylvania; Dayton Uriah, the only son, was one of the first young men drafted for the World war in this section, was at Camp Lewis, Washington, and was employed in drilling troops there. He is now ranching at Lower Lake, in Lake County, California.

HAYES SAPP, now serving his second term as postmaster of Newburg, was called from the cultivation of his farm nearly to these duties under Uncle Sam, and his previous associations as a railroad man, coal miner, farmer and citizen, earned for him the solid support and confidence of the community which have been completely justified by the service he has rendered.

Mr. Sapp is a native of Preston County, born in the Gladeville community, September 27, 1875, son of Benjamin Franklin Sapp and grandson of Benjamin Sapp. Benjamin Sapp moved from Monongalia County to Gladeville about the beginning of the Civil war, and spent the rest of his years there as a farmer. He married Sarah Githrie, and their children were: Selby, Samuel, William, Edwin, Joseph, Benjamin F., Steenor, James N., Mrs. Sarah Bunner, Rebecca, who became the wife of Joshua Shuttlesworth, Lottie, who married Philip Shuttlesworth, and Phoebe, who married Benjamin Sapp.

Benjamin F. Sapp, who was born in Monongalia County, February 12, 1837, grew up there, was a farm boy and had a limited education. He joined the Union Army at the very beginning of the Civil war, in Company A of the First West Virginia Cavalry. Before the war was over he was promoted and commissioned a lieutenant of his company. He was in the battle of Antietam September 17, 1862, in the Wilderness campaign, and at Danville, Virginia, was captured. He soon escaped from prison but was retaken, and at the second attempt succeeded in reaching the Federal lines in safety and then rejoined his command and fought until the close of the war.

The war over, Benjamin F. Sapp bought a farm at Gladeville, and for more than half a century has been busy with the affairs of agriculture in that community and still lives on his farm and works enough to create an appetite. He is a democrat and a member of the Church of the Disciples. Just after coming out of the army he married Mary L. Weaver, daughter of John and Mary Ann (Wolfe) Weaver. She is several years the junior of her husband, and they have gone along life's highway together for more than half a century. A brief record of their children is as follows: Ulysses, who died on the home farm, married Minnie, a daughter of D. C. Zinn, and he is survived by three children; Kate is the wife of W. E. Danks, of Gladeville; Fannie was married to E. M. Cale, of Terra Alta; Ray is unmarried and still at home; Hayes is the next in age; Wade married Ada Pool, and at his death at Blaine, West Virginia, left three children; Bruce, a farmer near Gladeville, married Mary McDonald, and they have a family of five; Page was sixteen years of age when he died; W. Creed, a traveling man, enlisted with the Canadian forces in 1915, was in the battle of Vimy Ridge, later was severely gassed, and at the end of his service was on police duty in the City of London; Grace and Gail are both unmarried and live at Washington, D. C.

Hayes Sapp as a practical farmer is in the vocation to which he was reared during his youth. He acquired a country school education, and on leaving the home farm he entered the train service of the Baltimore & Ohio and for five years was a freight brakeman. The succeeding five years he dug coal in the mines. After that came a brief experience in the lumber industry, chiefly working around a sawmill, and he then bought his farm adjoining the Village of Newburg, and was busy with its cultivation and improvement when he became postmaster.

Mr. Sapp cast his first presidential vote for Mr. Bryan in 1896, and has been quite active in the democratic party in the county ever since. In 1912 he was elected a county commissioner from the Lyon District, succeeding Commissioner H. A. Bailey, and served a term of two years. As a delegate to conventions he has made the acquaintance of county and state leaders. February 4, 1915, he was appointed postmaster of Newburg, having no opposition to that office, and succeeded W. O. Parriot. He was re-appointed August 5, 1919, and has now completed two years of his second term.

Near Kingwood, June 13, 1901, Mr. Sapp married Mary S. Shaffer, who was born in Preston County in April, 1882, daughter of E. C. and Annis L. (Miller) Shaffer, both of whom were reared in West Virginia. Her father for many years was a locomotive engineer for the Baltimore & Ohio system, and is now a farmer near Kingwood. Mrs. Sapp was the oldest of their children, and the others are: Lucy; Warren E., a Baltimore & Ohio engineer, living at Newburg; Ethel, Mrs. David Edwards, of California, Pennsylvania; Roland E., who was a soldier in France, was wounded in the battle of Argonne Forest and died after returning home; and Clara, Grace and Ray, all at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Sapp are the parents of three sons, Clay, Carl and Carter. Clay is a graduate of the Newburg High School.

CHARLES D. HYLTON brings to bear both technical and executive ability in the discharge of his responsible duties as superintendent of the Wanda Mine of the Logan Mining Company at Ethel, Logan County. He was born at Willis, Floyd County, Virginia, February 20, 1884, and is a son of Darius F. and Lucinda (Jenkins) Hylton, the latter of whom died at Radford, Virginia, in 1891, and the former of whom was a resident of Otway, Scioto County, Ohio, at the time of his death in 1917, at the age of sixty-five years. Darius F. Hylton was a stone mason and contractor, and built many coke ovens in the Pocahontas coal fields in Virginia and West Virginia at an early stage in the development of the coal industry here. In this line he filled contracts for the Pulaski Iron Company and the Eureka Coal Company, and in his later business activities he did general stone contracting work. After the death of his first wife he contracted a second marriage, and he was the father of four sons and five daughters. Of the other three sons it may be noted that Harry G. is in the employ of the Logan Mining Company at Monaville, Logan County, and that Posey D. and Monroe D. are locomotive engineers on the Southern Railroad, with headquarters at Knoxville, Tennessee.

Charles D. Hylton attended school in his native town and was but a boy when he found employment with the Pocahontas Consolidated Coal & Coke Company at Lick Branch, McDowell County, West Virginia. Later he was employed by the United States Coal & Coke Company at Gary, that county, where he won advancement to the position of motorman and foreman in the electrical department. He later served as mine foreman at Twin Branch and Berwind, at which latter place he had charge of two mines, and in 1911 he joined the Ethel Coal Company, a corporation later chartered under the present title of the Cleveland Cliff Iron Company. In 1912 Mr. Hylton assumed his present executive office, that of superintendent of the Wanda Mine of this company. In earlier years he proved his ability as a ball player and all-round athlete, and he continues his interest in the better class of outdoor sports, as shown by his willingness to coach the boys of his home community. He has won success through his own well ordered efforts, and had become a mine foreman when but twenty years of age. Mr. Hylton is aligned in the ranks of the democratic party, is a member of the Lodge of Elks at Logan, the county seat, and he and his wife are earnest and zealous members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which he served two years as Sunday school superintendent. His advice and general influence go to promote clean and honorable living on the part of the young folk, in whom he maintains a most lively and helpful interest at all times.

On the 23d of December, 1910, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Hylton and Miss Ada Rose, daughter of Thomas and Louisa Rose, of Davy, McDowell County, and the three children of this union are Lucille, Charles D., Jr., and Harold W.

CLYDE WHITLEY VICK, M. D., has made an excellent record of professional service and has been engaged in mine practice in the coal fields of West Virginia since 1905, his residence and headquarters being now established at Jenkinjones, McDowell County.

The doctor was born in Southampton County, Virginia, December 9, 1877, and is a son of Franklin and Josephine (Whitley) Vick, both natives of Virginia and representatives of families long resident of that historic commonwealth. Franklin Vick was a merchant and the postmaster at Berlin, Virginia, where also he operated a cotton gin and was a successful dealer in cotton and peanuts. He was forty-nine years of age at the time of his death, and his widow passed away in 1909, at the age of sixty-four years. As a young woman Mrs. Vick was a successful teacher, and after the death of her husband she succeeded him as postmaster at Berlin, besides which she gave a general supervision to her farm property and made the best of provision for her children, to whom she gave excellent educational advantages.

Doctor Vick was six years old at the time of his father's death, and in the public schools of Berlin he continued his studies until he had profited by the advantages of the high school. He then entered Suffolk Military Academy, in which institution he continued his studies until he was nineteen years of age. In 1900 he graduated in the Maryland Medical College at Baltimore, and in 1905 he received the supplemental degree of Doctor of Medicine after a post-graduate course in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in the same city. He has since fortified himself still further by effective special work in the Post Graduate Medical College in the City of New York.

Doctor Vick initiated the practice of his profession by establishing himself at Bramwell, Mercer County, West Virginia, and his practice was extended through the Crane Creek District of that county. He had also a large practice in railroad construction camps at the time when lines were being built through the coal fields. In 1905, after his post-graduate course in Baltimore, he engaged in practice at Wileco, McDowell County, and five years later he removed to Thorpe, as physician and surgeon in charge of mine practice for the United States Coal & Coke Company. In July, 1918, he transferred his residence to Jenkinjones where he has since been physician and surgeon for the Pocahontas Fuel Company, one of the leading mining corporations of this section of the state. He holds membership in the McDowell County Medical Society, West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. The doctor is affiliated with the Masonic Blue Lodge at Bramwell and with the Lodge of Elks at Bluefield.

In 1910 Doctor Vick wedded Miss Mattie Seife, of Russell County, Virginia, her father being a local clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which she also is an earnest member. Dr. and Mrs. Vick have four children: George V., Robert, Clyde W., Jr., and Eugenia.

EDWARD HUGHES EVANS is one of the able and popular executives in connection with the coal industry in the McDowell County field, with residence and headquarters at Pageton, where he is general manager of the Page Coal & Coke Company's mining operations. He has been associated with coal operations on the Tug River since 1891, his initial service having been as an engineer, and he can claim much of pioneer distinction in connection with the development of the great coal industry of West Virginia.

Mr. Evans was born in Schuylkill County, Pennsylvania January 5, 1875, a son of Samuel and Caroline (Mason) Evans, both likewise natives of that county. Samuel Evans was an authority in all details of coal mining, his original work being as a miner in the anthracite mines of Pennsylvania. He eventually became general manager of the Page Coal & Coke Company, an office now effectively filled by his son Edward H., of this review. Samuel Evans came to McDowell County in 1890, in the employ of the Crozer Coal & Coke Company at Elkhorn, when he later went to Roanoke, Virginia. Later he returned to McDowell County where he was general manager for the Page Coal & Coke Company at Pageton at the time of his death, in 1912, aged sixty-one years. His widow now seventy-one years of age (1922), resides at Columbus, Ohio, she being an earnest member of the Methodist Church. Of their four children the subject of this sketch is the eldest; Bertram B. is outside foreman at Pageton; Annie M. is the wife of J. V. R. Gardner, of Columbus, Ohio; and Samuel is a machinist at Pageton.

The public schools of his native county afforded Edward H. Evans his early education, and while still a boy he became interested in engineering. After the removal of the family to West Virginia he was for two years a student in the engineering department of the State University. He worked as a civil engineer in connection with the early development of the Page Mine, and it was after this experience that he attended the university. For five years thereafter he was superintendent of the Crozer mines, and he then became general manager of the mines at Pageton, where his service has since been continued in this capacity. During six years of his residence at Crozer he was president of the School Board of the Elkhorn District, and he has always taken lively interest in the cause of education, as has he also in bettering the conditions in general for those employed in the mines. He has been influential in civic affairs at Pageton, has served in connection with numerous committees and commissions of public order, and in the World war period was a member of the McDowell County Draft Board.

In politics Mr. Evans is a republican, and he and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which he is serving as a steward. His York Rite Masonic affiliations are with the Blue Lodge of Pageton, the Chapter at Northfork, and the Commandery of Knights Templars at Bluefield, where he is also a member of the Lodge of Perfection of the Scottish Rite, besides which he is a member of the Temple of the Mystic Shrine in the City of Charleston.

In 1898 Mr. Evans wedded Miss Flora Dundor, daughter of A. J. B. Dundor, of Reading, Pennsylvania, and the children of this union are four in number. Earl B. was a member of the Students Army Training Corps at Emory and Henry College in the World war period, and he is now (1922) a student in Marshall College. Edward L. is a student in the dental department of the University of Louisville, Kentucky. Ruby C. is attending Virginian College at Roanoke, Virginia. Samuel is attending the high school at Gary, McDowell County.

JOHN T. LOGSDON has been a resident of the Newburg community nearly forty years, and in that time has done a successful business as a building contractor, as a merchant, and has several well established and substantial enterprises today, making him one of the most successful citizens of that community.

Mr. Logsdon was born on a farm near Cameron, in Marshall County, West Virginia, November 19, 1864. His grandfather, James Logsdon, was born near Cumberland, Maryland, as a young married man crossed the Alleghenies to the Ohio River and settled at Moundsville, and ten years later bought a farm on the headwaters of Little Grave Creek. His energies as a farmer came to a pause with his death in April, 1867, at the age of sixty-seven. He married Joanna Dickson, and their children were: Hezekiah, a nion soldier; John T., who served four years and ten months in the Federal Army; William and Joseph, who are also in the army; Levi William; and Martha, Mrs. George Harris, only survivor of the family and a resident of Moundsville.

Levi William Logsdon was born at Moundsville, August 1, 1843, and spent his life uneventfully on his farm, where he died in March, 1921. He married Emily Richter. Her father, Gustav Richter, was born in Hamburg, Germany, and came to the United States when seventeen years of age, settling near Cameron, in Marshall County. He was a cabinet maker by trade but subsequently moved to a farm high came to his wife from her father. He went to work in the woods where there was not a single improvement, cleared away the timber and made a farm and practically finished his life there. His wife was Rebecca Chambers. Emily Logsdon was one of their family of four daughters and four sons, and she died July 17, 1904. Her children were John T., of Newburg; Joanna, wife of Milroy Wait, of Moundsville; James W., a farmer in Marshall County; Lewis F., a resident of Iola, Kansas, where he is in the employ of the United Iron Works; Irwin G., a farmer on Fish Creek, in Marshall County; Amanda A., who died in 1890; the wife of Thomas Liley; Caroline V., wife of Albert Hunt, of Moundsville; George, who died at the age of about thirty; and Ida, wife of William Coe, a resident of Glen Easton, West Virginia.

John Thomas Logsdon spent his boyhood on the home farm, and its duties were more important in training his energies than the district schools. From these schools he obtained a limited education, measured by an acquaintance with the third reader, the subject of division in arithmetic, a continuous struggle with the contents of the old McGuffey spelling book, but he never saw the inside of a grammar, history or geography while in school.

Mr. Logsdon when he left home says that he had twenty-five dollars in cash and two ready and steady hands to work with. He had been a dutiful son, and when he went into the world he was already an inveterate hater of intoxicants, and has steadily worked for an extension of temperance and has lived to see prohibition the law of the nation.

Mr. Logsdon came at once to Newburg to learn the carpenter's trade with some relatives who were mechanics. He went to work for his uncle, Fred Richter, staying with him until he learned the trade and also for a time was in partnership. Later he became a contractor for himself, and many of his substantial buildings are still standing and doing service as evidence of his work. His own store building at Newburg was about the last piece of construction he did. As an aid to his contract work he erected a small planing mill and feed mill, and contracted most of the finished material for interior work. After about twenty-five years with building and contracting he left to enter the undertaking business, and he finally disposed of his mill and turned his attention altogether to merchandising. He was still continuing his general store, under the name J. T. Logsdon.

Mr. Logsdon in 1915 became an operator in the coal business under his own name as a "team track" proposition, and this is still a phase of his business enterprise. In 1921 he organized the Marshall-Preston Oil and Gas Producing and Manufacturing Company, with holdings in Marshall County, West Virginia, and Greene County, Pennsylvania. The first well of the company was drilled at Ryerson Station in Greene County, was capped in November, 1921, and has a capacity of about a million cubic feet per day. Mr. Logsdon is proprietor of a garage, car storage and car sales business at Newburg, and besides was the local Chevrolet representative.

On a number of occasions he served as councilman of Newburg, but beyond that has never gone into active politics. He is a partisan of the republican party, cast his first vote for President in 1888 in favor of Benjamin Harrison, and has never missed an opportunity to attend the polls at national elections. For thirty-six years he has been a member of the Methodist Protestant Church, has served as trustee of the congregation and for ten consecutive years on the Board of Stewards.

April 26, 1885, Mr. Logsdon married at Newburg, Miss Ida R. Richter, who was born in Preston County in April, 1866, daughter of Frederick and Elizabeth (Hunt) Richter. Her father was a native of Marshall County. Mrs. Logsdon has one brother, Dent Richter, of Louisa, Maryland. The only child born to Mr. and Mrs. Logsdon was Abbie McClellan, who died at the age of nearly eleven years.

Ervin H. Yost. Abilities and natural talents of more than ordinary range have enabled Ervin H. Yost to perform an interesting program of activities, as a lawyer, in athletics, in politics, and in the duties of a patriotic citizen.

Mr. Yost, a prominent member of the New Martinsville bar, was born on a farm near New Martinsville, January 25, 1878. His grandfather, William Yost, was born in Alsace Lorraine in 1808 and as a young man came to the United States and settled in Monroe County, Ohio, where he married a Miss Krebs, also from Alsace Lorraine. They lived the rest of their lives in Monroe County, where they acquired a large and valuable farm. William Yost died in 1888. Their son, Christian Yost, was born in Monroe County in 1842, and lived there and followed farming until 1866. He removed to Wetzel County, West Virginia, buying a farm five miles east of New Martinsville. He still owns this farm, though he is now practically retired and lives at Paden City. Before coming to West Virginia he had served as a Union soldier, joining the Seventy-seventh Ohio Infantry in 1861. He was all through the war, was at the battle of Shiloh, and on the Saline River was captured and endured a long and tedious confinement in a southern prison in Texas for nine months. Due to exposure he lost the sight of his left eye during the war. He is a republican and a member of the Lutheran Church. Christian Yost married Caroline Grall, who was born in Monroe County in 1847. They became the parents of a large family of children: Mary, now living in Florida, widow of Frank B. Palmer, who was a heater in iron mills and died in Middletown, Ohio, being drowned while bathing; Charles, who died in infancy; Ella, wife of William Cox, a steel mill worker at Wheeling; William G., deputy sheriff and jailor of Wetzel County, living at New Martinsville; John S., who for a number of years was a roller in steel mills, and is now proprietor of a farm near Cleveland, Ohio; Nora, who died in infancy; Ervin H.; Alice, wife of Harry Games, a worker in the steel mills, living at Niles, Ohio; Maggie, wife of Henry Mittendorf, living on the old homestead farm five miles east of New Martinsville; Addie, wife of a steel mill worker, living in Martins Ferry, Ohio; and Chester A., a worker in the steel mills at Niles, Ohio.

Ervin H. Yost attended rural schools in Wetzel County, spent three years in the West Liberty State Normal School, and in 1900 entered the law department of West Virginia University, where he was graduated in 1902. He made a name in athletics, and while at the University was a member of the football team. In 1903, he coached the Elliott Commercial team at Wheeling and during 1904-05 coached the Magnolia High School team at New Martinsville. During 1906 he was captain of the famous Magnolia Football team. In the meantime, in 1903, he was admitted to the bar, and for nearly twenty years now has enjoyed a very successful career as a lawyer, with a record in both the civil and criminal branches. He is a member of the West Virginia and American Bar associations.

Mr. Yost, whose home is at the Riverview Hotel at New Martinsville, entered the Second Officers Training Camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, in August, 1917, and in November of that year was commissioned a first lieutenant of infantry. He was ordered to report for duty at Camp Dodge, Iowa, December 15, 1917, and remained there as a training officer until February, 1918, when the War Department ordered him to report for duty at Jefferson Barracks. He was judge advocate there of both the general and special courts for two months. He was then ordered to return to Camp Dodge, where he was assigned to special duty as a range officer three months. He was then made ranking first lieutenant of a company in the Nineteenth Infantry, Eightieth Division. Captain Yost received his honorable discharge, December 1, 1918, and then returned home and resumed his law practice.

For many years he has been prominent in local and state republican politics. He was secretary of the Republican Executive Committee of Wetzel County eight years and then chairman of the same committee for four years, until 1920. He was assistant commissioner of Wetzel County under the Dawson Tax Law in 1906, and from 1909 to 1915 was a member and president of the board of equalization and review of the county. Since 1908 he has been master in chancery of the second judicial circuit and in 1914 was mayor of New Martinsville. He served as the first commander of New Martinsville Post No. 28, American Legion, is a member of the New Martinsville Kiwanis Club and is affiliated with Sistersville Lodge No. 333, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and New Martinsville Lodge No. 931, Loyal Order of Moose.

ALEXANDER REID WHITEHILL, Ph. D. An inspiring example of that ministry to science and education that among real human values stands on the same plane with that performed by business administrators, generals and diplomats is contained in the life and character of the late Dr. Alexander Reid Whitehill of the University of West Virginia. Doctor Whitehill for some time had held the rank of retired professor of chemistry in West Virginia University, and for many years was one of the foremost thinkers, students and educators in the state.

Perhaps one of the most grateful of the many honors Doctor Whitehill achieved during his long life devoted to science and education was a distinctive tribute contained in the Junior Year Book of the university, "The Monticola," issued by the class of 1920, which is inscribed: "To Alexander Reid Whitehill in grateful appreciation of his services at West Virginia University and as a tribute to his character and ability the class of 1920 respectfully dedicates this the twenty-second volume of The Monticola."

Doctor Whitehill was born August 4, 1850, at Hookstown, Beaver County, Pennsylvania. It was at Beaver, Pennsylvania, at the home of his brother-in-law, Dan H. Stone, that death called him on October 25, 1921. At his funeral West Virginia University was officially represented by eight of his former associates, including the university president.

He inherited fundamentally strong characteristics from his ancestry. His grandfather, James Whitehill, was a Pennsylvania farmer. His father, Stephen Whitehill, who was born in 1813 and died in 1892, also devoted his life to farming. In 1837 he married Margaret McCandless Reid, who was born in 1818 and died in 1905. Both the Reid and Whitehill families were identified with the pioneer settlement of Beaver County, Pennsylvania.

Alexander Reid Whitehill manifested strong inclinations for a life of scholarship and studious pursuits, and after completing his course in the public schools he attended Beaver Academy, and at an early age entered Princeton University. He graduated in 1874, receiving his A. B. degree and standing in the first ten in a class of 100. In 1877 he received his Master of Arts degree from Princeton, and subsequently was awarded the Ph. D. degree by Washington and Jefferson College. Doctor Whitehill after graduation was awarded the Experimental Science Fellowship, valued at $600, won by competitive examination on the subjects of chemistry, physics and geology. At commencement he delivered the geological oration. He was one of the editors of the Nassau Literary Magazine in 1873-74.

After leaving Princeton, Doctor Whitehill went abroad, spending a year in travel, and also the year 1876 as a student of chemistry at Leipzig University and in the Freiberg School of Mines at Freiberg, Germany. After his return home he was for four years professor of chemistry and physics at the University Mound College at San Francisco, and while in California he was special correspondent for the Chicago Tribune, San Francisco Chronicle, Pittsburg Dispatch and Philadelphia Press, sending thirty or forty special articles to these papers on various subjects.

In 1881, while visiting at his old home, Doctor Whitehill was offered the principalship of the famous Lins Institute at Wheeling, and was the active head of the school from 1881 to 1885. In the latter year he was elected to the chair of chemistry and physics in West Virginia University, and thus began an active association that continued for thirty-five years, with broadening service and increasing honors. He continued his duties until his voluntary retirement in 1920. From 1885 to 1896 he was professor of chemistry and physics, and for twenty-four years, until his retirement, was head of the Department of Chemistry. During the years 1920-21 he continued to supervise special work in chemistry at the university.

Doctor Whitehill assisted in the organization of the West Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station, and was author of the second bulletin published by the station in 1888. In 1889 he prepared a history of education in West Virginia for the United States Bureau of Education, and he prepared the report of the State Mineralogist of Nevada for the year 1876. His authorship included an article, "Chemistry in the Service of Medicine," published in the West Virginia Medical Journal of June, 1907; an article on "Chemistry in Relation to Pharmacy" in the West Virginia Journal of Pharmacy, and numerous other articles on educational and scientific themes. At the time of his death he was engaged in an interesting labor entitled "West Virginia's Development Along Chemical Lines."

Governor Glascock appointed Doctor Whitehill as West Virginia's representative to the International Congress of Applied Chemistry held at Washington and New York in 1912. Josephus Daniels, former Secretary of the Navy, appointed him in 1916 as associate member of the United States Naval Board, and with Dr. I. C. White of West Virginia University he made a survey of the industrial establishments in the Second Congressional District of the state. Doctor Whitehill was for fifteen years treasurer of West Virginia University and of the West Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station.

While his work brought him generous recognition and appreciation, he kept in close touch with scientific men through membership in such bodies as the American Chemical Society, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Association of University Professors, was Fellow of the National Geographic Society, an honor member of the West Virginia Pharmaceutical Society; was president one term of the Phi Beta Kappa at West Virginia University; organized and was the first president of the West Virginia Scientific Society; and was a member of the Crucible Club. For twelve years he was a ruling elder of the First Presbyterian Church at Morgantown.

In 1882 he married Miss Anna Wilson, of Beaver, Pennsylvania, daughter of S. B. Wilson, a prominent Pennsylvania lawyer. Mrs. Whitehill, now deceased, was his mother of two children. The daughter, Elizabeth, was born in 1883 and is the wife of Dr. J. Carl Hill. The son, Charles A., was born in 1886 and died at the age of eleven years.

Doctor Whitehill in 1915 married Miss Mary J. Stone, of Beaver, Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia. Mrs. Whitehill is a member of one of the oldest and most prominent families of Beaver County, and her own experience as an educator enabled her to appreciate the singular devotion which Doctor Whitehill gave to his chosen career. Prior to her marriage Mrs. Whitehill had taught English in the high school at Rochester, Pennsylvania, for nineteen years.

OSCEOLA DYER, M. D. is so living that his position in his community is an enviable one and his usefulness is an inspiration to his contemporaries. He is an ideal physician, irradiating the sickroom with the light of a cheerful presence, his word and smile frequently banishing the clouds that gather around discouraged sufferers. Enthusiastic in the following of his profession, he is an eager student, and possesses the well-poised understanding that enables him to weigh fairly and make a settled decision concerning every scientific discovery.

The birth of Doctor Dyer occurred at Franklin, Pendleton County, West Virginia, August 19, 1876, and he is now engaged in the active practice of his profession in the place of his nativity. His father was Andrew W. Dyer, is grandfather was Edmund Dyer, and his great-grandfather was Zebulon Dyer, who married Rebecca Waggener. A sketch of the Waggeners' genealogy appears here in this work. Zebulon Dyer was born in Pendleton County, and lived near Upper Tract. A few years after the organization of Pendleton County he was elected a clerk. His father, the great-great-grandfather of Doctor Dyer, was James Dyer, a son of Rogers Dyer, who was killed at Fort Seybert when a band of Shawnee Indians, under the leadership of Chief Killbuck, crossed the Ohio river and captured and burned the fort. James Dyer was captured by the Indians at the time of the massacre, and was held a prisoner for about two years. He made several trips with his captors to Fort Pitt on trading expeditions, and on the last one was able to make his escape into Pennsylvania, which was the original home of the family before Roger Dyer had migrated into the region adjacent to Fort Seybert. James Dyer continued to stay in Pennsylvania until the Indian troubles were somewhat settled, and then returned to the scene of the former massacre, and for over forty years made it his home, participating in the wonderful work of reclaiming the wilderness, and making it a safe and desirable locality. He not only won material prosperity, but the confidence and good will of his associates, and laid the foundation for the solidity of his family. Edmund Dyer, grandfather of Doctor Dyer, was for many years clerk of Pendleton County, succeeding his father in this office after he had held it for half a century. Edmund Dyer was also a native of Pendleton County, and he, too, became one of its representative citizens.

Andrew W. Dyer, son of Edmund Dyer, and father of Doctor Dyer, was born in Pendleton County, in 1836, and was liberally educated, although much of his learning was self-acquired, and he continued a student until his death. While he studied law he never applied for a license to practice. A great deal of his attention was given to educational matters, and he not only taught in the schools of the county, but also held the office of county superintendent of schools following the close of the war of the '60s. During this war he served under General Imboden as a member of the Seventh Virginia Cavalry, and although participating in some of the hardest fighting of the war, escaped injury. One of the exciting incidents of his eventful career was his service as guard over John Brown after he was captured at Harper's Ferry, prior to the outbreak of the war. With the declaration of peace Andrew W. Dyer returned to private life, and, like so many of the supporters of the "Lost Cause," manfully took up the burden of living and earnestly endeavored to accept his fortunes of war. He resumed his teaching, and is remembered with affectionate respect by the older generation. A strong democrat, he was a leader of his party in his neighborhood, and when he died, in 1878, was serving as clerk of the County Court.

The mother of Doctor Dyer was, prior to her marriage, Miss Eliza Skidmore, and she was born in Pendleton County, a daughter of James Skidmore, a saddler and harnessmaker, who also owned and operated a farm. For many years he resided in Pendleton County, and if he were not born here, he spent practically his whole life within its confines. Mr. and Mrs. Dyer had the following children: Miss Susie, who lives at Franklin; Kittie, who is the widow of W. B. Anderson, of Franklin; and Doctor Dyer, whose name heads this review. Mrs. Dyer died July 7, 1907, when she was fifty-nine years old.

The history of the Dyer family is a very interesting one, and is closely connected with that of Pendleton County. When Roger Dyer came to this region he was in middle life, and a man of wealth, according to the standards of his times. He ventured into what was then a perfect wilderness, and was a member of the first party to permanently settle here. His land was purchased from Robert Green, who had acquired a grant of a vast acreage in this region. A born leader, Roger Dyer was appointed by his associates as their commander, and he led them from the Moorefield locality, where he had stopped on his way from Pennsylvania. The low lands of the Moorefield country were too full of miasma to attract him, for he feared for the good health of his family, and so sought a higher altitude and healthier environment, which he felt he had found in the Pendleton District. In his party were his son William, his son-in-law, Matthew Patton, John Patton, Jr., John Smith and William Stephenson, and their families. They purchased 1,860 acres of land for the sum of $293.33. Matthew Patton and John Smith were officially appointed to survey and mark a road from the house of John Patton to the forks of Dry River, this being the first effort made at road designation in this region, and this improvement permitted the settlers to hold communication with the far-distant neighbors.

In 1755 John Patton sold his land, amounting to 210 acres, to Jacob Seybert, and William Stephenson sold his farm to Matthias Dice, and in this way newcomers were added to the Upper Tract settlement. In 1755 Roger Dyer made his will, as a result of failing health, including in it twenty-nine persons as beneficiaries, with whom he had business relations. As stated above, Roger Dyer was not spared to die a natural death, but fell a victim to the Indian uprising. The Shawnee and Tuscarawas Indians began to threaten to make trouble for the settlers about this time, and it was not long thereafter that Chief Killbuck dealt Fort Seybert the blow which wiped out the fort and resulted in the death of many of the brave settlers, including Roger Dyer. In addition to capturing his son James, they also took into captivity his daughter Sarah, who, too, was rescued after a distressing experience. It is small wonder, therefore, with such a family history behind him that Doctor Dyer is bound to Pendleton County with bonds difficult to break, or that his heart is in this neighborhood and all that pertains to its advancement.

Doctor Dyer grew up in Pendleton County, and attended the public schools of Franklin until he was seventeen years old. At that time he began the study of medicine, obtaining his preliminary training while reading under the preceptorship of Dr. Fred Moorman of Franklin. He then entered the medical department of the University of Maryland at Baltimore, and was graduated therefrom in 1897, but remained at the university during the subsequent winter, taking up post graduate work. In 1898 he opened his office at Franklin and entered upon a general practice among his old neighbors, and here for almost a quarter of a century he has been engaged in his profession. During this period he and his associates in the profession have had several severe epidemics to contend with, those of typhoid, which have occasionally invaded Franklin, and that of influenza in 1918-19 and again in 1921. In 1918 a number of the leading citizens of Franklin died as a result of the influenza, and the fatalities throughout the rural regions were very numerous as well. During all of these scourges Doctor Dyer was especially active in his ministrations, and to him and his brother practitioners is due the credit for the recovery of so many who were stricken. For many years Doctor Dyer was county health officer, and he is now the health officer of Franklin. During the war he served loyally and capably as a member of the Examining Board, gratuitously, and filled out his registration blank in the last draft, but the armistice was signed before he filled his questionnaire. He has always upheld the principles of the democratic party, but has never cared to come before the people for public honors. His ambitions and inclinations have not led him into the fold of any societies or fraternities, the only organization to which he belongs being the Franklin Presbyterian Church, of which he is now an elder.

On December 23, 1903, Doctor Dyer married Miss Myrtle Curry at Petersburg, West Virginia. She is a daughter of Dr. James S. Curry, who became a resident of Franklin a few years prior to his demise, and died here when seventy-four years old. He married Miss Mary Harmon, a sister of John G. Harmon, and a daughter of the late George Harmon, once a republican candidate for Congress from the Second Congressional District of West Virginia. Mrs. Dyer is the only child of her parents, and she was reared carefully and educated in the public schools. Doctor and Mrs. Dyer have three children, namely: Dorothy, who is attending high school; Rebecca, who is six years old; and Mary, who is an infant.

In addition to his practice Doctor Dyer has extensive farming and stockraising interests in Pendleton County, and also in Randolph County, and is contributing to the food supply of the country by raising cattle and sheep and dealing in them. The charities of Doctor Dyer are many, but the full extent of his benevolences are known only to himself, for he is no blatant, ostentatious giver. His generosity is chiefly shown in his practice, always responding to a call upon his skill no matter how slight the chance might be of remuneration. Probably no man in his profession in this part of the state is more widely known, and certainly none have more real friends. He honors his profession, and is honored by it.

THE WAGGENER FAMILY was identified with some of the earliest phases of white occupation and settlement of the country west of the Alleghany Mountains, and descendants of the pioneers have made themselves known for their substantial work in not only the eastern but in the western section of the state.

The name Waggener is a variant of a former spelling Wagner. At one time these people lived in Holland. Some of the family moved up the Rhine Valley, and it was from the Valley of the Rhine in Germany that Andrew Waggener and five brothers came to the American colonies in the early years of the eighteenth century as part of the great immigration from that country during those years. Andrew Waggener and his brother Edward settled in what is now Culpeper County, Virginia, about 1750, after having lived for some time in Pennsylvania. Several years later, in 1754, these brothers joined the Colonial volunteers under Colonel Washington in the expedition against the French at Fort du Quesne, terminating with the surrender of Fort Necessity on July 4, 1754. The following year the brothers were again enrolled in the First Virginia Regiment under Washington as auxiliary troops to General Braddock. They were members of that ill-fated expedition which ended with the ambuscade and slaughter of Braddock's troops within a few miles of Fort du Quesne. Edward Waggener was left dead on the battlefield, and a silver watch he carried was taken by his brother Andrew, and has been carefully preserved in the family ever since. After this expedition the Virginia troops hastened to the defense of the frontier, and Andrew Waggener was commissioned captain and placed in command of the garrison at Fort Pleasant, a strong stockade with blockhouses on the South Branch of the Potomac, within the present limits of Hardy County. Here was fought a severe engagement with the Indians, known as the battle of the Trough, early in 1756. After the fear of Indian hostilities in this region had ceased, about 1765, Captain Waggener purchased land and settled in Bunker Hill, then in Frederick County, Virginia, now in Berkeley County, West Virginia. He lived there until the beginning of the Revolution, when he again entered the army and served with Washington, having a major's commission. He was at Valley Forge, Princeton, Trenton, and at Yorktown when Cornwallis surrendered.

Major Waggener had been one of the patentees to lands granted in what is now Mason County for services during the French and Indian war. He accompanied Washington and others to the mouth of the Great Kanawha in 1772. He located the tract of 3,400 acres on what has since been known as Waggener's Bottom, on the Ohio, just above Mason City. He never settled these lands, but after the Revolution he continued to reside at Bunker Hill. His Ohio River lands descended to his heirs. Major Waggener was a personal friend of Washington, and was often a guest of the first President and is said to have been the only visitor whose profanity in her presence Mrs. Washington would excuse.

Some time before he purchased his valley farm Major Waggener married Miss Mary Chapman, a Virginia lady.

She was the mother of eight children, and from these descended various representatives of the family found in West Virginia today. The oldest, Nancy, born in 1763 probably within the walls of old Fort Pleasant, married Peter Casey, who was one of the first circuit judges of Kentucky. John, born in 1769, removed to Kentucky where he inherited a portion of the land patented by his father. Thomas, born in 1771, married a Miss Anderson of Berkeley County, and also removed to Kentucky, but soon afterward returned to the Valley of Virginia. He three sons were: Andrew, who died unmarried; William who married Eliza Prior; and John, who married Emily Hieskel. Fannie, the fourth child, born in 1773, became the wife of John Schon, grandfather of Hon. Edmund Schon of Point Pleasant. Mary, born in 1775, married Gen. Elish Boyd, of Berkeley County, and her daughter became the wife of Senator Charles J. Faulkner of Martinsburg. The sixth child of Major Waggener was Rebecca, who was born in 1777 and was married to Zebulon Dyer of Pendleton County, where her descendants still live. Andrew Waggener the seventh child, born October 25, 1779, was a major in the War of 1812, commanding the Americans at the battle of Craney Island in Chesapeake Bay, and removed to Mason County in 1817, and lived there until he was shot and killed in his eighty-fourth year by a Confederate soldier at Point Pleasant, March 30, 1863. He married Attarah Beall, and several of their children became prominent in Mason County one of them, Charles, serving as clerk of the Circuit Court over thirty years and was a member of the First Wheeling Convention of 1861. The eighth and youngest child of Major Waggener was James, born in 1781.

JOHN MCCLURE of Pendleton County was for many years known as the "Cattle King of West Virginia," being one of the largest growers, feeders and shippers of live stock in the state.

The wealth and prosperity and the great influence he enjoyed in later years were altogether the product of his personal energies and resourcefulness, since he started life poor boy and engaged four years of his early manhood to the lost cause of the Confederacy. He was born June 1, 1838, in Pendleton County, son of John and Sidney (Judy) McClure. His birthplace was on the North Fork, near the Village of Circleville. His childhood was spent at Franklin and he had such advantages as the schools of that day could bestow. Soon after reaching manhood he responded to the cause of the South, and became a member of the Sixty second Virginia Infantry and served with utmost faithfulness to duty through all the campaigns of his regiment. His younger brother, William, also joined the army and was killed near Lynchburg, Virginia, June 18, 1864.

John McClure after the war returned to Franklin and soon began investing his limited means in the cheap wild lands of that section of the state. He paid between $2 and $4 an acre. He followed the familiar custom of "hacking and deadening" to render the land available for pasturage and cultivation. The larger trees were deadened and cattle and sheep grazed until the small brush was killed out and subsequently hundreds of acres were converted into blue grass sod. From small beginnings Mr. McClure continued the buying and improvement of land until he owned 10,000 acres in Randolph, Pendleton and Pocahontas counties, and had about 7,000 acres of this in blue grass sod. Each year he handles between 2,000 and 2,500 head of cattle, some 600 sheep, and it was his custom to hold an annual horse sale. It was these operations that brought him distinction as one of the most successful stock men West Virginia ever had.

Not all his business interests were confined to land and live stock. At the time of his death he was president of the Farmers Bank of Pendleton, and for a number of years he was also interested in mercantile business in the Town of Franklin. He gave that town its lighting system and some of his financial investments were in enterprises and localities outside his home county and state.

In 1867 Mr. McClure was happily married to Rebecca Skidmore. Their married companionship continued for nearly half a century, being broken only by the death of

G. H. Wain

Mr. McClure on April 12, 1915. In 1878 he joined the Presbyterian Church of Franklin and was one of its faithful members nearly forty years. He never sought nor desired public office, but he found means of helpfulness in the community through the wisdom with which he counseled his fellow men, the leadership he took in business development, and the kindness which he repeatedly expressed in private transactions.

THEODORE GABRIEL LEAP, manager of the Ohio Valley Builders Supply Company at New Martinsville, is a native of that city, member of an old and substantial family there, and was educated for the law, but has found more active work in their business affairs, including a period of service with the Canadian forces during the World war.

Mr. Leap was born at New Martinsville November 24, 1889. In the paternal line he is of Irish ancestry, but the earl family was established in old Virginia in Colonial days. His grandfather, Gabriel Leap, was born near New Martinsville in 1826, spent all his life in Wetzel County, was one of the old time merchants of New Martinsville and died there in 1899, at the age of seventy-three. He married Eliza McLeod, who was born near New Martinsville in 1832 and died in 1918. This old couple were the parents of five children: Belle, of New Martinsville, widow of Levi Tucker, an oil operator; Susan, wife of William Stewart, a physician and surgeon at New Martinsville; Robert C.; Percy, president of a drug company at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania; and Clyde, cashier of the Ohio Gas Company at Cleveland.

Robert C. Leap has spent his life in New Martinsville, where he was born in 1865, and since early manhood has been in the real estate business, and has extensive and prosperous connections in that line. He is a democrat, has served on the New Martinsville City Council, and is a member of Magnolia Lodge No. 42, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and Doolin Lodge No. 129, Knights of Pythias. Robert C. Leap married Miss Lillian Hornbrook, who was born at Powhattan, Ohio, in 1873. She is the mother of two children, Theodore G. and Gertrude. The latter is the wife of Clay M. McCormick, resident of Pittsburgh, where he is settlement officer of the Potter Title & Trust Company.

Theodore G. Leap was educated in the public schools of New Martinsville, graduated in 1909 from the Marietta (Ohio) Academy, spent one year in Washington and Jefferson Academy in Pennsylvania, one year in Washington and Jefferson College, for a year and a half attended Washington and Lee University at Lexington, Virginia, and then after another year of study graduated in 1913 from the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa with his law degree, LL. B. During the fall of 1914 he took a post graduate course in the Kent College of Law in Chicago. Mr. Leap is a member of the Kappa Sigma and Alpha Delta Gamma college fraternities. On account of his qualifications as a lawyer he became a member of the official personnel of the Chicago headquarters of the Adams Express Company, where from 1915 to 1917 he served in the claim and legal departments, his work covering practically the entire United States for that corporation. He gave up this position and on November 16, 1917, enlisted in the Canadian Army, going overseas February 25, 1918. He landed at Liverpool, later proceeded to Witney Camp where he was put in training, and on July 17, 1918, reached LaHavre, France, with the Western Ontario Reserve Battalion. He was then transferred to the Strathcombe Horse Guard and was stationed in the Arras Sector and the Cambrai Sector, and participated in two major engagements. After the signing of the armistice he was returned to the United States and received his honorable discharge at Halifax, Nova Scotia, July 25, 1919.

After his war service Mr. Leap returned to New Martinsville and was connected with the Wetzel County Road Department until May, 1921, at which date he became secretary of the Wetzel Building Supply Company, with which he remained until February 1, 1922, when the Ohio Valley Builders Supply Company was organized and Mr. Leap became manager, being also one of the organizers. This company handles building materials of all kinds, and is the largest concern of its kind between Parkersburg and Wheeling. The business was incorporated in January, 1922, with a capital of twenty-five thousand dollars. The officers are: W. J.

Williamson, president; H. C. Hawkins, vice president; Theodore G. Leap, secretary and manager.

Mr. Leap is an independent voter. He is secretary of the New Martinsville Kiwanis Club and a member of Sistersville Lodge No. 333, B. P. O. E. He owns a modern home on Clark Street. September 22, 1921, he married in Chicago Miss Eleanor Golonowski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Golonowski, resident of Chicago, where her father is in the wholesale coal business. Mrs. Leap is a graduate of a Chicago high school.

GEORGE L. MCKAIN. A strong, intense and noble character was that of George Leonard McKain, who died in the City of Parkersburg on the 28th of July, 1918. His was a life of signal honor, of unremitting activity and worthy achievement, though, like many another man of exceptional initiative and inventive ability, he failed to reap due financial rewards. He was one of the world's productive workers, vital, resourceful and determined in the face of adverse conditions, and always ready to meet emergencies with courage and with the will that refuses to acknowledge failure. He was a pioneer in the oil industry in West Virginia, was the inventor of many devices of great practical value in connection with this important line of enterprise, and, above all, he ordered his life upon a high plane of integrity and honor, so that he ever commanded the unqualified confidence and respect of his fellow men.

Mr. McKain was born in Emlenton, Butler County, Pennsylvania, November 4, 1869, and thus was in the very prime of his strong and useful manhood at the time when death set its seal upon him. His parents, David and Katherine McKain, were born and reared in the vicinity of the City of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and his father was among the early and influential factors in oil producing industry in Pennsylvania, where such production in America had its inception. David McKain became widely known as one of the first oil contractors in the Pennsylvania fields, and his connection with the oil industry continued during virtually the entire course of his active business career. He is now venerable in years, and maintains his home in Washington, Pennsylvania, where his wife died March 4, 1921.

George L. McKain, the eldest of his parents' children, was reared in the atmosphere of the oil business, and in the meanwhile he profited by the advantages of the public schools of the old Keystone State. Owing to a serious accident that befell his father, he found it incumbent upon him when about seventeen years of age to assume practical charge of his father's business, and for some time the two were actively associated in the conducting of that business.

When the first oil wells were put down in Wetzel County, West Virginia, George L. McKain appeared on the stage of activities and began contracting in an independent way. There he passed about ten years in the most arduous of contract work, in the drilling of wells and the furthering of other phases of pioneer oil development in that county. The difficulties were increased by reason of the fact that at that time railroad facilities were lacking. He became an authority in all details of oil production, and, as he himself said in later years, he gained little except experience. At times he was successful in the gaining of productive wells, and at other times a series of unfortunate accidents and unfavorable contingencies were his portion. His restless energy knew no limitations, and in connection with his activities in the oil fields he utilized his inventive skill in devising tools and other accessories for use in the oil districts. Gradually he thus drifted into the manufacturing of "fishing" tools, and he became an expert in the fishing phase of oil-well enterprise. He invented and manufactured a number of original and effective fishing tools, and his manufactory turned out also a number of devices and tools not invented by him. He lost a fortune by neglecting to push his claims for patents on his inventions, many of which are now in general use in connection with oil operations throughout the Union. He was among the first to develop the system of using wire instead of rope cable in oil-well work, but he realized little or no financial profit from this or from many other of his inventions. Eventually Mr. McKain gave his undivided attention to the manufacturing of fishing tools, and he established a well equipped factory at Parkersburg. This manufacturing plant was to a large extent devoted to special forging work for the Government during the period of America's participation in the World war, and Mr. McKain early showed his patriotism by doing all in his power to foster the various war activities of the Government, but his death occurred about four months after the nation had become formally involved in the great conflict. His was a tragic death, but a death marked by characteristic nobility and unselfishness, for he lost his life by drowning in the Kanawha River while attempting to save the life of another person.

Mr. McKain completed the circle of each the York and Scottish Rites of the Masonic fraternity, in the latter of which he had received the thirty-second degree and in the former of which his maximum affiliation was with the commandery of Knights Templar in his home city. He held membership also in the Mystic Shrine and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

On Christmas day of the year 1890 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. McKain to Miss Lina Morton, of Bradford, Pennsylvania, and since his death she has continued to maintain her home at Parkersburg. Of the eight children seven survive the honored father, namely: Harriet K. (the wife of Lewis Ludlow), Edith M., Merrill M., Marjorie, George L., Walter P. and Lina L.

In all of the relations of a signally active and earnest life the late George L. McKain held himself true and loyal, and his name and memory shall be enduringly honored by all who came within the sphere of his influence.

FRANCIS EUGENE MARTIN, M. D. The community of New Martinsville recognizes Dr. Martin as one of the very able and proficient physicians and surgeons of Wetzel County. He has practiced there a dozen years, and his connections are those of a well established physician, a successful business man and a thoroughly public spirited citizen.

Dr. Martin is the third physician in as many generations of the Martin family. His father and grandfather both practiced medicine in Washington County, Ohio, at New Matamoras.

It was at New Matamoras that Francis Eugene Martin was born June 19, 1881, only child of Dr. John H. Martin and grandson of Dr. Francis Potts Martin. The Martins are an English family, were established in New Jersey in Colonial times, and later generations removed to Pennsylvania and from there to Ohio. Dr. Francis Potts Martin was born in Monroe County, Ohio, in 1836, graduated from the Barnesville Academy of Ohio and the Cincinnati School of Medicine, and his active career as a physician was spent in New Matamoras. He located there about 1862. However, when he retired from his profession he returned to Monroe County, and died at Clarington in 1917. He was a democrat, a Methodist and a member of the Masonic fraternity. His wife was Adaline Davis, who was born in Monroe County in 1843, and is now living at Marietta, Ohio. They were the parents of nine children, two of whom died in infancy, and the others were: Dr. John H.; Lillian, wife of Fred B. Wermuth, a jeweler at Pittsburgh; Thaddeus, superintendent of an oil refinery at Tulsa, Oklahoma; Nimrod, a barber at New Matamoras; Luther, a farmer at Cheshire, Ohio; Matilda of Marietta, Ohio, widow of Henry Stephens, who was an oil well contractor; and Lucy, wife of Thomas Fleming, a real estate man at Marietta. Dr. John H. Martin was born at Clarington in Monroe County March 3, 1861, but from early infancy has lived at New Matamoras. He graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore in 1893 with the M. D. degree. His service of nearly thirty years as a physician and surgeon at New Matamoras has earned him all the real distinctions of a capable, hard working and conscientious man in his profession. He has served as health officer of his home town, and many times has taken the lead in support of moral reforms and civic improvements. He is a democrat, a prominent member of the Methodist Church, a Knight Templar Mason, also affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, and with the Washington County, Ohio State and American Medical Associations.

Dr. John H. Martin married Amelia V. Burbacher, who was born at Woodsfield, Monroe County, June 18, 1863, but was reared and educated in New Matamoras.

Dr. Francis Eugene Martin grew up in his home town, graduated from the high school in 1900, and in 1905 received his M. D. degree from the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, his father's old school. He is a member of the Phi Beta Pi medical fraternity. Dr. Martin began practice after graduation at Friendly in Tyler County, remaining there a year and a half, and then located at New Martinsville. A year later he accepted the opportunity to serve as interne in the Haskins Hospital at Wheeling for a year. Since 1909 he has been busy with his general medical and surgical practice at New Martinsville, with offices in the Ober Building. He was Wetzel County's health officer three years, health officer of New Martinsville three years, and was elected president of the Board of Education but could not qualify because of the pressure of his professional duties. He is a member of the Wetzel County, West Virginia State and American Medical Associations. During the war he was commissioned a lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps, but was not called to active duty, though he did his share of home work in assisting in all the drives for funds.

Dr. Martin is a democrat, a member of the Official Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is affiliated with Wetzel Lodge No. 39, A. F. & A. M., and has taken fourteen degrees in the Scottish Rite Consistory No. 1 at Wheeling. He is a stockholder in the Doolin Building & Loan Association at New Martinsville.

June 24, 1908, at New Matamoras, he married Miss Nellie Grant Harvey, daughter of George W. and Lida (Talbot) Harvey, residents of New Matamoras, where her father is in the fire and life insurance business. Mrs. Martin is a graduate of Miss Phelps School for Girls at Columbus, Ohio. The two daughters born to their marriage are Nancy Katherine, born July 15, 1909, and Frances Eugenia, born July 14, 1915.

GEORGE A. HARMAN is County Court Clerk of Wetzel County, and was an active business man of New Martinsville before his accession to this public office. He is a member of a family that has supplied a number of most substantial citizens to the commercial life of Wetzel County.

He was born in Monroe County, Ohio, January 25, 1873. His grandfather, Samuel Harman, was born in Pennsylvania in 1816, and on leaving his native state settled in Belmont County, then in Monroe County, Ohio, followed farming and eventually, on retiring from the farm, located at New Martinsville, West Virginia, where he died in 1902, in advanced years. He was a democrat and a very devout member of the Christian Church. Samuel Harman married Mary Gates, who was of Scotch descent and who died in Monroe County, Ohio. Joseph S. Harman, father of George A., was born in Belmont County, Ohio, in 1844, but spent most of his early youth in Monroe County. In 1861, at the age of seventeen, he enlisted in the Seventy-seventh Ohio Infantry, and served until wounded at the battle of Shiloh, which incapacitated him for further military duty. After leaving the army he went out to Elgin, Iowa, where he married and where he learned the wagon making trade. Subsequently he returned to Monroe County and in 1873 settled at New Martinsville. He was an exceedingly skillful wagon maker, and in his shop at New Martinsville he made a number of strong and durable wagons that served a generation of users. Joseph S. Harman died at New Martinsville in 1912. He was a democrat, a member of the City Council several terms, and during the latter part of his life was chiefly identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church. He married Mary Bauder, who was born near Berne, Switzerland, in 1853, and is now living at New Martinsville. Of her children George A. is the oldest; Frank is a clothing merchant at New Martinsville; Ernest is deputy under his brother George; Charles owns a tailor shop at New Martinsville; Ross is in the plumbing business at New Martinsville; William is senior partner of J. W. Harmon, a clothing merchant at New Martinsville; Anna is the wife of Thomas G. Allen, assistant postmaster at New Martinsville; and two other sons, Julius and Clarence, who died in childhood.

George A. Harman was an infant when brought to Wetzel County, was reared in New Martinsville, attending grammar and high school there to the age of seventeen, and then learned the trade of blacksmith. Blacksmithing was his regular occupation until 1918, and after that he was in the firm of Roth & Harman, automobile dealers, until 1921, when he sold his interest to Mr. Roth. Mr. Harman was elected county clerk in November, 1920, beginning his six year term in January, 1921. He was elected as a democrat, and had been a candidate in the primaries in 1914 for the same office. He has been a member of the New Martinsville City Council several times, and as a councilman was a member of the City Water Board.

Mr. Harman is president of the Board of Stewards of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and secretary of the Sunday School. He is a Past Master of Wetzel Lodge No. 39, T. & A. M., and is a director in the Doolin Building and Loan Association at New Martinsville. During the war he was ready with his means and influence for every patriotic cause, whether it required active personal work or financial subscription.

Mr. Harman and family reside at 747 Maple Avenue. He married at New Martinsville in 1900 Miss Mollie Stamm, a native of Tyler County, West Virginia, and daughter of John and Mary (Wheeler) Stamm, who were born in Switzerland and now live in New Martinsville. Her father owns and operates a saw mill and has some extensive timber interests. The only son of Mr. and Mrs. Harman is Clarence S., who was born September 11, 1901. He is a graduate of the New Martinsville High School and is a graduate of the School of Pharmacy of West Virginia University.

JUDGE MARSH HAYMOND WILLIS. For steady, consecutive and, in the highest degree, useful work at the bar and on the bench Judge Willis would be accorded a first rank in his profession in any state of the Union. However, it is a matter of great satisfaction to him that his responsibilities as a brilliant and successful lawyer and jurist have been performed in a state where his lot was cast by birth and family associations.

Judge Willis was born in Ritchie County, January 31, 1862, son of N. G. and Louisa (Martin) Willis. He is of Revolutionary ancestry. The Willis family immigrated from England about 1635, settling in Virginia. There were two branches of this family, the Gloucester and the Fredericksburg branches. Judge Willis is a descendant of the Gloucester branch. His grandfather, Notley Willis, was born at Winchester, Virginia, in the year 1800. On the maternal side the Martin and the Clark families were also connected with the early Colonial history of the New World.

Marsh Haymond Willis' earlier years were spent upon his father's farm, where he obtained a whiplcord muscle and a physical development that have served him well as he advanced in life. He became a teacher in the common schools at the early age of sixteen, and for several years thereafter his time was given principally to that occupation. At the same time he was industriously engaged in the acquirement of knowledge and the development of his own vigorous and receptive intellect. For a time he was a student at the West Virginia University at Morgantown. Later he entered Valparaiso (Indiana) University, from which he graduated cum laude in 1886, being the Valedictorian of his class of seventy-six members. For a short time he engaged in school teaching in Dakota, Wisconsin and West Virginia, while at the same time he was engaged in reading law. In 1890 he was granted a license to practice in the Circuit Court of Doddridge County, where he resided for a number of years and built up a profitable clientele. His license was signed by the late Judges Thomas I. Boreman, J. Marshall Ilagan and Thomas Perry Jacobs. In 1900 he was named without opposition in convention as the republican candidate for judge of the Fourth Judicial Circuit to fill the unexpired term of Hon. Romeo H. Froer, who had resigned to accept a seat in Congress. He was elected and immediately entered upon the duties of his office. All of the counties of this circuit were in the oil belt and the work was very heavy. The Legislature of 1903 rearranged the judicial circuits, and in so doing took off Ritchie County, leaving Doddridge, Tyler and Wetzel together, and called the new circuit the Second instead of the Fourth. His work on the bench was so satisfactory to the bar and the people generally that he was renominated without opposition, and was re-elected for the full term of eight years.

Judge Willis while on the Circuit Bench moved his residence to New Martinsville, Wetzel County, and here since being relieved of his judicial responsibilities he has done some of his best work as a lawyer. In 1887 Judge Willis married Anita Magness, of Waterloo, Iowa. Their marriage was blessed with one child, Frances Louise, born January 21, 1892, and this daughter was with them until nearly ten years of age, her death occurring September 15, 1901.

JAMES H. ANDERSON. When, in the early part of the year 1921, this sterling citizen of Parkersburg turned over to his son the active control and management of the well equipped retail grocery establishment which he had long and successfully conducted, he had the distinction of being the oldest retail grocer of this city in point of consecutive identification with this line of enterprise. Mr. Anderson has been a resident of Parkersburg since 1878, and his course as a business man and loyal citizen has been so ordered as to gain and retain to him high place in the confidence and esteem of this community.

Mr. Anderson was born in the City of Washington, D. C., on the 2d of December, 1853, and is a scion of a family that was founded in America prior to the war of the Revolution. The original American representatives came from England, and the lineage shows a staunch English strain for many generations, with a vitalizing element of Irish blood. Jesse Anderson, great-grandfather of the subject of this review, was a soldier in the War of 1812 and lived to be more than 100 years of age. His son Thomas was the grandfather of him whose name initiates this sketch. William Thomas Anderson, father of James H., was a blacksmith by trade and followed his sturdy vocation in the national capital until after the close of the Civil war, when he removed to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, where he passed the remainder of his life. His widow, whose maiden name was Mahala Skidmore, was born in Alexandria County, Virginia, and after her death she returned to Washington, D. C., in which city her death occurred in 1904.

James H. Anderson found his boyhood and earlier youth marked by the disturbed conditions of the Civil war, and this fact, together with the absence of free schools and the necessity of his siding in the support of the other members of the family, caused his early educational advantages to be notable primarily for their absence. He did not learn to read or write until after he was seventeen years of age, but his alert mind and persevering effort enabled him to overcome in large measure his early educational handicap, and by self-discipline, careful reading and study and active association with men and affairs he effected a normal educational development in the passing years, with the result that he is a man of broad information and mature judgment. Until he had attained to the age of twenty-four years Mr. Anderson followed various vocations, including farm work, blacksmithing, railroading, milling, steamboating, operation of stationery engines, etc. In 1876 and 1877, under two special enlistments, he served in the United States Navy, on the United States steamships "Tallapoosa" and "Gedney." After receiving his final discharge from the latter vessel he forthwith made his way to Parkersburg, West Virginia, where for the first year he was employed as helper in a blacksmith shop. In this period he saved the sum of twenty-five dollars, and with this limited capital he then established himself in the green-grocer's business. His initial enterprise, as may readily be understood, was conducted on a very modest scale, but fair and honorable dealings and effective service caused his business to expand year after year, with the result that eventually his retail grocery establishment became one of the best equipped and most liberally supported in the city. He still retains his interest in the business, though since the early part of 1921 he has given its active management over to his son, who is well upholding the prestige of the family name in connection with this substantial enterprise.

Mr. Anderson has been significantly loyal and public-spirited as a citizen, and he has been called upon to serve in various positions of distinctive trust and responsibility. He is a staunch supporter of the principles of the republican party, and has been influential in its councils and campaign activities in Wood County for many years. He served two terms as a member of the City Council of Parkersburg, under the regimes of W. H. Smith and Harry Thomas as mayor, and in 1897 he was appointed chief of the police department of the city, an office in which he gave fifteen months of effective service, his resignation having then been prompted by his desire to give his undivided attention to his private business. In 1920 he was elected a member of the Board of County Commissioners of Wood County, for a term of six years, and his virtual retirement from business gives him ample opportunity to devote his time and attention to the governmental affairs of the county, which is certain to benefit by his conservative judgment and deep interest in all that touches the community welfare.

In the year 1881 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Anderson and Miss Sarah E. Garloch, of Belpre, Ohio, and their only living child, James S., is one of the representative young business men of his native city, where, as previously noted, he has charge of the retail grocery business established by his father many years ago. The second child, Eva V., died when five years of age.

LOUIS STORCK. The marked success that comes to some individuals is not hard to understand, because it invariably is the reward of persistent industry, directed by good judgment and supplemented by sterling qualities that engage confidence and command respect. These conditions bring success in every country where opportunity is offered, as it is in the United States, and it was the hope of finding this opportunity that brought Louis Storck, one of Parkersburg's prominent business men, to America before his boyhood was over.

Louis Storck was born in Prussia, Germany, February 25, 1877, a son of Adam Storck. He attended the common schools in his native province and learned many useful lessons, but by the time he was sixteen years old had found no opportunity to satisfy his ambition to get ahead in life and secure financial independence. Many of his friends and acquaintances reported themselves prospering in the United States, and in 1893 he took passage for this country, joining, after landing, former friends at Martin's Ferry, Ohio. From that day to this Mr. Storck has found legitimate opportunity and has had the good judgment to know how to take advantage of it.

For four years at Martin's Ferry he worked in a bakery and learned the business, going then to Bellaire, Ohio. There he was engaged for a few months as a shipping clerk for an enameling concern, after which he worked as a journeyman baker at Wheeling, West Virginia. In the meantime, in 1896, his brother Daniel had come to the United States and joined him, and in 1899 the brothers embarked in a bakery business at Wellsburg, West Virginia, starting out with a combined capital of $150, and they prospered. In January, 1903, Mr. Storck bought an interest in the Juergens Baking Company at Wheeling, a going concern which was incorporated in 1904, consolidating the Wellsburg and Wheeling plants and great progress was made in the next four years.

In 1908 W. J. Juergens sold his interest in the above business to F. H. Frazier, the former president of the Wheeling Bread Company, which plant had been destroyed by fire in that year. With the experience brought into the business by Mr. Frazier the corporation found it possible to expand and an extensive business was done during the next three years. In 1911 the business style became The General Baking Company, with headquarters in New York City. Mr. Frazier was elected secretary of that organization and Mr. Storck was made manager of the Wheeling plant, a position he filled with extreme efficiency until he resigned in November, 1919, and came to Parkersburg and went into business for himself, purchasing the bakery interests of the late J. W. Tonge. Mr. Storck has become one of the leading men in his line in this section and stands high in business circles here and elsewhere.

In 1908 Mr. Storck married Miss Minnie Schumann, of Wheeling, West Virginia, and they have two children: Elizabeth and Robert.

Mr. Storck is an active member of the Parkersburg Chamber of Commerce, and belongs to the Rotary Club and the Order of Elks. He is proud of his American citizenship having taken out his naturalization papers as soon as possible. During the great cataclysm of the World war he was loyal and helpful to his adopted country, being entirely in sympathy with all for which this country stands.

JULIUS LASKY. In paying just tribute to a man of sterling worth, high ideals and notable in contributions to charity his fellow citizens who revere his memory do not ask as to his native land. It is the man they honor, and in the United States of America the fact of his being the architect of his own fortunes but adds to the universal esteem. Thus the late Julius Lasky, an alien by birth and denied in boyhood many educational and social advantages by circumstance over which he had no control, through industry, integrity and natural business capacity became a man of large capital an encourager of many substantial enterprises at Parkersburg and elsewhere, and so financially able and so truly a loyal American that in the great World war he tendered his service to the United States Government as a dollar-a-year man.

Julius Lasky was born April 15, 1871, in Russia-Poland. He was ten years old when his father, Max Lasky, left the country with his family to seek better opportunities in the United States. For a time the foreign quarter in New York City was the family home, but later the father went to Georgia and became a merchant, and continued in that line until his death. He became an American citizen and rejoiced to be such without forgetting the many glorious pages in the history of his native land.

Julius Lasky was the eldest of his parents' children and early began to make himself useful. After moving to Georgia he assisted his father, and through early manhood traveled through the cotton districts as a peddler. Afterward he became a merchant at Bessemer, Alabama, and later at Aberdeen, Mississippi, and during this time learned the custom and acquired command of the language of this country. He returned then to New York City and went into a manufacturing business, but six months later decided to resume merchandising, and with this end in view came to West Virginia seeking first a satisfactory location at Wheeling, but subsequently deciding to make his home at Parkersburg. For nineteen years Mr. Lasky was a merchant in this city, a honorable, trustworthy, able man. He was an untiring worker for every conceivable civic betterment of his adopted city and was a valued member of the Rotary Club and other fraternal bodies.

At Bessemer, Alabama, February 12, 1893, Mr. Lasky married Miss Rose Brown, and three sons were born to them: Sol, Irvin and Manuel, who carry on the business which was founded by their father. When the World war was precipitated the youngest son, Manuel Lasky, was attending Marietta College and was an enrolled member of the Student Reserve Corps ready for military service.

During his many years at Parkersburg Mr. Lasky invested largely and wisely in real estate. He was essentially a business man and took no active part in politics or social life outside his own home, but he was mindful of the needs of others and many charities profited through his unostentatious benefactions. Mr. Lasky died in his home at Parkersburg May 17, 1921.

GEORGE E. LEAVITT, who is engaged in business in the City of Chattanooga, Tennessee, was born and reared in Wood County, West Virginia, and is a representative of one of the old and influential families of this section of the state. His father, Joseph P. Leavitt, was engaged in business in New York City and was a man of substantial financial status. In the '30s Joseph P. Leavitt closed out his business in the national metropolis and came to what was then the western part of the State of Virginia. In what is now the New England district of Wood County he purchased, at fifty cents an acre a tract of 1,000 acres of land, this property having at that time been virtually an untrammelled forest wild, with absolutely no improvements to represent interposition on the part of man. The tract was largely covered with walnut, oak and other hardwood timber, and at the prices which such timber commands at the present day the property would have made him immensely wealthy. Joseph P. Leavitt had the qualities which make for success in pioneer activities, for he adjusted himself to and effected the development of his environment, reclaimed much of his land to cultivation, and by his strong personality and well ordered activities he contributed much to the civic and material advancement of this now favored section of West Virginia, his name meriting a high place on the roster of the honored and influential pioneers of Wood County. Here he continued to reside until his death in 1881. Mr. Leavitt was more than once married, but the family records in this connection are far from being complete. The family name of one of his wives was Carr, and this name has been perpetuated in the personal or Christian names of a number of his descendants. Mary Elmondorf became the second wife of Mr. Leavitt. Charles P. and George E. Leavitt, two of the sons of this sterling pioneer, were gallant young soldier of the Union in the Civil war, and Charles P. is still living, his home being in the City of Columbus, Ohio. Virgil W. and Pierce, two other sons, were for a long period successful and popular teachers in the schools of Wood County, and many persons still residing in the county received early educational training under the effective direction of these brothers. Both Virgil W. and Pierce Leavitt eventually returned to Chattanooga, Tennessee, where the death of the former occurred and where the latter still resides. The family name has been one of prominence and influence in Wood County, and all of the children of the pioneer founder in this county are here remembered well and here stood exemplar of fine personal characteristics and exceptional ability.

George E. Leavitt, the son to whom this review is dedicated, was born on the old homestead estate in the New England District of Wood County, on the 15th of August, 1848, and to him, as to the other children, the father, who was a man of superior intellectuality, gave the best possible educational advantages. As a youth George E. Leavitt learned the cooper's trade, at which he became an expert workman, and it is related that his ambition led him to arise early in the morning and manufacture one or two barrels before breakfast, the penetrating sounds of his industry being the signal for the neighbors to leave their beds. The settlement consisted of less than a dozen houses at the time. By mistake Mr. Leavitt rose on one occasion at midnight and started working in his little cooper shop. The neighbors followed the call, as usual, and breakfast was prepared and eaten before the error in time was discovered. The protest that naturally arose was, it is needless to say, such that George E. never repeated the experiment. Later Mr. Leavitt became specially well known as one of the leading and successful exponents of bee culture in this section of the state, and he gained high reputation as an apiarist. He also became a prosperous merchant at New England, where he conducted a large and well equipped general store that furnished supplies to a large contingent of the people residing in that section of the country. He there continued his mercantile business many years, and long served as post master of the village. During the period of the Civil war Mr. Leavitt was a patriotic soldier of the Union, his service having been in a cavalry regiment and he having participated in many engagements, including a number of battles of major importance. That he lived up to the full tension of conflict is indicated by the fact that while in active service he had three horses shot while under him. Mr. Leavitt continued his residence in Wood County as one of the well known and highly respected citizens of his native county, until about the year 1909, when he removed to Chattanooga, Tennessee, where he and his wife have since maintained their home, a cordial greeting and entertainment being ever assured them on the occasions when they visit their old home in Wood County. Mrs. Leavitt, whose maiden name was Alice S. McGee, was likewise born and reared in Wood County. The only one of their children now residing in Wood County is Carr T., who is successfully established in the undertaking business in the City of Parkersburg, where he has a modern and well equipped place of business. Carr T. Leavitt was born in New England, this county, January 3, 1874, was here reared to manhood and here received the advantages of the public schools. On the 15th of June, 1899, he wedded Miss Catherine M. Hofmann, and of the six children of this union five are living. The names of the children are here recorded in the respective order of birth: Elizabeth A.,

Charles H., Carr T. Jr., (deceased), George Edward, Catherine L. and Ralph J.

ERNEST W. MACKLIN, assistant general superintendent of the Eureka Pipe Line Company, with headquarters at Parkersburg, has been almost continuously in the service of this and the Standard Oil Company since he was a schoolboy. He is well known in Parkersburg and in oil circles throughout the Ohio Valley.

Mr. Macklin was born in the north of Ireland, July 7, 1886, son of Robert T. and Sarah W. (Walker) Macklin. Robert T. Macklin while his family were growing up around him in Ireland became convinced that no real opportunities awaited them in their native country, and it was for the sake of his children largely that he brought his family to the United States in 1890 and settled in Pittsburgh. He lived there about twenty years, but in 1910 removed to Los Angeles, California, where he died in 1918 and where his wife passed away in 1919. They were the parents of four sons and two daughters, Ernest W. being the youngest. Henry W., the oldest, served through five enlistments in the United States Marine Corps, went around the world with his fleet, and is now a merchant in Los Angeles. Robert T. Jr., was a member of the National Guard of Pennsylvania, served in the Spanish-American war as a second lieutenant, and died at his home in San Bernardino, California, in 1920. The third son, James H., was in the signal corps of the Regular Army, had active duty in the Philippines and is also a resident of California. The two daughters are May, wife of David Finnigan, and Netta, wife of Charles McClinton.

Ernest W. Macklin was four years of age when brought to the United States, and his early education was acquired in the public schools of Pittsburgh. While still in his teens he went to work for the National Transit Company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, and remained in the service of that and other subsidiaries until 1911, when he came with the Eureka Pipe Line Company. Prior to that time his duties had taken him to different points around Pittsburgh and in West Virginia. In April, 1912, he established his permanent home at Parkersburg. Mr. Macklin also studied law in West Virginia University, passed the bar examination and was admitted to practice in all the courts of the state and in the Federal Court, and while he has never sought to build up a private clientele he employed his legal knowledge to advantage while associated with the general manager of the Eureka Pipe Line Company. In January, 1920, he was appointed assistant general superintendent at Parkersburg.

Mr. Macklin is a member of the Parkersburg Board of Commerce, the Rotary Club, the Country Club, the American Petroleum Institute, is a Royal Arch Mason, has attained thirty-two degrees in the Scottish Rite and is a member of Nemesis Temple of the Mystic Shrine.

In March, 1906, he married Miss Nana B. Ice, daughter of Dr. C. H. Ice, of Mannington, West Virginia.

WILLIAM C. STILES was a pioneer in the development of the oil industry in West Virginia and became one of the prominent oil producers in Wood County, where he established his residence in the Volcano District in the year 1864 and where he continued his successful activities for more than thirty years. His death having there occurred in December, 1896. A man of fine initiative and executive ability, he left distinct and worthy impress upon the history of civic and industrial development and progress in this section of the state, and as one who stood exemplar of the best in the civic and business life of the community he is properly accorded a tribute of honor in this publication. Mr. Stiles was the organizer of the Volcanic Oil & Coal Company, the Laurel Fork Oil & Coal Company, and of the Laurel Fork & Sand Hill Railroad Company, which built and placed in operation a line of railroad from Volcano Junction to Volcano. In his large and important enterprises he was associated with J. N. Camden, J. V. Rathbone, Samuel D. Karns and others whose names are written large in the record of industrial advancement in this part of West Virginia. Mr. Stiles became an extensive land owner, and in this connection was actively associated with farm enterprise on a large scale. He was progressive and public-spirited as a citizen, with a full recognition of the civic stewardship which individual success involves, and he gave characteristically effective service as a member of the Board of County Commissioners of Wood County. He was one of the first to advocate and insistently urge the construction of good roads, and advised the policy of making a certain amount of improvement along this line each successive year. The Volcanic Oil & Coal Company based its operation on a paid-up capital of $63,000, and earned for its stockholders nearly $1,000,000. The Laurel Fork Oil & Coal Company was capitalized for $25,000 and paid in dividends about $200,000. The construction and equipment of the Laurel Fork & Sand Hill Railroad involved the expenditure of about $193,000, and it was leased to a transportation company, this enterprise having resulted in financial loss to the promoters and builders.

Mr. Stiles had the sterling attributes of character and the genuine and sincere personality that enabled him to gain and retain friends, and his generosity was at times so taken advantage of as to result to his financial disadvantage. Buoyant and optimistic, he was tolerant in his judgment of others and permitted nothing to dislodge his confidence in the general integrity of his fellow men. In this respect he did not permit the individual instance to cause a lack of general faith in his fellow men. Mr. Stiles was not formally identified with any religious organization, but showed much appreciation of and gave liberal support to the Protestant Episcopal Church, besides aiding financially in the erection of many church buildings for various denominations, the while he was ever ready to give his influence and material support to objects and measures advanced for the general good of the community. In politics, with well fortified opinions concerning economic and governmental policies, he was a staunch republican, and all of his sons hold to the same political faith. The wife of Mr. Stiles preceded him to eternal rest. Their children were six in number: Edward, the first born, is deceased; Robert D. is prominently identified with oil-production enterprise in the State of Kentucky; Charlotte is deceased; Ella Virginia is the widow of William D. Supplee, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and they have two sons, William D., Jr., and Warner R., both of whom were in the nation's service in the World war; Albert M., who resides in the City of Parkersburg, metropolis and judicial center of Wood County, married Miss Ann Jennings, and they have twin sons; Samuel B., of Parkersburg, is president and general manager of the Zero Oil Company. He married Miss Meigs Jackson, of Clarksburg, and they are popular factors in the representative social life of Parkersburg.

WILLIAM H. KESSELMAN has contributed materially to the furthering of the oil industry in West Virginia, especially through the medium of his successful enterprise as a manufacturer of drilling and fishing tools used in connection with oil wells. His father became prominently identified with the same line of enterprise in Pennsylvania, and the family name has thus been associated with oil production for fully half a century. William H. Kesselman has a well equipped manufacturing plant in the City of Parkersburg, Wood County, and is one of the vital and successful business men of the metropolis and judicial center of Wood County.

Mr. Kesselman was born at New Castle, Pennsylvania, July 12, 1867, and is a son of William and Magdalene (Mosser) Kesselman, both of whom were born and reared in Germany, whence they came individually to the United States, where their marriage was solemnized at New Castle, Pennsylvania. In his native land William Kesselman served a thorough apprenticeship to the trade of locksmith, and he there continued work as a journeyman at his trade until he came to the United States. Here he continued to follow his trade until 1871, when he removed with his family to Parkersburg, Pennsylvania, and there engaged in the manufacturing of oil-well tools. With the extending of oil discoveries in the Keystone State he removed to St. Joe, Pennsylvania, where he continued his manufacturing enterprise, as did he later at Butler, that state, where he and his wife passed the remainder of their lives and where the shop which he established is still in operation. In coming to the United States he was prepared to enter fully into the interests of the land of his adoption, and as soon as possible he completed the technical course of procedure that made him a naturalized citizen. He was a man of unassuming personality, quiet and industrious, strong in purpose, well fortified in his convictions and honorable and upright in all of his relations of life. He was prosperous in his undertakings as was a loyal and appreciative citizen of his adopted land until the close of his long and useful life. Of the children five are still living, and of the number the subject of this sketch was the third in order of birth.

William H. Kesselman was reared in the old Keystone State and is indebted to its public schools for his early education. As a youth he gained practical experience in connection with his father's manufacturing industry, and from his boyhood to the present he has been closely associated with the oil-well supply business. In 1896 he came to Parkersburg and erected the present manufacturing plant of Kesselman & Company, of which he is the manager and part owner, as is he also of the one founded by his father at Butler, Pennsylvania. The enterprise was initiated on a modest scale, but the business of the firm has been extended until it now covers the various oil-producing states of the Union.

In politics Mr. Kesselman designates himself independent and as a citizen he is loyal, progressive and public-spirited. He is an active member of Parkersburg Board of Commerce and the local Kiwanis Club, both of which have done much to advance the civic and commercial interests of the city, and in the Masonic fraternity he has received the chivalric degrees of the York Rite as a member of the local commandery of Knights Templar, besides having attained to the third second degree of the Scottish Rite and is also affiliated with the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

On February 11, 1901, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Kesselman and Miss Annie E. Murphy, of Bellaire, Ohio. They have no children.

GLEN WALTON BREWSTER, M. D., whose residence at professional headquarters are maintained at Roderfield McDowell County, is here the official physician and surgeon for the Fall River Pocahontas Colliery Company and the Hampton Roads, Flanagan and Marim Commerce companies, besides which he has built up a large and representative private practice in this industrial community.

The doctor was born at Squire Jim (now McDowell Po Office), a McDowell County village named in honor of his uncle, James Brewster, who long served as justice of the peace in the community, and whose homestead farm, known as Newhall, was near the line dividing McDowell County and Tazewell County, Virginia. The date of Doctor Brewster's birth was April 16, 1880, and he is a son of Andrew Crockett Brewster and Mary (Daniels) Brewster. The Brewster family was early established in Tazewell County, Virginia, and Andrew Crockett Brewster, a son of Andrew Brewster, was born in that section of Virginia that now constitutes McDowell County, West Virginia. Andrew Brewster and five of his sons were loyal soldiers of the Confederacy in the Civil war. Andrew Brewster was lost one of the representative farmers of McDowell County, served as president of the County Court, was influential in all public affairs in his community, and he and his wife were members of the Christian Church.

Andrew C. Brewster was reared on the old home farm and for many years continued his successful alliance with the farm industry in McDowell County. In early years he was a great hunter, and he made a record of killing more than 1,200 bears, he having been widely and familiarly known as "Uncle Fuller." In 1897 he removed with his family to Welch, the county seat, where he became associated with his son Clinton D. in the mercantile business and engaged also in the real estate business. He was active and influential in politics, and he served as county assessor, county jailer, member of the City Council and finally as mayor of Welch. He was a republican and was a zealous member of the Christian Church, as is also his widow, who still resides at Welch, where he died in 1915, at the age of sixty-five years. John Daniel Brewster, eldest of the children, was a merchant at Newhall at the time of his death when fifty years of age; Robert G. is now an extensive ange grower and real estate dealer in the State of Florida; r. Glen W., of this sketch, was next in order of birth; and Clinton D. is individually mentioned in a personal cord on other pages of this work. The father was a leader of the Confederate service in the war between the North and the South.

After the discipline of the public schools at Welch Doctor Brewster continued his studies in Tazewell College, Tazewell, Virginia. At the age of eighteen he entered the medical department of the Louisville Medical College, Kentucky, in which he was graduated in 1903, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After a short period of practice at Welch he served as railroad surgeon and physician in various construction camps during the building of the Norfolk and Western Railroad lines through this section of West Virginia, in which capacity he cared for the ill and injured, hospitals being then available, so that he often performed operations on patients who were placed on tables, provided of boards and placed in tents or primitive cabins. He finally engaged in practice at Davy, McDowell County, where he also conducted a drug store five years. He then is engaged in practice for a brief interval at Ashland, Kentucky, and upon his return to his native county he engaged in mine and private practice at Roderfield, where he has since continued his earnest and effective ministrations in his exacting profession. The doctor is a republican, is affiliated with the American Medical Association, the West Virginia State Medical Society and the McDowell County Medical Society. He and his wife are active members of the Christian Church.

In 1903 Doctor Brewster married Miss Beatrice Hardin, daughter of James Hardin, the marriage ceremony having occurred the day after his graduation in medical college. Dr. Brewster was born in Henry County, West Virginia, and Mrs. Brewster have three children: Lester C., is, in 1922, a student in the Kentucky Military Institute, and preparing to enter the medical department of the University of Louisville, with the intention of specializing in surgery, as has his father, both as a student and practitioner. The younger children are both daughters, Pearl and Millie Marie, both at the parental home and attending school.

HARRY A. MCCOY is superintendent of Mines Nos. 1, 2, 4 and 5 of the Dexcar Pocahontas Coal Company at Twin Branch and Hensley, McDowell County, and maintains his executive headquarters at Twin Branch.

Mr. McCoy was born at Yellow Branch, Campbell County, Virginia, June 10, 1885, and is a son of Dr. James W. and Mary (Barnes) McCoy. Doctor McCoy died at Twin Branch, March 18, 1922, aged sixty-eight years. He had been formerly physician in charge of mine practice at Big Sandy, this county. The doctor came to the West Virginia coal fields of this district at the initiation of development work, in 1891, at the time when the Norfolk & Western Railroad was extending its line into this district. He was born in 1854, was graduated in the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania as a member of the class of 1876, and became a pioneer physician and surgeon at the Pawnee Indian Agency in Indian Territory, where he remained until 1881. Thereafter he was engaged in practice in Virginia, at Lynchburg and Rusty, until 1891, when he came to McDowell County, West Virginia, and established his residence at Welch, his early practice here having been principally in railroad construction camps on the Norfolk & Western. He thus continued until 1894, and thereafter was engaged in practice at Lynchburg, Virginia, until 1901, when he became physician in a large sawmill and timber camp in South Carolina. In 1903 he returned to McDowell County, where he became mine physician and surgeon at Big Sandy. From 1906 until his death he resided at Twin Branch and continued his practice largely to service as relief physician and surgeon in connection with mining operations in this field. The doctor was a republican, was affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, was a member of the Presbyterian Church. His death holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Of their five children the eldest, John A., has until recently been in Government service at Washington, D. C., as a lumber expert in the quartermaster's department of the United States Army service, he having been in this service during the period of the World war. Carrie, the next younger of the children, is the wife of A. S. Perkins, of Richmond, Virginia. Harry A. is the immediate subject of this sketch. Wesley C., who is now in the employ of the New England Coal & Coke Company, at Lowsville, West Virginia, served in the World war as a member of the Fifth Regiment of the United States Marine Corps, was actively identified with the operations of the American forces on the battle lines in France and later was with the Allied Army of Occupation at Coblenz, Germany. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal of the United States and also the French Croix de Guerre. Thomas R. is an engineer for the Turkey Gap Coal Company at Dott, Mercer County, West Virginia, and in the World war period he served two years as yeoman on the United States Navy Ship Florida, in the North Sea.

Dr. James W. McCoy was a son of Dr. John A. McCoy, who was a surgeon in the United States Army, with the rank of captain, and who was in service with the Fourth Pennsylvania Cavalry in the Civil war, with the army of General Sherman. In the latter part of the war he was stationed at Lynchburg, Virginia, and he died in Campbell County, that state, at the age of sixty-seven years. The first representatives of the McCoy family in America came to this country with the British troops that here took part in the early French and Indian war, the original home of the family having been in Scotland. Members of the family were patriot American soldiers in the war of the Revolution. In the Colonial period the family was given, by the United States Government, a grant of land in Butler County, Pennsylvania, in recognition of service in the Revolutionary war. For many generations the custom of the McCoy family has been to name the first son in each generation John A.

The early educational advantages of Harry A. McCoy included those of the high school at Lynchburg, Virginia, and after leaving school he was employed a year in a shoe factory, later becoming a bookkeeper. He finally became bookkeeper in the home offices of the Virginia Life Insurance Company at Richmond, and his next service was in the offices of the State Mutual Life Insurance Company at Rome, Georgia. He later served as bookkeeper for the Georgia Engineering & Construction Company, and in 1907 he became pay-roll clerk for the J. B. B. Coal Company at Twin Branch, West Virginia. He made advancement through the grades of service, as supply and shipping clerk, purchasing agent, chief clerk and mine superintendent, and in the last mentioned capacity he is giving effective administration as mine superintendent for the Dexcar Pocahontas Coal Company. In the Masonic fraternity he is a past master of the Blue Lodge at Welch, is affiliated with the Chapter of Royal Arch Masons at Northfork, the Commandery of Knights Templars at Bluefield, and the Temple of the Mystic Shrine in the City of Charleston. The year 1922 finds him the incumbent of the office of chancellor commander of Twin Branch Lodge of the Knights of Pythias.

In 1910 Mr. McCoy wedded Miss Esther Mabel Harris, daughter of S. S. Harris, of Davy, McDowell County, and her death occurred in February, 1917. She is survived by two children, John A. and Louise. A daughter, Helen Virginia, died June 15, 1916. In 1913 Mr. McCoy married Miss Nancy Ellen Straughan, daughter of W. A. Straughan, of Huntington, this state, and she is the popular chateleine of their pleasant home.

WILLIAM G. COOPER, who is giving a most excellent administration as cashier of the Bank of Davy, at Davy, McDowell County, was born at Brushfork, Mercer County, West Virginia, September 28, 1886, and is a son of James A. and Theodosia (Taber) Cooper, who now reside at Athens, this state. James A. Cooper is a son of Captain William A. Cooper, who was in (1921) mayor of Athens and who was eighty-six years of age at the time of his death, December 21, 1921. Captain Cooper was a man of remarkable personality, and his vigor of mind and physical powers indicated that the years rested lightly upon him. He was the first mayor of the City of Bluefield, he having owned a large tract of land now included in the central part of that city, which was originally known as Cooperstown. The Captain was born in what is now Summers County, West Virginia, the family having been one of prominence in connection with the pioneer history of the portion of Virginia now constituting West Virginia. Captain Cooper gained his military title through loyal service as an officer in the Confederate Army in the Civil war. He is an active member of the Christian Baptist Church and was liberal in the support of churches and schools. He erected the first building of the Concord Normal School, at Athens, this being now a state normal school, and the original building, constructed in 1871, having been a log structure. The Captain was the oldest member of Concord Lodge No. 48, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Athens, and it is interesting to record that his son James A. and the latter's son, William G., the immediate subject of this sketch, are likewise affiliated with this lodge. William G. Cooper now wears the Masonic ring that was worn by his grandfather for many years he having been presented with this heirloom because he was the first grandson of Captain Cooper to become a Mason. James A. and Theodosia (Tabor) Cooper became the parents of ten children, of whom four sons and four daughters are living, William G. being eldest of the number.

William G. Cooper was graduated from the West Virginia State Normal School, still known as the Concord Normal, at Athens, and in the pedagogic profession he made an excellent record. He taught one year in the graded schools at Matonka, Mercer County; two years in a rural school on Crane creek, that county; where he taught the higher branches and his wife the lower branches of study; and he was for two years a popular teacher in the schools at McDowell, McDowell County. In 1915 Mr. Cooper became assistant postmaster at Gary, McDowell County, where he continued his service in charge of the office until September 8, 1917, when he entered the United States Army for World war service. He was assigned to the Three Hundred and Fifteenth Heavy Artillery, and received his preliminary training at Camp Lee, Virginia. With his command he landed at Bordeaux, France, June 10, 1918, and soon afterward was on the battle line in the St. Mihiel sector. Later he was at the front on the Meuse-Argonne sector for fifty-six consecutive days. He received a wound in one of his hands, and in November, 1918, was severely gassed. He was serving as ammunition sergeant at the time he was wounded, at Dead Man's Hill, September 26, and after being a victim of gas attack, on the 3d of the following month, at Romagne, he was sent to the base hospital at Bordeaux, where he was confined until December 20. He was in active service one year and two days, and received his honorable discharge at Camp Lee, Virginia.

After his discharge from the army Mr. Cooper returned to Gary, where he served one year as payroll clerk of Mine No. 11 of the United States Coal Company. Thereafter he was in charge of the Gary Club House until October, 1920, when he became assistant cashier of the Bank of Athens, from which he came to accept his present position, that of cashier of the Bank of Davy. His Masonic affiliations include his membership in the Chapter of Royal Arch Masons at Athens. He is also a member of the Eastern Star, Athens Chapter No. 33. He is a member also of the American Legion. He and his wife, Placette, a daughter of Joseph Thompson, are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Athens.

FRANK JEROME COLLISON, M. D., has been engaged in his duties as a physician and surgeon for thirty years, and has been located at Bluefield since 1917 as medical examiner of the Relief and Pension Departments of the Norfolk & Western Railway. Doctor Collison for a number of years practiced at Columbus, Ohio, and both there and in West Virginia is recognized as a man of unusually high attainments in his profession.

He was born in Washington County, Ohio, September 3, 1867, son of William and Drusilla (Nulton) Collison. His parents were natives of Ohio, where his father devoted his life to the farm and to his home and family.

Doctor Collison attended the common schools of his native county, graduated from the high school at Beverly, Ohio, in 1885, and finished the scientific course in the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio. Following that for three years he taught school in Colorado, and then returned East and began the study of medicine in the medical department of the University of Maryland at Baltimore. After graduating he took one year's special course in surgery at the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia and for two years was an interne in the Massachusetts Hospital for the Insane at Bridgewater. All these were years of earnest preparation for his independent practice as a physician and surgeon, which he carried on at Columbus, Ohio, until 1917, when he removed to Bluefield for special duties as medical examiner for the Norfolk & Western Railway. His official duties comprise a wide range of work, since all the injured in accidents are attended to him, and this means a great deal of surgical work. His district extends from Walton to Davy and all the intermediate branches. He has three assistants.

In 1890, at Columbus, Ohio, Doctor Collison married Miss Mae O'Hara, daughter of Michael and Nancy O'Hara, natives of Ohio. Dr. and Mrs. Collison are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He is a member of the County, State and American Medical Associations and the Association of Railway Surgeons, and fraternally is affiliated with the Masonic Lodge, Woodmen of the World, Elks and Knights of Pythias.

EDWARD WALDSCHMIDT is a native of Alsace, where he gained his common school education and learned a trade, but he sought his opportunities in America, and in this country has extended his energies in various forms of useful service, has established a family, an honored name, and for years has been one of the prominent business men and citizens of Parkersburg, where he is president of the Ideal Corrugated Box Company.

Mr. Waldschmidt was born in Alsace, France, February 22, 1862, son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Frauenfeld) Waldschmidt. His father was a customs officer on the Rhine until 1870, when he became a pensioner of the French Government. He and his wife had four sons and six daughters. The oldest son, Fred, served in the French Army in the Franco-Prussian war, was captured at Metz and held a prisoner six months at Magdeburg, and when the war was over in 1871 he came to the United States, being the first of the family to become an American. He died at Pittsburgh in 1919. Several of his sons were soldiers in the American Army during the World war. All four sons of Daniel Waldschmidt came at different times to the United States and two of them Parkersburg has claimed as citizens.

Edward Waldschmidt had a common school education, served an apprenticeship at the shoemaker's trade in Alsace, and at the age of eighteen left his native land to begin his real life in America. In 1883, at the age of twenty-one, he joined his older brother, Fred, in a shoe manufacturing establishment at Pittsburgh. In 1885 they bought a factory at Watsonstown, Pennsylvania, where the two factories were consolidated. Mr. Edward Waldschmidt sold his interest in this business in 1898, and for six years following was superintendent of a factory at Tyrone, Pennsylvania. Where there he manufactured goods for the Graham-Bumgarner Company, then a jobbing house making a specialty of shoes at Parkersburg. Eventually the Graham-Bumgarner Company decided to establish a factory of its own for the manufacture of workmen's shoes, and Mr. Waldschmidt was invited to come to Parkersburg and supervise the establishment and management of the factory. Thus he became a resident of the city in 1906, and for nine years was superintendent of the Graham-Bumgarner Company's factory. This, it may be stated incidentally, was the first factory of its kind in West Virginia. Since then Mr. Waldschmidt's business interests have taken on a broad scope. In April, 1915, he and two others organized the Ideal Corrugated Box Company. He has been president from the beginning, and though the original plant and capital were small it is now rated as one of the important industries of Parkersburg.

Edward Waldschmidt

one of the few factories that have experienced practically no drop in times of depression.

Mr. Waldschmidt is thoroughly American in spirit as well as in the letter of good citizenship. He is a member of the board of Commerce at Parkersburg, a Presbyterian, a republican, and a member of the Masonic Order. In 1890 he married Miss Rosanna Kamp, of Turbotville, Pennsylvania. Three children were born to their marriage: Chester, who died in infancy; Martha E., wife of B. B. Reger, and they have one child, Evelyn Catherine; and Catherine M.

JAMES B. EADES, D. O. Immediately on graduating as Doctor of Osteopathy Doctor Eades entered the medical service of the Navy during the World war, and was on duty over six months with the rank of lieutenant. Then after a post-graduate course he located for practice at Bluefield, where he enjoys an exceptionally high standing not only with the public but with the older schools of medicine as well.

Doctor Eades was born at Roanoke, Virginia, February 1, 1892, son of William Henry and Alice (Nash) Eades. His parents were born in Virginia. His grandfather Eades was a native of Scotland. His grandfather Nash came from Ireland, and served in the Civil war, being shot at the battle of Bull Run and dying from his wounds. William Eades has for a number of years been a mechanic in the service of the Norfolk & Western Railway Company.

James B. Eades attended the common and high schools at Roanoke, also was a student in Roanoke College at Salem, Virginia, and prepared for his profession in the American School of Osteopathy at Kirksville, Missouri, where he graduated D. O. in June, 1918.

In the meantime, on May 24, 1918, he volunteered his services and went to Washington, D. C., as an officer in the Medical Corps of the first Navy Hospital. For one month he was assigned to duty in the Dispensary at the Navy Yard in Norfolk, Virginia, and then was put in the U. S. Naval Base Hospital at Hampton Roads, where he was connected with the surgical staff in the operating room and continued on duty until January 4, 1919, when he was discharged and returned to Roanoke. He is still a member of the Medical Reserve Corps, subject to call.

On leaving the army Doctor Eades went to Chicago and spent a year in the Chicago School of Osteopathy. January 3, 1920, he located at Bluefield, and is the leading representative of Osteopathy in the city, and a large part of his practice has come to him on recommendation from representatives of the old schools of medicine.

Doctor Eades has a very able helper and assistant in his profession in Mrs. Eades, an accomplished young woman, active socially and looking after the office routine of Doctor Eades. Dr. and Mrs. Eades were married at Kirksville, Missouri, in May, 1918. Her maiden name was Harriet Lula Smith, and she also belongs to an old family of Roanoke, Virginia, being a daughter of Samuel Henry and Mary Cora (Nowlin) Smith, natives of Virginia. Both the grandfathers of Mrs. Eades were in the Civil war, her grandfather Nowlin on the Confederate side and her grandfather Smith in the Union Army. Grandfather Nowlin died at the advanced age of eighty-nine. Doctor Eades is a member of the State and American Associations of Osteopathy, a member of the Kiwanis Club, and is a Royal Arch and Knight Templar Mason and Shriner. He and Mrs. Eades are members of the Methodist Church, South.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY MAYS is one of the vigorous and enterprising younger citizens of Bluefield, where he is manager of the Bluefield Bottling Company. This company is one of three bottling plants operated by the Keystone Bottling Company or the C. W. Elliott & Company. The business was started at Bluefield on a small scale in 1907, and in recent years it has enjoyed remarkable growth and expansion. Only recently Mr. Mays took possession of a complete new plant in a new building specially erected at Bluefield Avenue and Cherry Street.

Mr. Mays was born at Levelevin, Pittsylvania County, Virginia, December 16, 1896, son of W. R. and Queen Elizabeth (Jacobs) Mays. W. R. Mays was a substantial tobacco farmer in Virginia, and died in March, 1921, at the age of sixty. He was a democrat and a Baptist. He was four times married, and altogether had fourteen children. William McKinley Mays was the oldest of these children and was a small child when his mother died. He acquired his early education in home schools, and finished with six months in Valparaiso University in Indiana. At the age of eighteen he was at work driving a six mule team on road construction. He did that for fifteen months, and for nine months worked as a car repairer at Kimball, West Virginia, for the Norfolk and Western Railroad. On leaving that service the Virginia Bridge Company employed him four days at Roanoke, Virginia, and he left that to enter the employ of the Keystone Bottling Company at Norfolk. Ten days later he was transferred to Williamson, West Virginia, as bottler, and after nine months was promoted to manager of the plant.

He was still at Williamson when he volunteered his service to the Government at the time of the World war. He was assigned to duty with the Merchant Marine at Boston, and for three months was on a training ship and the rest of the time he did the heavy manual labor of coal heaver. He still has a reminder of his service in the loss of one finger. Mr. Mays received his discharge in February, 1919, and returned to Williamson and a month later was made manager of the business at Bluefield. He is a popular citizen of this industrial city, is a member of the Loyal Order of Moose and a democrat in politics.

PATRICK J. KELLEY has been a resident of Bluefield since 1890, was one of the first merchant tailors of the city, and his interests have kept pace with the expansion of this commercial and industrial city through all the years. He is president of the Husbands Creamery Company and president of the National Armature Company, two of the leading industries of the city.

Mr. Kelley was born at Pottsville, Pennsylvania, March 12, 1865, son of John J. and Ellen F. (Nolan) Kelley. His parents were natives of Ireland, his father of Tipperary and his mother of Kilkenny. They came to the United States when young people, were married at Pottsville, Pennsylvania, and spent the rest of their lives in Schuylkill County. John J. Kelley was a coal miner, and died at the age of sixty-three, and his wife survived him until 1917, when she passed away at the age of ninety-six. They were devout Catholics. Of their nine children Patrick was next to the youngest. The other two still living are at Pottsville, James, formerly in the real estate business, and Mrs. John P. Bell.

Patrick J. Kelley when only eight years of age was employed as a breaker boy at the coal mines, picking out the slate. At the age of eleven he began an apprenticeship at the barber's trade, but four years later took up tailoring. In the meantime he attended school when time and other duties permitted.

It was his knowledge and experience of the tailoring business that he brought as his chief capital to Bluefield when he located in the small and muddy village in 1890. He conducted a tailoring shop on Raleigh Street. In later years Mr. Kelley became interested in a broader scope of business and in 1907 was one of the organizers of the Bluefield Brewing Company, and served as its vice president and general manager. When the brewery was converted into a creamery he became president of the business. The National Armature Company, of which he is president, is an industry occupying part of the brewery plant. He is also a director of the Flat Top National Bank.

Mr. Kelley is one of Bluefield's most popular citizens. He has been treasurer of the Elks Lodge since 1899, was president in 1920 of the Bluefield Country Club, and for several years was a member of the City Council. He is affiliated with the Knights of Columbus and he and his family are members of the Sacred Heart Catholic Church.

In 1899 he married Miss Virginia Baldwin, daughter of Capt. D. B. Baldwin. They have three children: Helen Virginia, wife of C. L. Stacy, of Bluefield; William D., of Lexington, Virginia, where he is attending school; and P. J., Jr.

THOMAS HARLOWE SCOTT is a highly educated and thoroughly efficient lawyer, with a good practice established at Bluefield, where he has been located for the past eight or nine years.

Mr. Scott was born at Fire Creek in Fayette County, West Virginia, January 6, 1883, and still has the best years of his life before him. His parents were Charles Henry Franklin and Barbara (Billie) Scott, natives of Virginia. His father for many years was foreman of the coke yards of the Caswell Creek Coal and Coke Company.

Thomas Harlowe Scott had an early environment conveniently removed from poverty as well as from luxury, and as a youth he learned the value of thrift and work and most of his education above the common schools he acquired through his own efforts and earnings. He graduated from the Bramwell High School of West Virginia in 1897, then attended the Concord Normal at Athens, West Virginia, securing his diploma in music in 1899 and graduating in the academic course in 1900. For about a year following he was assistant bookkeeper for the Lick Branch Collieries of the Norfolk Coal and Coke Company, now part of the Pocahontas Fuel Company. In the fall of 1901 he left this employment to enter the University of Virginia at Charlottesville, where he spent two years in his preparatory course and in 1904 entered the University of Michigan, where he continued his law studies until graduating LL. B. in 1907. Mr. Scott was admitted to the bar at the age of twenty-four, and for five years engaged in practice at Pineville, Wyoming County, West Virginia. He was associated with James H. Gilmore and was also United States commissioner, and in that capacity had some very interesting cases before him.

In the fall of 1913 Mr. Scott located at Bluefield, where he has given his time to a general practice. He is a member of the County Bar Association, is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and is chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Grand Lodge of the state. He and Mrs. Scott are active in church work, he as a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and Mrs. Scott as a Presbyterian.

In his professional career Mr. Scott has the invaluable aid and inspiration of Mrs. Scott, who spends much of her time with him in the office, and is a very practical assistant to a progressive lawyer. Mrs. Scott is a graduate also of the State Normal School at Athens, and has taught in the public schools of the state. Mr. Scott married at Charleston, West Virginia, October 9, 1918, Mrs. Roberta Higginbotham, formerly Miss Roberta Kesler, of Lowell, West Virginia, daughter of H. F. and Ella (Lively) Kesler, natives of Virginia. Her father was a farmer, took a very active part in public affairs, and for over twenty-five years was engaged in educational work and at one time was county superintendent of schools in Summers County, West Virginia. Mrs. Scott represents a prominent family on her mother's side. She is descended from Cottrell Lively, who was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. Col. Wilson Lively, son of Cottrell, was a member of the State Senate of Virginia during the Civil war and dropped dead of heart failure at Richmond when he heard of Lee's surrender. Mr. Frank Lively is now one of the justices of the Supreme Court of West Virginia.

JAMES SANSOME LAKIN, president of the state board of control, was born at Moundsville, West Virginia, the son of Rev. Calvin H. and Catherine Finney Lakin. He is a direct descendant of Abraham Lakin (born 1713, died 1796), who received from King George of England title deeds for a tract of land in Frederick County, Maryland, which has passed from father to son through many generations and is still in the Lakin name, being now the homestead of William Gerry Lakin.

Rev. Calvin Harrison Lakin, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born near Freeport, Ohio, on June 29, 1838, and married Catherine Finney, of Tuscarawas County, Ohio, on March 26, 1863. He retired after a half century of honorable and active service as a minister of the Gospel of Jesus Christ in the West Virginia and Iowa conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, including a term of years as presiding elder of the Oakland, Maryland and Huntington, West Virginia districts, residing at that time in Huntington, where he died in February, 1918. He is buried in Spring Hill Cemetery by the side of his beloved wife, who preceded him to the grave in October, 1910.

James S. Lakin received his education in Fairmont State Normal School, at Fairmont, West Virginia, and at Wesleyan University, at Delaware, Ohio. While attending the last named institution he met a young woman student named Lura Oliva Lakin, daughter of George W. Lakin of Columbus, Ohio, who became his wife on November 18, 1899. To them three children have been born, James Offutt, Marion Elizabeth and Florence Catherine. On December 21, 1921, James Offutt Lakin married Miss M. Guerite Baker, of Morgantown, West Virginia, the daughter of General and Mrs. George C. Baker of that city. M. Guerite Baker Lakin graduated from Smith College, Northampton, Massachusetts, in 1921. Marion Elizabeth graduated from the same college in 1922. James Offutt graduated from West Virginia University in 1922, and Florence Catherine attends Charleston High School, from which she expects to graduate in 1923.

For a number of years Mr. Lakin was engaged in the mercantile and timber business, with headquarters at Teatonsville, West Virginia. He was president of the First National Bank of Terra Alta and a director of the Teatonsville Bank. His interest and activity in politics and public affairs have been of the most ardent nature. He was several terms a member of the Republican Executive Committee of Preston County. In 1912 he was chairman of the Republican State Committee, and in 1920 he was elected delegate to the Republican National Convention at Chicago and represented West Virginia there as a member of the "Big Four" delegation. In 1900 he was appointed by Gov. Albert B. White as a director of the West Virginia Asylum at Huntington, West Virginia, and was reappointed in 1904 by Gov. W. M. Dawson. In 1905 he was a candidate on the republican ticket for Congress in the Second Congressional District of West Virginia, to succeed Hon. A. G. Dayton, who had been appointed to a federal judgeship, but was defeated by a very narrow margin by C. Thomas B. Davis of Keyser, West Virginia, a brother of Hon. Henry G. Davis. His service as a member of the board of directors of the West Virginia Asylum and his other business qualifications led Gov. W. E. Glascock to appoint him in 1909 as one of the three members of the newly created state board of control, which was to have full charge of the business and financial affairs of all state educational institutions, now twelve in number, and to exercise complete control and management of all of West Virginia's penal, charitable and correctional institutions, now fourteen in number. He has been a member of that board ever since, having been reappointed in July, 1921 by Gov. E. Morgan for his third consecutive term. When the board first organized on July 1, 1909, he was elected president, and has served in that executive capacity continuously, excepting the four years of Gov. John J. Cornell's administration. The other members of the board were Thomas E. Hodges, of Monongalia County, and John Sheppard of Mingo County. During the past thirteen years the following men have served with him as members of that board: Dr. E. B. Stephenson, of Kanawha County; Dr. J. M. Williamson, of Marshall County; William M. Dawson, of Kanawha County; A. Bliss McCrum, of Preston County; J. Walter Barnes, of Marion County, and John Sherman Darst, of Kanawha County. In 1913 Gov. H. Hatfield appointed Mr. Lakin a member of the Public Service Commission, of which he was elected chairman, but it was held that he was ineligible because of a provision in the law governing the State Board of Control. He was thereupon reappointed by the governor to the last named board and reelected president. In addition to these duties he was appointed by Governor Cornell during the War as chairman of the State Committee on Proposed Construction, and later as a member of the State Mental Hygiene Commission.

Mr. Lakin is identified with the activities of the First M. E. Church of Charleston. He is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason, a Knight Templar, a Noble of the

James S. Levin,

Mystic Shrine, a member of Charleston Lodge, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and of the Knights of Pythias and of the Edgewood Country Club.

Immediately after the Spanish-American war Mr. Lakin was authorized, along with Dr. Buckner Fairfax Scott, by Gov. George Wesley Atkinson to organize Company M of the First West Virginia Infantry, National Guards.

W. E. E. KOEPLER of Bluefield, secretary of the Pocahontas Operators Association, has been actively associated since college days with the publicity end of the coal industry, and formerly connected with the Black Diamond and the Coal Age.

Mr. Koepfer was born at St. Charles, Missouri, September 5, 1884, son of August and Aurelia (Heye) Koepfer. Both the Koepfer and Heye families came to this country from Germany in very early times. These families were identified with the historic town of St. Charles, the first permanent settlement west of the Missouri River. St. Charles is a village some miles above St. Louis, and was founded in a period when Missouri was owned by Spain and later by France, and was in the nature of a court town before the Louisiana Purchase. Mr. Koepfer's ancestor owned what was used as the first State House in St. Charles, a building in which the Territorial Legislature assembled. It was in this old house that W. E. E. Koepfer was born, and since then the State of Missouri has made an appropriation to preserve the building. Mr. Koepfer's ancestor also took up lands where the Planters Hotel of St. Louis now stands. From St. Louis the family moved to St. Charles in 1820. August Koepfer was for many years engaged in the industry of stove manufacturing.

W. E. E. Koepfer acquired a good education in private schools and church schools, and was graduated in 1906 from Westminster College at Fulton, Missouri. In 1907 he became identified with the Black Diamond, the official trade journal of the western coal interests. He entered the advertising department and later became manager and western editor. He was associated with the Black Diamond until 1913, when he joined the staff of the Colliery Engineer, and when that was merged with the Coal Age he continued with the latter until 1916. In that year Mr. Koepfer took charge of the financial and advertising department of the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Having gained a reputation for the thoroughness of his knowledge of mining machinery and equipment, and his fundamental understanding of trade and economic conditions in the coal industry, he was elected in May, 1918, secretary of the Pocahontas Operators Association, with headquarters at Bluefield, and has since been one of the active men in the civic affairs of that community.

Mr. Koepfer was a member of the National Production Committee, United States Fuel Administration, at Washington during the World war. He is a member of the Rotary Club, Bluefield Country Club, Phi Delta Theta college fraternity and the Engineers Club of Philadelphia. He is a Presbyterian.

December 19, 1914, at Philadelphia, Mr. Koepfer married Miss Hazel Hamilton. Their two children are Letitia and Virginia.

ISAIAH BEE, M. D., a significant and highly useful life of himself, his family and to his home community and state as that of the late Dr. Isaiah Bee of Princeton. He represented the sturdy stock of West Virginia pioneers, being a grandson of Asa Bee, who fought as a soldier in the Revolutionary war, was a native of New Jersey, and in 1818 settled in Preston County, West Virginia. Doctor Bee was the great-grandson of two other Revolutionary soldiers.

Isaiah Bee was born September 22, 1832, at Salem, Harrison County, West Virginia, in the house that had been the home of his ancestors for three generations. He was a son of Josiah and Priscilla (Davis) Bee. His father moved to Doddridge County in 1835, and died in Ritchie County in 1890. He was a farmer. Priscilla Davis was a daughter of William Davis, who served as a member of the body guard of General Washington and endured many of the sufferings of the Revolutionary Army in the terrible winter of 1776-77.

Dr. Isaiah Bee was primarily educated in the common schools of Doddridge County, supplementing this with academic training at West Union and with two years at the Northwestern Academy at Clarksburg. He then entered upon the study of medicine with Dr. James M. Lathrop, a physician of Massachusetts, then residing at Ritchie Court House. After two years of reading under Dr. Lathrop's supervision he attended medical lectures at Cleveland, Ohio, and in 1859 commenced his practice at Ritchie Court House. The Civil war soon after disturbed his plan, and in June, 1861, he enlisted for service in Company C, Thirty-first Regiment of Infantry, C. S. A., and served as a private until September 3, 1862, then was commissioned assistant surgeon of the regiment, acting in this capacity until February 7, 1863, when he was made surgeon, and he was assigned to Jenkin's cavalry brigade until the close of the war. He served with distinction in the difficult positions assigned him, and, though slightly wounded upon several occasions, he returned home in comparatively good health. On July 4, 1865, Dr. Bee located in Princeton, West Virginia, where he was in continuous practice until 1904, gaining the confidence of the public and the cordial friendship of a large circle of friends. His first public service after the war was when he was elected in October, 1871, from the then senatorial district comprising Mercer, McDowell, Wyoming, Logan, Lincoln, Cabell, Wayne and Boone counties, as a member of the Constitutional Convention which met in 1872 and passed the present West Virginia constitution. At this election Doctor Bee received every vote that was cast in Mercer County, which was his own county, and in Wyoming and McDowell counties. But few of the sixty-five members of this famous convention still survive. In 1880 he was elected as a democratic member of the House of Delegates from Mercer County, and served four years continually, and again from 1898 to 1900. He was a member of the State Board of Health in 1881. He was director of the State Penitentiary at Moundsville, regent of the State University from 1872 to 1877, and was probably better acquainted throughout the state than any other professional man. He owned several farms in Mercer County, one consisting of 400 acres of the original tract owned by the pioneer, Capt. William Smith. The family home is a beautiful residence in the suburbs of Princeton, West Virginia. Few citizens of Princeton enjoyed more fully the respect and esteem of the community than did Doctor Bee, who retired from active practice in 1904. He married Mary (Smith) Lacey, of Fauquier County, Virginia, who died January 6, 1907. Their one son, Dr. Isaiah E. Bee, resided with his father until the death of the former November 15, 1912.

ISAIAH ERNEST BEE, M. D., for many years carried exceptionally heavy burdens and obligations as a physician and surgeon, more particularly as a surgeon, at Princeton, where his professional work was in a measure a continuation and supplement to the career of his honored father, Dr. Isaiah Bee, whose record is also given in this publication. Dr. Isaiah E. Bee was finally compelled to give up the strenuous work of an active physician, though he is still a consultant, and has found various important interests to engage his time and attention.

He was born at Princeton August 23, 1867, attended the common schools of his native city, also had private instruction for five years, two years in the State Normal College at Athens and a year in Princeton Academy. He finished his literary education by two and a half years in West Virginia University, and in 1888 entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, where he was graduated in 1890. Doctor Bee at once returned to Princeton, took up practice with his father, and in 1892 Dr. John C. Hughes became associated with them, the firm being Bee, Bee & Hughes for ten years. After 1902 the Doctors Bee continued as partners for two years, when the elder member of the firm retired and for about four years Dr. Isaiah E. Bee lived in the West. On returning to West Virginia he became surgeon and physician for the Virginia Railway, and this official duty, together with general practice, was maintained for three years. His health then made it necessary for him to give up his active practice, and since then he has kept in touch with the profession largely as a consulting physician and surgeon.

During Cleveland's second administration Doctor Bee was commissioner of the Pension Bureau at Washington, from 1893 to 1897. He also served seven years as county physician, from 1894 to 1900. He is a member of the Mercer County, West Virginia State and American Medical Associations and the American College of Surgeons. He was a delegate to the American Tuberculosis Congress that met at Pittsburgh in 1919. He is recognized by his brothers in the profession as one of the leaders in point of ability and influence.

For many years Doctor Bee has devoted a great deal of time to the promotion of Sunday School interests in West Virginia, in association with the Missionary Baptist Church, of which he is a member. For seventeen years he has taught a large adult Bible class, and practically every week he responds to an invitation to visit and deliver addresses before Sunday Schools and Sunday School organizations. While his career has been in the nature of a public service, he has responded to special interests outside his main subject. In 1890 he organized a military company at Princeton and Bluefield, known as Company A., Second Regiment, West Virginia National Guard, and served as its captain from 1890 to 1895. Doctor Bee is a reader of the best literature and has long been a student of West Virginia history and is well informed as to the sources of history, particularly in his section of the state.

December 23, 1900, Doctor Bee married Kathleen Pendleton Nelms, of Morristown, Tennessee, daughter of John H. and Letitia Virginia (Pendleton) Nelms, the former a native of Tennessee and the latter of Virginia. Mrs. Bee is an accomplished musician and a graduate of Sullins College of Bristol, Tennessee. Doctor and Mrs. Bee have an adopted boy, Zed B. Campbell, now seven years of age.

REV. WILBERT M. BURKE is the popular pastor of Sacred Heart Catholic Church at Bluefield. He is one of the younger priests of the Catholic Church in West Virginia.

Father Burke is a native of West Virginia, born at Wheeling May 8, 1892, son of John Joseph and Margaret (Callahan) Burke. He was educated in St. Charles College, completing his studies there in 1910. He took his theological course in St. Mary's Seminary and was ordained by Bishop Donahue at Wheeling in 1915.

Since his ordination as a priest Father Burke has put in six busy years, three years in missionary work and two years as assistant to Father McBride at Parkersburg. On January 1, 1921, he began his duties as pastor of the Sacred Heart Church at Bluefield. Father Burke is a very democratic young man and has all the qualities that fit him for leadership among the people of this section. He was athletic as a youth and college man, still plays baseball and keeps in touch with all the recreational as well as the serious activities of his people. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus and the Kiwanis Club.

The history of the Catholic Church in Bluefield is represented by an upward climb. Before the establishment of the parish in 1892 the wants of the few scattered Catholics was attended to by Father McBride of Wytheville, who had a mission at this place. In 1892 Bluefield was given a permanent parish, with the late Father Oliver, a French priest, in charge. The church that is being used at present was built with the rectory. The church while looked upon as well appointed has long since failed to keep pace with the growth of the city and the building of the new edifice comes as a matter of stern necessity.

Father Oliver's work in this section hardly needs to be referred to in these lines, as it is well and favorably known to the people of this section irrespective of creed, his many good works not being confined to his own flock. On November 15, 1920, Father Oliver passed to his reward, and the sentiment expressed on all sides gave evidence of the high esteem in which he was held.

Shortly after the death of Father Oliver, Bishop Donahue placed Father W. M. Burke in charge of the Bluefield parish. Father Burke took up the responsibilities of the parish with a vim, and his capacity for hard work and the results of the efforts of this young priest soon earned for him the admiration and confidence of the community without regard to religious affiliations.

To Father Burke has been entrusted the work of raising funds for the erection of the new building, and the result he attained in this direction have been very encouraging.

The establishing of a parochial school has been under consideration for some time and its location in close proximity to the new church building is a matter that will bring immediate attention so that students will be enrolled for the fall term commencing September, 1922.

ELMER ELSWORTH HOOD. The work of a newspaper man is in an important sense a public service, and however devoted to his profession he may be he finds himself sooner or later an official or semi-official participant in civic and political affairs. Elmer Elsworth Hood is one of the veteran editors and publishers of West Virginia, and it would be difficult to define any distinct boundary between his business and his public career.

While so much of his life has been spent in West Virginia, he is a native of Ohio, and was born at Picketon Pike County, May 11, 1862. His father, George Washington Hood, was born in Pennsylvania, was a blacksmith by trade and died at Picketon, Ohio, about 1875. He married Mary Williams, daughter of a Virginia family living around Harpers Ferry. George W. Hood and wife had the following children: Emma, who married Oscar Kent and lived at Waverly, Ohio; Charles V., of Portsmouth, Ohio; and Elmer Elsworth.

Elmer Elsworth Hood spent his boyhood in Pike County secured a common school education, and had his first introduction to the mysteries and arts of the newspaper craft at the age of fifteen, when he accepted the opportunity of becoming the first "devil" of the Picketon Courier. The five years he spent with that journal gave him every opportunity of apprenticeship, from type-setter to editor. His next work was on the Circleville Herald, owned and edited by Miss Lillie C. Darst, then the only woman editor in the State of Ohio. In 1885 Mr. Hood went to Ironton, Ohio and was editor of the Ironton Republican until he left the state and moved over into West Virginia.

This was in 1889, and his first achievement was founding the Huntington Herald, a weekly paper whose consecutive history is now a part in the Huntington Herald Dispatch. Mr. Hood sold his interest in the Herald in 1894, and the for a period of fifteen years was at Charleston as managing editor of the Charleston Mail, a daily paper. While he was at Charleston the work of several civil positions compete for the time he could give from his newspaper duties. When he left Charleston in 1910 Mr. Hood became editor of the Fayette Journal at Fayetteville. This is one of the oldest republican papers in the state, established in 1876 and still continued under the old name and the same brand of politics.

On April 1, 1915, Mr. Hood moved to Keyser, having purchased a half interest in the Echo Company and became editor and general manager of the Mountain Echo, one of the best and most influential weekly newspapers published in the eastern part of the state. The Echo is the oldest republican paper in the Eastern Panhandle. It was established by the late J. O. Thompson, a well known newspaper man, in 1868. It has been issued weekly for over half a century. The paper was taken over by the Echo Company several years later, a moving spirit in the organization being the late Senator O. A. Hood. Elmer E. Hood continued his active duties as editor, president and general manager of the Echo Company until August, 1921, when he resigned his duties as editor to become postmaster, but he still held the controlling interest in the publishing company and its president.

Mr. Hood's commission as postmaster of Keyser was under date of January 30, 1922. He took the office under the civil service rules, and in his examination he was head of the list of applicants of three persons for the postoffice. He succeeded Postmaster Philip H. Keys. The way he too held of the postoffice administration was characteristic of in vigor, and he has done all in his power to improve the facilities of the service. In the country districts around Keyser are three star routes and one rural free delivery route, and exchanges of mail from other postoffices occur daily.

In giving a record of his more formal public service, mention may be made of his appointment in 1895 as assistant clerk of the House of Delegates. In 1897 he was made clerk of that body. Early the next year, with the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, he was commissioned captain of Company L of the Eighth United States Volunteer Infantry, July 21, 1898. He served until April 1, 1899. He received his commission from President McKinley, and was on duty at Camp Thomas at Fort Thomas, Kentucky, and at Chickamauga Park, Georgia, where the regiment was mustered out at the end of the war.

Mr. Hood has been secretary of every republican state convention for the past twenty years, and was on the state committee of the party until he resigned when appointed postmaster. He has had an extensive acquaintance with state leaders of the party, including the late Senator Stephen B. Elkins, whom he knew intimately, and also Judge Goff, whose personal friendship largely influenced him to come to West Virginia, and it was through the financial assistance supplied by the judge and senator that he was able to establish the Huntington Herald. Outside of this Mr. Hood has known personally President McKinley and Colonel Roosevelt, and was chairman of the reception committee when Mr. Roosevelt visited Charleston as a candidate for vice president.

In 1905 he was parliamentary secretary to Honorable Fred Paul Grosscup, speaker of the House of Delegates, and in 1907 was secretary to Honorable Joseph H. McDermott, president of the West Virginia State Senate. During the World war he was chairman of the War Savings organization in Mineral County, chairman of the Salvation Army drives and a member of all the Liberty Loan drives in the county. He is a charter member of the Rotary Club at Keyser, and he and his family are Presbyterians.

At Ironton, Ohio, in April, 1885, Mr. Hood married Miss Jessie Cole, daughter of Henry Cole. She died in 1901, mother of the following children: Lena, wife of G. T. Williams, of Charleston; Frank E., of Charleston, an insurance man who married Belva Santrock; and Mary, wife of J. A. Hamilton, a dentist at Wheeling. At Bane, Virginia, a September, 1913, Mr. Hood married Mrs. Kate Renick, daughter of William Phillips, of Fayetteville, West Virginia. Mrs. Hood was born in Fayette County, West Virginia, and at the time of her marriage was serving as deputy county clerk there. She and Mr. Hood have one daughter, Catherine, born June 4, 1914.

ERNEST FISHER HEASLEY, president of the American Export & Inland Coal Corporation, was for a number of years a resident and active business man of Huntington, but recently removed to Cincinnati. His career as a coal operator and also his service as a soldier in the World war are properly credited to West Virginia.

Mr. Heasley was born October 15, 1888, at Zaleski, Vinton County in Southern Ohio, son of H. H. and Ida (Randall) Heasley, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of New York. Ernest F. Heasley was reared and educated in Southern Ohio, and attended finally Ohio University at Athens. On leaving school he began his business career as stenographer in a railroad office, was promoted to chief clerk and then became secretary of the Kanawha Operators Association (Coal), which position he held for two years. About that time America entered the struggle against the Central Powers, and Mr. Heasley made his first attempt to get into the army, but was rejected on account of light weight. Subsequently he was accepted as a private in the One Hundred and Twelfth Machine Gun Battalion of the Twenty-ninth Division. He was with this division in all its engagements in France. On October 20, 1918, three weeks before the signing of the armistice, he was wounded at Convoys. Then followed two months in hospital, and after his return to this country he was mustered out on June 3, 1919.

After his military experience he resumed his business connections with the coal industry in West Virginia, and soon became head of the American Export and Inland Coal Corporation, which he organized. Mr. Heasley is a democrat, is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason and Shriner, and a member of the Cincinnati Gym, and several Masonic clubs. He is a Methodist.

On December 5, 1916, at New York City, he married Miss Marion Scott, daughter of Francis Scott, of New York and London.

ELBERT W. GUM is one of the representative young men of the Village of Camden on Gauley, Webster County, where he is cashier of the Lanes Bottom Bank.

Mr. Gum was born at Monterey, Virginia, November 4, 1895, a son of William E. and Sallie M. (Taylor) Gum, the former of whom likewise was born at Monterey, on the 10th of May, 1873, and the latter of whom was born in the same year, in Pocahontas County, West Virginia, where their marriage was solemnized. The father is now a progressive farmer and contractor at Monterey, Virginia, is a republican in political adherence, is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in which latter he is a past noble grand, and he and his wife are active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Of the nine children the subject of this review is the eldest; Walter C. was graduated in the high school and thereafter attended Randolph-Macon College, Ashland, Virginia, and also Emory University at Atlanta, Georgia; Grace graduated in the high schools and attended also one of the normal schools of Virginia; Harry, likewise a high school graduate, attended the Massey Business College, Richmond, Virginia; Fred graduated from the high school, in which Robert is a student at the time of this writing, in 1922; and the younger members of the parental home circle are Mildred, Paul and Pearl.

Reared on the home farm and profiting by the advantages of the public schools of his native place, Elbert W. Gum thereafter completed an effective course in the Dunsmore Business College. He gained valuable experience in the banking institution at Monterey, Virginia, and subsequently took a position in the offices of the Kanawha Banking & Trust Company in the City of Charleston, West Virginia. Three months later, within a few months after the nation became involved in the World war, Mr. Gum enlisted for service in the Three Hundred and Thirtieth Ambulance Company, with which he was on active duty in France from July 10, 1918, to June 1, 1919, he having been with his command in the Argonne sector and having there been associated with the defensive activities of the Allies, and his experience covered much of the strenuous tension incidental to the great conflict. After his return to the United States and the receiving of his discharge Mr. Gum resumed his position with the Kanawha Banking & Trust Company, with which he continued his service until March 1, 1921, when he assumed his present responsible office, that of cashier of the Lanes Bottom Bank at Camden on Gauley, his wife being a stockholder in this institution.

Mr. Gum is a democrat, and in the Masonic fraternity is a member of Highland Lodge No. 110, A. F. & A. M., also has received the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite, besides being identified with Beni-Kedem Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston. He married Miss Myrtle Brook, of Charleston, she being a graduate of the high school and having attended Marshall College. Mrs. Gum is a most popular figure in the leading social activities of her home community.

HARRY D. KARNES has served efficiently as Mercer County clerk of the Circuit Court since 1914, he having been re-elected to this office by a gratifying majority, in November, 1920. He was born near Spanishburg, this county, February 25, 1875, and is a son of Russell Floyd Karnes and Sarah Elizabeth (Thompson) Karnes, the former of whom was born in Summers County, this state, and the latter in Tazewell County, Virginia. Russell F. Karnes was born February 25, 1845, and his death occurred on the 6th of July, 1921, his wife having passed away February 14, 1912, at the age of sixty-two years. All of the married life of the parents was passed on their homestead farm on Blue-stone River, Mercer County. Russell F. Karnes was one of the first republicans in Mercer County, and though he had no ambition for public office, he served one term as deputy sheriff of the county. He was a member of the Baptist Church and his wife held membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The Karnes family was early settled at Salem, Virginia, whence the original representatives in the present State of West Virginia came and settled in Summers County, removal to Mercer County having been made about the year 1845. Russell F. Karnes was a loyal soldier of the Confederacy in the Civil war. He became the father of three children, of whom the eldest, Opie O., is serving as justice of the peace at Princeton; Harry D. of this sketch is the second of the number; and William A. is a farmer near Spanishburg, this county.

After having attended Princeton Academy, in his present home city Harry D. Karnes entered Emory & Henry College, Virginia, in which he was graduated in 1900, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He had taught two schools in Mercer County to aid in defraying the expenses of his college course, and between college semesters he likewise taught school two terms. After his graduation he became instructor in mathematics and science at the Concord Normal School, Athens, West Virginia, and among those who attended his classes are many who are now prominent business and professional men.

In 1904 Mr. Karnes established his residence at Princeton, where he purchased an insurance agency and developed a large business as a life, fire and accident underwriter. This enterprise, conducted under the title of the People's Insurance Agency, is now one of the foremost in the city. Mr. Karnes in his early youth was determined to obtain a liberal education, and he is equally insistent at the present time in giving to his children the best possible educational advantages. He and his wife are active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and he is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, including the Commandery of Knights Templars at Bramwell and the Temple of the Mystic Shrine in the City of Charleston. He is a member also of the Knights of Pythias and of the Mercer County Country Club.

On the 18th of June, 1902, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Karnes and Miss Sallie E. Dangerfield, who was born and reared in Mercer County, a daughter of R. C. Dangerfield. Mr. and Mrs. Karnes have five children: Elizabeth, Virginia, Margaret, Richard and Francis.

LOWERY G. BOWLING, the efficient and popular County Court clerk of Mercer County, and a valued member of the executive corps at the Court House in the City of Princeton, was born on the family homestead farm near Spanishburg, this county, January 7, 1853, and is a son of Thomas J. and Virginia F. (Karnes) Bowling, representatives of honored pioneer families of this section of West Virginia. The parents are still living at the time of this writing, in the winter of 1921, the father being eighty-one and the mother seventy-six years of age. Jesse I., a brother of Thomas J. Bowling, died in 1921, at the age of eighty-three years, and another brother, Wilson Lee Bowling, died in August of the same year, at the age of eighty-five years, the family having been notable for longevity. John Bowling, grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was a native of one of the eastern counties of Virginia, and became one of the prosperous pioneer farmers of Mercer County, West Virginia, as now constituted, his old homestead having been on Bluestone Creek. Thomas J. Bowling upheld the prestige of the family name in connection with farm industry in Mercer County, and as a gallant soldier of the Confederacy he took part in many engagements, including the battle of Gettysburg. He had many narrow escapes from severe wounds, the buckle of his belt having been shot away on one occasion and the heel of his boot on another. He and his wife have long been earnest members of the Missionary Baptist Church, in which he has served twenty-five years as a deacon. He has been a successful agriculturist and stock-grower, has been influential in community affairs and is a staunch democrat in politics. His wife is a daughter of the late Madison Karnes, likewise a native of Virginia, and the two families were pioneer neighbors in Mercer County. Lowery G. Bowling was eighth in order of birth in a family of eleven children, of whom seven sons and one daughter are living. Walter P., who resides at Hinton, Summers County, has served as sheriff of that county and also as clerk of the County Court; Mack M. resides at Springfield, Illinois, and is a passenger-train conductor on the Wabash Railroad; Arthur L. is assistant cashier of the Bank of Princeton; Otis H. is a farmer near the old homestead of his father; Grover C. is a merchant at Logan, this state; Luther J. is a farmer near Spanishburg; and Emma is the wife of Daniel R. Day, a farmer near Kegley, Mercer County.

Lowery G. Bowling was reared on the home farm and gained his early education in the schools at Spanishburg. At the age of twenty-one years he found employment in a saw-mill camp, thereafter he clerked in a general store near Spanishburg, and he was next employed by the Flat Top Grocery Company at Bluefield. For three years thereafter he was an express messenger on the Norfolk & Western Railroad, and he then became a merchant at Rock, Mercer County, and at Bluefield, this county. From 1911 to 1913 he was engaged in the real estate business at Bluefield, and in the latter year he was elected to his present office, that of County Court clerk. Though he is a democrat in a count that normally gives a large republican majority, he was elected by a majority of 230 votes on the occasion of his first election, and by a majority of 634 in the election of November, 1920. He served one term as a member of the City Council of Bluefield, and from his early youth has been active in local politics. Mr. Bowling is a member of the Mercer County Country Club, is affiliated with the Blue Lodge, Chapter and Commandery of the Masonic fraternity and with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks at Bluefield. His wife is an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The year 1906 recorded the marriage of Mr. Bowling and Miss Leota Odell, daughter of Jacob E. Odell, of Bluefield, and the five sons of this union are: Thurman J., Lowery G. Jr., Billie E. Herbert and Samuel M.

WALTER M. FERGUSON started out in life with a strong ambition to be a merchant, and merchandising has constituted his active career so far. He is still a comparatively young man, and is one of the highly respected business men of Bluefield, owning a high class grocery establishment at 406 Bland Street.

He was born on a farm near New Hope in Mercer County May 25, 1884, son of William Riley and Mary Jane (Carr) Ferguson. His father was born in Franklin County and his mother in Montgomery County, Virginia. William Riley Ferguson was a child when his mother brought him to Mercer County, and they located on the farm where Walter Ferguson was born and where William Riley spent his active career as a substantial farmer. He died in September, 1918 at the age of seventy-three. He was a youthful Confederate soldier and was on guard duty at Richmond at the close of the war. He was affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, having been about sixty years of age when he joined this order, and on account of his popularity and his influence, was accepted at that age. Mrs. Ferguson died December 4, 1918, at the age of sixty-eight. Her family consisted of three sons and three daughters, all living Walter being the fourth in age.

Walter Ferguson attended school at New Hope, and was on the farm until he was twenty years of age. The first accumulation of capital he was able to make came from his work as a teamster. After getting about $100 he started a little store on Peck Street in Bluefield in 1905. He was in business there about two years, and after that had charge of the grocery department of H. A. Lilly & Company until 1915. In that year he again entered business for himself as a grocery merchant, at Jones and Bland streets, buying his store on credit from Mr. Lilly, the arrangement being that he was to pay $50 a month on the stock and equipment. He had a successful trade there, but sold out after five years, and then for a few months conducted a business at Mullins. In October, 1920, Mr. Ferguson resumed his business relations with Bluefield and at his present location. Owing to a many friends and wide acquaintance he was successful with the business from the very beginning. He has always insisted on a square deal, and his integrity as a merchant has brought him an honored place both in business and in civic circles.

Walter M. Ferguson

In 1908 he married Miss Ocie Perdue, daughter of O. Perdue, of Brush Fork. Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson have a son, Walter M., Jr., and their only daughter, Marie, died at the age of five years. They are members of the local Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and Mr. Ferguson is on its board of stewards. He is affiliated with the approved Order of Red Men, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, is a democrat and a member of the Chamber of Commerce.

DANIEL W. REYNOLDS passed his entire life in Pleasants county, West Virginia, was a representative of an honored pioneer family of that part of the state, and in his personality of achievement he made for himself a place of no minor distinction and influence in connection with civic and business affairs in his native county, especially in connection with the development of the oil industry. He was born in Pleasants county in the year 1859, and was a son of Isaac and Cassadora (Hill) Reynolds. His paternal grandfather, Daniel Reynolds, is the pioneer founder of the family in what is now West Virginia. This sterling pioneer obtained land on an island in the Ohio River, opposite St. Marys, Pleasants County, and ere instituted the reclamation of a farm from the wilderness. His son Isaac likewise became a farmer in that locality, and was comparatively a young man at the time of his death, after which, in order to provide for her family, his widow conducted a hotel at St. Marys, at the time when the railroad was being constructed to that place.

Daniel W. Reynolds was the third in a family of eight children, and owing to the death of his father his early educational advantages were somewhat limited. But he had the ambition and determined purpose which brook no such handicaps, and this is clearly shown in the fact that when he was but sixteen years of age he had so advanced himself as to become a successful teacher in the schools of his native county. He was a popular representative of the pedagogic profession here, and served for a time as principal of the public schools at St. Marys, the county seat. Thereafter he was for some time engaged in the marketing of railroad ties, in the period of railroad construction in that section of the state, and when it was discovered in Pleasants County he was influential in attracting outside capital for the development of the industry in his native county. He also became a successful operator in connection with oil production, and through his well-directed activities he accumulated a substantial fortune. He was one of the organizers of the Pleasants County Bank at St. Marys, and became the owner also of a large amount of valuable real estate in his native county. Mr. Reynolds was a man of fine intellectual ken and of exceptional civility. He was a staunch democrat, and as the candidate of his party was twice elected sheriff of Pleasants County. He was an earnest member of the Baptist Church, as is also his widow, was a zealous advocate of the cause of temperance and was affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He married Miss Addie Lewis Johnson, a daughter of the late William Johnson, who was long an honored and influential citizen of Wood County. Mrs. Reynolds now maintains her home at Boaz, West Virginia. Her husband passed to the life eternal in June, 1901, honored by all who knew him and known to one of the representative citizens of Pleasants County. Mr. Reynolds is survived also by two sons, Dan Howard and Arthur Hiatt, who are associated in business in the City of Parkersburg and concerning whom specific mention is made in following paragraphs.

Dan Howard Reynolds was born at St. Marys, West Virginia, on the 20th of August, 1892, there received his early education in the public schools, and he completed his higher education by attending Marietta College at Marietta, Ohio. He has been successfully identified with the real estate, insurance and oil business, in which lines of enterprise he is now associated with his brother, with office and residence in the City of Parkersburg. He is an active member of the Parkersburg Board of Commerce, the Kiwanis Club, the local lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and in the Masonic fraternity he has received the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite, besides holding membership in the Mystic Shrine. Both he and his brother are numbered among the popular and progressive young business men of Parkersburg. May 19, 1915, recorded the marriage of Mr. Reynolds and Miss Ethyl Marie Fenton, of Williamstown, Wood County.

Arthur Hiatt Reynolds was born at St. Marys on the 23d of September, 1896, and his youthful education included a full course in Denison University at Granville, Ohio, in which he was graduated as a member of the class of 1918. In June, of that year he enlisted in the coast artillery branch of the national military service in connection with the World war, and later he was transferred to the chemical branch of the Ordnance Department, in which he eventually became a powder inspector in the Government power plant at Nitro, West Virginia, where he continued his service until he received his honorable discharge on the 5th of February, 1919, since which time he has been associated with his brother in their successful business enterprise at Parkersburg. He has received the thirty-second degree of Scottish Rite Masonry, is identified also with the Mystic Shrine, and is a popular member of Parkersburg Lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. The brothers conduct their business under the firm name of Reynolds & Reynolds, with offices at 501½ Juliana Street.

CHARLES P. MORRISON. Among the representative citizens and worth-while men of Parkersburg, West Virginia, few command more universal respect or enjoy higher esteem over wider territory than Charles P. Morrison, vice president of the Commercial Bank & Trust Company, who has been identified with business activities of large importance in this section for thirty-four years. On retiring from longer active participation in the same he can look back on an honorable career of sterling achievement in the mercantile world. Mr. Morrison was born in Wood County, West Virginia, August 31, 1847. His parents were Hamilton and Jane G. (Simpson) (Dunham) Morrison.

The founder of the Morrison family in Wood County was Hamilton Morrison, the grandfather of Charles P. He came to the United States from Ireland and in making his way to West Virginia at that early day followed the old Braddock trail through Pennsylvania and finally located below what is now Williamstown, but then was Williamsport, then in Virginia, the year being about 1790. He was a farmer and weaver, and evidently a responsible citizen, as his name appears as serving on the first grand jury summoned in Wood County. He married Margaret Hoggland, and they had three sons: Cornelius, William and Hamilton. After Cornelius married he moved to Indiana and died there, and after William married he moved to Ohio and spent the rest of his life in that state.

The third son, Hamilton Morrison, was born June 6, 1803, on the pioneer farm in Wood County, Virginia, now West Virginia, and there grew to rugged manhood. In early manhood he followed the stonemason trade but in later years was a farmer. He was very active politically, first as a whig and later as a free soiler, and when the republican party was organized he found he could conscientiously subscribe to its principles and continued in that political faith during the rest of his life. He was a member and liberal supporter of the Methodist Episcopal Church, a man of kind manner, charitable and hospitable. He was twice married, first to Nancy Lee, and they had five children. His second wife, Mrs. Jane G. (Simpson) Dunham, was a widow with two children, and six children were born to the second marriage.

As a boy Charles P. Morrison helped his father on the farm and attended school when practicable. For several years after attaining manhood he followed carpentering, but merchandising was his natural bent and in 1850 he opened a store at what was then called Bull Creek, but now Waverly. In 1875, however, he had established his home at Parkersburg, and continued to reside in this city even while conducting his business at Waverly, and on January 1, 1886, he entered the mercantile business here. For thirty-four years lacking two months he continued in that line before retiring, and during that period built up an extensive business and acquired a name which was a synonym of honesty and courtesy. For a number of years he has been a director and is now vice president of the Commercial Bank & Trust Company.

Mr. Morrison married March 25, 1875, Mrs. Sarah J. (Henry) Dunbar. Mrs. Morrison had three children born to her first marriage: Charles G., Nellie and William Henry Dunbar. Mr. Morrison is a member of the Presbyterian Church. In his political views he is a republican and at times has served in public office. He was a member in early days of the civic body called the Board of Affairs, which has been succeeded by other civic organizations, and on several occasions he served terms on the City Council. He is a thirty-second degree Mason and Knight Templar, York Rite, and belongs to the Mystic Shrine. He was a member and president of the committee that had in hand the building of the present splendid Masonic Temple at Parkersburg, and subscribed liberally to the building fund. While he has been honorably connected with many forward going movements here in the last quarter of a century or more, Mr. Morrison probably takes the greatest amount of pleasure in the fact that during his long and successful career as a merchant he bore an unblemished business name.

MILTON MCNEILAN, M. D. A resident of Parkersburg twenty years, Dr. McNeilan has become especially well known for his recognized abilities in the field of surgery. He is a native of Southern Ohio, and for a number of years prior to coming to Parkersburg practiced in the West.

He was born near West Union in Adams County, Ohio, March 9, 1865, son of James and Ann (McClaren) McNeilan. His father lived from the age of eight years until his death in Adams County. He followed farming but also assumed the regular burdens and responsibilities of a Methodist minister. Milton McNeilan was one of nine children, seven of whom are still living. He grew up on a farm, and had limited advantages beyond those he procured through his own efforts. As soon as old enough he began teaching, using the money to gain a higher education. He was a student in the Holbrook School or the National Normal University of Lebanon, Ohio. He began the study of medicine in 1885 in the office of Daniel Ellison, his brother-in-law, at Duncansville, and later entered the Kentucky School of Medicine, where he was graduated in 1889, having won the first prize in surgery in a class of 103 students. Soon after graduating Dr. McNeilan went to Colorado, and practiced at Elbert and later at Basalt. He spent six months in Vienna, Austria, as a post-graduate student, and while abroad visited many of the hospitals and clinics of Paris, London and other great centers. He returned to the United States in 1901 and in 1902 established his home and office at Parkersburg. He is a member of the County, State and American Medical Associations.

Dr. McNeilan married Clarabel James, member of one of the old families of Mason County, West Virginia. Mrs. McNeilan has been a prominent worker in clubs, woman's suffrage educational movement and in various benevolent causes. Mrs. McNeilan studied art abroad, and her really great work has been along the line of fine arts. During the St. Louis Exposition one of her art pieces was on exhibition and was greatly admired.

She is a descendant of Abel James, who was born in England. He became an extensive land and slave owner in Loudoun County, Virginia. His son, Lemuel H. James, was born in Loudoun County and as a young man moved to Mason County, West Virginia, where he married Mary Ann Redmond. He owned a large farm and many slaves in Mason County. Few if any of his family are still found in that county. Lemuel James himself moved to Bull Creek, in what is now the Waverly District of Wood County, and later, in order to take advantage of the opportunities to secure cheap land in the West, he made a prospecting trip to Missouri about 1854 and died while there. His widow died at Bull Creek. They were the parents of seven children: Mary Susanna, who became the wife of Clay Neale; Elizabeth, who was married to William McClure; Virginia, who married Arthur Logan; Heiter, a Methodist minister, now deceased; Andrew F., who married Alice Harris and is now a resident of Idaho; Benjamin, deceased; and Alvah Redmon.

Alvah Redmond James, oldest son of Lemuel James, is father of Mrs. McNeilan, married Annie Goslee Hull, member of a prominent Maryland family of French descent. Her father was Beauchamp B. Hull, a South Methodist minister; her mother was Clara Belle Goslee. Alvah J. James was well known in Parkersburg as a merchant, and later moved to Colorado, where he became a stock grower and farmer. He is now living in Arizona.

WILLIAM DIXON SMITH. It is the laudable ambition every self-respecting, normal man to endeavor to succeed in his chosen vocation, to ultimately have the self-satisfying realization that he has taken the best possible advantage of his opportunities. When success has come to him in the business field, perhaps through years of toil and stress, contentment and happiness may far enhance its value if it is crowned with the esteem of devoted friends, the confidence of business associates and the sincere respect and well deserved faith of his fellow citizens. This is the kind of success that gives cheer and encouragement to one of Parkersburg's solid dependable men, William Dixon Smith, internationally prominent in the hardwood lumber industry, whose chosen home has been this city for more than a score of years.

William Dixon Smith was born at Scramston, near Berwick-on-Tweed, County of Northumberland, England, December 19, 1852, a son of Samuel Smith and the eldest of his nine children. In boyhood he attended the public school but before his twelfth birthday began to be self-supporting by working as a helper on a stationary engine. Later he served an apprenticeship of a five year's indenture at the wheelwright trade with John Harbottle of Hebron, and this work he acquired an insight into oak and hardwood lumber.

Shortly after attaining his majority Mr. Smith was employed by a lumber concern owned by John Cutler, of Morpeth, England, to look after their manufacture of wheels and wagons, and proved so satisfactory and efficient in the capacity that he was promoted to the office of manager, and continued in the service of this firm for nineteen years. It was in the interest of this concern that he came to the United States in 1887. He located at Grafton, West Virginia, as began buying hardwood lumber for this firm and shipped to England. Later on he transferred his services to the firm of Dobell, Beckett & Company, of Quebec and London and in a similar capacity served this firm until about 1901 when, owing to the deaths of Messrs. Dobell and Beckett the firm became Singleton, Dunn & Company, with which corporation Mr. Smith has been identified ever since. His work is confined entirely to hardwood lumber, and the great part of his buying is in West Virginia. Few men in the state have a more intimate knowledge of the state's hardwood resources. From Grafton he moved to Parkersburg, and since that time he has made four trips abroad for his firm to Russia and France.

On November 23, 1879, Mr. Smith married Miss Jane Mackay, daughter of William Mackay, editor of the Morpeth Herald, Morpeth, England, and they have the following children: Margaret, Mrs. Henry Morlang; Mary Jane widow of Frederick T. Roberts; William Mackay, cashier of the First National Bank of Parkersburg; Henry Edward Elizabeth, Mrs. J. Ira Davis; and Helen, Mrs. J. Alon Palmer.

As soon as Mr. Smith became satisfied that his future home would be in the United States he set about acquiring citizenship, took out his naturalization papers, and to all intents and purposes is as much an American as if he had been born here. He is able to adapt himself to all classes, is of genial personality and engaging presence, and the impression he makes on a stranger of being an honest, upright Christian gentleman is his attitude with his neighbors and fellow citizens at all times. He was made a member of the Masonic fraternity in England, and since then has had his membership transferred to the United States. From boyhood in his native land he belonged to the Wesleyan Methodist Church but for many later years has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and both as a church member and as a Mason he endeavors to "observe" the spirit for what these organizations stand. There are many of his fellow citizens who can speak feelingly of his upright Christian life, of his indness and charity, and all are united in the declaration that in him is found a man whose word is his bond.

REV. H. INGRAM COOK is not only a clergyman of the Missionary Baptist Church but is also serving as justice of the peace and as mayor of the thriving little City of Matoaka, Mercer County. His high ideals are expressed in his general social, official and religious relations, and he commands high place in public estimation in his native county.

Mr. Cook was born on a farm on Widemouth Creek, Mercer County, February 10, 1875, and is a son of John N. and Margaret (Stewart) Cook, both of whom were born in Wyoming County, this state, in the year 1845. The death of the father occurred January 8, 1898, and that of his mother in 1911. The family home was established on the Widemouth farm in Mercer County in the year 1874. John N. Cook served as a Union soldier in the Civil war, and hardships which he endured in this connection permanently impaired his health. He gave his active career on a farm enterprise, served as a member of the school board, was influential in community affairs, and both he and his wife were devout members of the Missionary Baptist Church, in which he served twenty years as a deacon. Of the nine children the subject of this sketch was the fourth, and the following are living: R. Scott Cook is a lumber contractor at the Ennis coal mines; Rev. E. Hamilton Cook is in the employ of the American Coal Company at Widemouth and is a clergyman of the Missionary Baptist Church; Rev. H. Ingram Cook, of this sketch, is the next younger; Laura B. is the wife of R. W. Laxton, of Widemouth; Ora Dell is the wife of Barnett Laxton, of Matoaka; and Cozella is the wife of Riley Akers, of Arista, Mercer County. Sherman, another of the sons, was forty-two years old when he met his death in a coal mine accident. Harrison, another son, likewise met a tragic death, he having been assassinated while in performance of his official duty as justice of the peace at Matoaka in 1918.

Rev. H. Ingram Cook received his early education in the schools of Rock District, Mercer County, and at the age of twenty years he became a teacher in the rural schools, his service in this capacity continuing two years. For eight years thereafter he was actively engaged in farm enterprise, and for the ensuing seven years he was called away from the farm by his zealous services as a minister of the Missionary Baptist Church, he having joined the church September 6, 1892, and having been ordained a minister when he was twenty-one years of age. At varying intervals he has had pastoral charge of all Missionary Baptist churches in a goodly part of Mercer County, and he continues active in church work, especially the Sunday School, he being at the time of this writing the teacher of a class of young women in the Sunday school at Giatto, Mercer County. After resuming his active association with farm industry, Mr. Cook continued his residence on the farm until 1918, when he removed to Matoaka, where in November of that year he was elected justice of the peace, an office to which he was re-elected in November, 1920. In 1921 he was elected mayor of Matoaka, and he is serving effectively in both of these official positions. On the 5th of July, 1921, Mayor Cook was attacked by a man whom he had fined in his capacity of justice of the peace, the man having shot Mr. Cook four times and another bullet having made a hole through the latter's coat—a truly remarkable escape from death.

On the 6th of November, 1895, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Cook and Miss Amanda Meadows, who was born in Wyoming County, this state, February 3, 1876, a daughter of William T. Meadows. Of the four children of Mr. and Mrs. Cook two are living: Roy L. is a student in Staunton Military Academy, Staunton, Virginia; and Neva is attending the public schools of Matoaka. Walter, who was born September 6, 1896, died February 22, 1901, and D. West Cook died in infancy.

HORATIO M. SPENCE, who has been a resident of Parkersburg, West Virginia, since the autumn of 1897, was born in New Jersey, reared in Michigan, and lived in Pennsylvania during the earlier period of his active business career. In the Keystone State he long continued his association with business pertaining to the oil-producing industry, and in West Virginia he has become a prosperous representative of the same line of enterprise, as a dealer in oil-well tools and supplies, his well equipped business establishment in the City of Parkersburg being situated at 116-20 Ann Street.

Mr. Spence was born at Paterson, New Jersey, on the 24th of June, 1852, and is a son of Archibald and Mary (Ackerman) Spence. Archibald Spence was born and reared in Scotland, and was there educated for the ministry of the Presbyterian Church. As a Presbyterian clergyman he had given active service in his native land, but after coming to the United States, as a young man in 1822, he devoted the major part of his time and attention to mercantile pursuits. About the time of the inception of the Civil war Mr. Spence removed with his family to Michigan and established his home near Hillsdale, judicial center of the county of the same name. Upon coming to this country he immediately took the steps which gained to him full citizenship in the land of his adoption, and, as a man of fine intellect and high ideals, he became an implacable adversary of the institution of human slavery, his attitude in this respect being such that he became known as a "black abolitionist" in the climacteric period that culminated in the Civil war. He united with the republican party at the time of its organization, and ever afterward continued a staunch supporter of its principles. He continued an earnest and zealous worker in the Presbyterian Church until his death, in 1875, and as a clergyman his services were in frequent demand. He was a resident of Michigan until the close of his life, and his widow survived him by a quarter of a century, she having passed to eternal rest in 1900, when venerable in years.

Not until late in life did Archibald Spence take unto himself a wife, in the person of Miss Mary Ackerman, who was of remote Holland Dutch ancestry. Of their six children two daughters and one son (subject of this sketch) are living at the time of this writing, in 1921. One son, John A., whose death occurred within recent years, served as a gallant soldier of the Union in the Civil war, he having been a member of a New Jersey regiment, and wounds that he received at the battle of Gettysburg having resulted in the loss of one of his hands.

Horatio M. Spence was about eight years of age at the time of the family removal to Hillsdale County, Michigan, where he was reared on his father's farm and attended the district schools during the winter months, this discipline having been supplemented by two terms of study in a local high school.

When about nineteen years of age Mr. Spence went to Titusville, Pennsylvania, and found employment in the oil fields of that section of the Keystone State. He was connected with several different companies for varying intervals, and by one of these corporations was made superintendent. For fourteen years he maintained his home at Bradford, Pennsylvania, while still continuing his active association with oil-producing enterprise, and there in 1886 was solemnized his marriage with Miss Dora S. Davis. In 1893 Mr. Spence, following in the course of further oil development in the Keystone State, removed to Butler, to which place his family followed him in the succeeding year. At Butler, Pennsylvania, he became associated with the firm of Carothers, Peters & Company, manufacturers of oil-well tools and dealers in oil-well supplies. In 1892, while still residing at Bradford, Pennsylvania, Mr. Spence organized at Parkersburg, West Virginia, the firm of Spence & Smith, which later was reorganized as the Spence, Smith & Kootz Company and which developed a substantial business in the handling of oil-well supplies. In the autumn of 1897 Mr. Spence transferred his residence to Parkersburg, and since 1915 he has been the sole owner of the business formerly conducted under the corporate title noted above. He was the founder of the business, which has long been one of broad scope, the trade extending into the various oil fields of West Virginia and its successful conducting marking Mr. Spence as one of the representative business men of Parkersburg. In this thriving city he is an active member of Board of Commerce, and he holds membership also in the local Kiwanis Club and the Parkersburg Lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. While a resident of Bradford, Pennsylvania, he served as a member of the City Council and also as a member of the Board of Education. He is a republican in politics and he and his wife hold membership in the Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Spence is a daughter of the late Uriah L. Davis, who was born in 1812 and who was for many years engaged in the lumber business in the State of New York, at Chatham and Angelica. Uriah L. Davis was a son of Jonathan and a grandson of John Davis, the latter of whom was born in Columbia County, New York, in 1737. Prior to the war of the Revolution John Davis served as a lieutenant of the English militia in New York, his commission having been signed by Governor Tryon of New York. When the Revolution came John Davis became a patriot soldier in the Continental Line, in which he became a captain and did active service in the cause of national independence. His original commission, signed by Governor Tryon, and his late commissions as first lieutenant and as captain in the Continental forces, are now in the possession of Mr. Spence of this sketch, who places high value on these historic documents. Uriah L. Davis recruited and equipped the Eighty-fifth New York Volunteer Infantry for service in the Civil war, and by Governor Morgan was commissioned colonel of this regiment, but impaired health prevented his being in active service save during the opening period of the war. His only son, Edward, became a lieutenant in the father's regiment and sacrificed his life in the service of his country.

Mr. and Mrs. Spence became the parents of two children: Davis A., who died in 1914, at the age of twenty-five years; and Lile Patty, who is the wife of Charles A. Ludey, of Parkersburg, their one child being a daughter, Emma Suzanne.

THOMAS L. HARRIS, M. D. Son of a physician and surgeon who earned the love and affection of a large community in Berkeley County, Dr. Thomas L. Harris has likewise regarded the profession as an opportunity for service, and for several years has been one of the prominent medical men in Parkersburg.

His father was Dr. James Trone Harris, a native of Old Virginia and a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore. He chose a country community, Hedgesville in Berkeley County, West Virginia, as the scene of his work, and though his abilities would have gained him recognition in a larger city and broader field, he was satisfied to do his work quietly and skillfully in that community, where he lived until his death in 1894, at the age of thirty-eight. He married Ruth Lewis Martin, daughter of John Y. Martin, a native of Caroline County, Virginia. She became the mother of three children: George H. Harris, a Parkersburg lawyer; Dr. Thomas L.; and Mildred Warner, wife of T. T. Tyler, of Washington, D. C. The first of the family to locate at Parkersburg was George H. Harris, and his example doubtless was an influence that led his mother and Dr. Harris to come to this city.

Thomas L. Harris was born February 28, 1889, and was only five years of age when his father died. He has availed himself of the privileges of some of the best institutions of learning. He graduated from the University of West Virginia in 1908, and in the same year entered Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia, from which famous school he was graduated with honors in 1912. He remained at Philadelphia, and for two years was an interne in the Pennsylvania Hospital and one year chief resident physician of the hospital. He also served a year as chief resident physician of the Children's Hospital. Dr. Harris on leaving Philadelphia went to Louisville, where for one year he was a lecturer in the medical department of the University, his subject being clinical microscopy, and at the same time was house surgeon of the City Hospital. Early in 1917 Dr. Harris volunteered as an individual for service in the American Ambulance Hospital, and it was while awaiting call to active duty that he began his practice in Parkersburg. About a year later he was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Medical Corps, and until after the signing of the armistice was at General Hospital No. 14 at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, as instructor in the School of Surgery. Dr. Harris was discharged January 14, 1919, and since then has resumed his practice at Parkersburg.

He is a member of the County and State, the Southern Medical and the American Medical Associations. Fraternally he is a thirty-second degree Mason, a member of Nemeas Temple of the Mystic Shrine, is an Elk and Knight of Pythias. He belongs to the Blennerhasset and Country Clubs of Parkersburg and is a member of the Beta Theta Pi and Theta Nu Epsilon and the Mountain College fraternities.

GEORGE D. JEFFERS, M. D. One of the leading representatives of medicine and surgery at Parkersburg for the past twenty years, Dr. Jeffers has had other important interests outside the strict limits of his profession and has acted as a director in several business and financial corporations.

His father, Lewis H. Jeffers, is a well known citizen of Wood County, but was born in Athens County, Ohio, May 22, 1836, son of Asa Jeffers. Lewis H. Jeffers became an Ohio farmer, but in 1870 moved to West Virginia, and for over half a century has lived in Wood County. He was a member of the House of Delegates in 1911. He is a devout Baptist, a democrat, and his life of eighty-five years has been one of exceptional usefulness and honor. He married Susan Page, daughter of George Page. Her mother was a Beebe, of a well known pioneer family of that name. Susan (Page) Jeffers' grandmother was with Martha Washington on Blennerhasset Island when she was sixteen years of age. Lewis H. Jeffers and wife had four children: George Delmont; Perry Edwin, who lives at Lockhart Run in Wood County; Guy Carlos, who died at the age of seven; and Carrie Ritter, who died when four years old.

Dr. George Delmont Jeffers was born in Athens County, Ohio, August 10, 1865, but was reared and educated in West Virginia. He attended public and private schools, began the study of medicine under Dr. J. C. Casto, and in September, 1887, entered the medical department of the University of Louisville, where he was graduated in 1889. For ten years Dr. Jeffers practiced at Cunningham, Kansas, and then, following a post-graduate course in his alma mater and in the New York Polyclinic, he located in Parkersburg in July, 1899. Dr. Jeffers has served as surgeon for the Baltimore & Ohio Railway Company. He is an active member of the County and State Medical Associations, the Southern and American Medical Associations, and during the World war was chairman of the Medical Advisory Board for District No. 2, comprising eight counties. He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce and the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks.

Dr. Jeffers married Laura B. Sigler, of Morganfield, Kentucky, who is descended from the Calvert family of Maryland and a direct descendant of Lord Calvert. Mr. and Mrs. Jeffers have one daughter, Ruth Carlton, a student at Hamilton College, Lexington, Kentucky.

JESSE D. MARPLE, who resides at McMechen, Marshall County, is division superintendent of the Wheeling Traction Company, was born at Sherrard, this county, October 6, 1866, a son of William H. and Sarah Jane (Vanaman) Marple. The father was born in New Jersey and was a child at the time of the family removal to Marshall County, where he was reared to manhood and where he learned the cooper's trade. In 1872 he established his residence at Benwood, this county, where are located the Wheeling Steel & Iron Works and the shops of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and here he engaged in the manufacturing of nail kegs for the Benwood Iron Works. His son Jesse D. began to assist him at the bench when twelve years of age, and learned the cooper's trade, at which he became a skilled workman. The father and son later engaged in business as contract painters, and from 1886 to 1895 the son was in the employ of the Riverside Iron Works at Benwood, where he became a shearman and earned a substantial salary. The father continued his activities as a contracting painter until his death in 1921, at the age of seventy-seven years. William H. Marple was a musician of much ability, and gained high reputation in the organizing and training of church choirs, he having been a devoted member of the Church of God, as is also his widow, who is seventy-seven years old at the time of this writing.

W. E. Cook M. S.

id who is loved for her gracious character and unflinching kindness. Of the twelve children four sons and four daughters survive the honored father.

Jesse D. Marple attended the public schools in his boyhood and youth, but early gained practical experience by assisting his father, as noted in the preceding paragraph. In 1895 he entered the employ of Hughes & Wareham, contractors in the construction of the Benwood & Moundsville Electric Railroad. He aided in the construction work from an onward to McMechen and thereafter to Moundsville, a distance of eight miles, and most of the time he served as a reman. In the fall of 1896 he ran the first passenger train over the Narrows, and this first electric car on its initial trip id two passengers. Mr. Marple continued his service as a stormman five years, and in 1901 was promoted to the position of road foreman. Three years later he was advanced to his present office, that of division superintendent. He so did temporary service in the security department of a company's main office in the City of Pittsburgh. He is a supervision of shops, trainmen and other employees.

Mr. Marple was active in local patriotic service in the World War period, he having been chairman in war activities in his district, served as a "Four Minute" man, and was an active member of the local Red Cross. He is a director of the Rio Valley Playgrounds Association, is a member of the Community Health League and is serving as trustee and organ of the Church of God at McMechen, he having succeeded his father in these offices at the time of the latter's death. He is a staunch republican, and has served as a member of the McMechen Board of Education, and was a member of the time of the construction of the present high school building. He assisted in drafting the first city ordinances of McMechen, and was the first treasurer of the city after its incorporation as a city. He is affiliated with the Knights of Ethias and Loyal Order of Moose, and is an enthusiastic baseball fan.

Mr. Marple married, in 1911, Miss Nell B. Riddle, of Greenwood, where her father, the late Henry Riddle, long served as justice of the peace. Mr. and Mrs. Marple have no children: Dorothy and Frances.

WILLIAM EDWARD COOK, M. D. The Pageton community, one of industrial importance in McDowell County, is the home of the able professional activities of Doctor Cook, who in addition to his general practice is physician and surgeon for the Page Coal Company and the Blackwolf coal Company.

The doctor was born at Sweetsprings, Monroe County, this state, February 20, 1871, and is a son of John Henry and Julia Ann (Baker) Cook. The father, now eighty-three years of age (1922), is a resident of Centennial, this state, but his wife, who was born in Monroe County, died in May, 1911, at the age of seventy-four years. Of five children the subject of this sketch was the third in order of birth; Rev. John F. is pastor of the First Baptist Church at Welch, McDowell County; Walter J. is a prosperous farmer in Monroe County; Randolph G. has charge of a large estate at Middlebrook, Virginia; and Florence G. is the wife of Lee Walker, a grocery merchant of Greensboro, North Carolina.

John Henry Cook, the father, was born in Prince Edward County, Virginia, a representative of one of the old and influential families of that historic commonwealth. He acquired his early education under the direction of a private tutor at Salt Sulphur Springs. He was one of the gallant young men of Virginia who went forth in defense of the Confederacy in the Civil war, took part in the battle of Winchester and many other engagements, and he was held a prisoner of war at Fort Delaware during the latter part of the war. He gave twenty years of effective service as a school teacher, was long identified so with farm enterprise, served as a justice of the peace and was for four years county superintendent of public schools for Monroe County. He has been for many years a zealous member of the Baptist Church, as was also his wife, and he has never wavered in his allegiance to the democratic party.

The schools of Monroe County afforded Doctor Cook

his early education, and his father was one of his teachers. He himself eventually taught two terms of school, and in 1897 he entered the Medical College of Virginia in the City of Richmond. In this institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1901, and after thus gaining his degree of Doctor of Medicine he was in charge of mine practice at Algoma, McDowell County, until 1918, in January of which year he entered the medical corps of the United States Army. He won promotion from the rank of first lieutenant to that of captain, was assigned to the aviation camp at Morrison, Virginia, in July, 1918, was transferred to Garden City, Long Island, and on the 8th of the following month he sailed for England, still attached to the medical branch of the aviation service. In Lincolnshire, England, he was assigned to service in treating and otherwise caring for wounded soldiers sent there from the front. In December, 1918, Doctor Cook returned to the United States, and was assigned to service on the Demobilization Board at Garden City, Long Island, where he remained until September, 1919, when he received his honorable discharge, after faithful and efficient service in connection with the greatest war in the annals of history. Soon afterward he assumed charge of his present professional service at Pageton, and he has secure vantage place as one of the representative physicians and surgeons of McDowell County. He is a member of the American Medical Association, the West Virginia State Medical Society and the McDowell County Medical Society. He is affiliated with the Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons in his home village of Pageton and with the Chapter of Royal Arch Masons at Northfork. He is a democrat and is a member of the Baptist Church, his wife being a communicant of the Catholic Church, in the faith of which she was reared.

In 1906 Doctor Cook wedded Miss Maude Kingsbury, who was born at Lamsburg, Virginia, a daughter of M. A. Kingsbury. Mrs. Cook died in 1913, and the only child, William, died in early childhood. In 1917 was solemnized the marriage of Doctor Cook and Miss Rocine Heuser, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, of Swiss ancestry, and the three children of this union are Betty, Ruth and the son, David Wherry.

JESSE W. WATERS. The progressiveness and excellent business judgment of Mr. Waters are definitely shown in the general appearance and well selected stock of his modern jewelry establishment in the Law & Commerce Building in the city of Bluefield, Mercer County. He was born at Ellaville, Florida, November 29, 1890, and is a son of John Shaw and Lucretia Elizabeth (Bell) Waters, the former a native of North Carolina and the latter of Virginia. The mother died in 1913, at the age of fifty-seven years, and the father survived her by only a few days, he having been sixty-five years of age at the time of his death. The father of John S. Waters was the owner of a large plantation in North Carolina and in the operation of the same retained a corps of fully two hundred slaves, the ravages of the Civil war having extinguished the greater part of the family estate. John S. Waters became identified with lumbering operations in Florida, as an inspector, and in that state he lived in turn at Ellaville, Jacksonville and Levson, in which last named town he passed the closing years of his life. Both he and his wife were zealous members of the Baptist Church. Mr. Waters was twice married and his second wife was the mother of him whose name introduces this review. The family name of the first wife was Townsend, their having been one son by this union and six children by the second marriage.

Jesse W. Waters was an infant at the time of the family removal to Jacksonville, Florida, and he gained his early education in that city and at Bellevue, that state. He thereafter took a one-year course in the Philadelphia College of Horology, where he gained excellent technical knowledge of watchmaking and engraving, as well as of optical work. Upon first coming to Bluefield, West Virginia, he was employed in the jewelry store of Randolph & Company, and somewhat more than a year later he here entered the employ of Isadore Cohen & Company, with which he re-maintained three and one-half years. In September, 1916, with a capital of $1,600, he established himself in independent business, at his present location, and in the meanwhile he had gained a reputation which gave him excellent credit with wholesale houses, so that he was able to put his jewelry establishment on a high standard at the start. He has developed a substantial and prosperous enterprise and is one of the representative young business men of Bluefield. He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce and the Kiwanis Club of his home city, affiliated with the Blue Lodge, Chapter and Commandery Bodies of York Rite Masonry at Bluefield and with the Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston, both he and his wife being members of the Presbyterian Church.

In 1914 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Waters to Miss Agnes Hanche, who was born and reared in Bluefield and who is a daughter of C. H. Hanche. Mr. and Mrs. Waters are popular factors in the representative social activities of their home city.

RUCKER JENKINS, a representative citizen and progressive business man residing in the City of Bluefield, Mercer County, is Eastern manager of the Great Eastern Coal Company, selling agents for various coal mines in Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky.

Mr. Jenkins was born at Graham, Virginia, March 29, 1887, and is a son of O. C. and Lucy D. Jenkins, specific mention of the father being made on other pages of this work. In the year following the birth of Rucker Jenkins his parents came to Bluefield, in 1888, and here he was reared to adult age, his early educational advantages being those of the public schools. Thereafter he completed a three years' course in mechanical engineering at the Virginia Polytechnical Institute. For twelve years thereafter Mr. Jenkins was in the service of the Norfolk & Western Railroad Company,—first as secretary to the assistant superintendent, and thereafter as secretary to the general superintendent. After leaving the employ of the railroad company Mr. Jenkins was in turn connected with the traffic department of the United States Coal & Coke Company, with the sales department of the Central Pocahontas Coal Company and the Eastern Coal & Export Company. He then became resident manager of the Inter-State Coal & Dock Company, and during the final year of his connection with this concern he had charge of purchasing and shipping large tonnage of coal from the West Virginia fields to tide-water, for exportation to foreign countries.

In the World war period Mr. Jenkins gave loyal and effective service as a member of the United States Fuel Administration, in which connection he directed the activities of various public speakers who were furthering the Government's policy of fuel production and conservation. Mr. Jenkins brings to bear wide experience and resourceful policies in the ordering of the affairs of the important company with which he is now connected as noted in the opening paragraph of this review. He is a loyal member of the Bluefield Chamber of Commerce, is affiliated with the Country Club and Old Colony Club, and he and his wife hold membership in the Presbyterian Church.

November 26, 1910, recorded the marriage of Mr. Jenkins and Miss Martha Bosworth Becker, daughter of William S. Becker, formerly general superintendent of the Norfolk & Western Railroad. Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins have one son, William Becker Jenkins.

HERBERT HUDSON THOMPSON is a graduate of the West Virginia University Agricultural School, and is the present county agricultural agent for Wetzel County. He is full of enthusiasm for the newer agricultural and stock raising movements, has qualities of leadership, and has done much already to build a well coordinated program for the country life of this section.

Mr. Thompson was born in Roane County, West Virginia, November 28, 1894. His father Thomas A. Thompson, was born in Old Virginia in 1858, as a young man moved to Roane County, where he married and where he was active in the farming community until 1906, and from that year until 1920 conducted a mercantile business at Spencer in Roane County, where he still resides. He is a democrat and a member of the Methodist Protestant Church. Thomas A. Thompson married Martha Pursley, who was born at Eagle Rock, Botetourt County, Virginia, in 1865, and became the mother of nine children: Guy C., connected with the United Fuel Gas Company at Spencer; Ona, who died at the age of sixteen; Ola, wife of Ferd E. Rhodes, business man at Spencer; Maude, who died when eighteen years old; Grace, wife of Rupert Barr, an employee of the South Penn Oil Company of Ritchie County; Herbert Hudson; Leota, wife of Glenn Miller, a railroad man with the Baltimore & Ohio, living at Parkersburg; Freda, who died when three years old; and Gladys who died at the age of two years.

Herbert Hudson Thompson spent his early youth on a farm in Roane County and attended the public schools at Spencer, graduating from the Spencer High School in 1911. In the fall of that year he entered West Virginia University, where he carried his studies until he joined the color in May, 1918, at Camp Lee, Virginia. He remained there a little over six months, the first two months in the infantry and one month in the Medical Corps. Later he was selected to go to the Officers Training School, and he received a second lieutenant's commission just about the time the armistice was signed. He received his honorable discharge November 30, 1918, and soon afterward resumed his studies at Morgantown. In January, 1920, Mr. Thompson entered upon his duties as agricultural agent in Wetzel County. At that time he had completed all the work required for his degree as Bachelor of Science and Agriculture, but he returned to the University to receive the degree in June, 1920.

Mr. Thompson is active in all farming organizations and was a member of the Grange at the University. He is affiliated with the American Legion, with Wetzel Lodge No. 39, A. F. and A. M., and is a democrat and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In April, 1920, a Pennsboro in Ritchie County, he married Miss Myrtle Iren Barrows, daughter of Guy V. and Mary (Dumont) Barrows, residents of Parkersburg, her father being an operator. Mrs. Thompson is a graduate of the Parkersburg High School. They have one daughter, Mary Martha, born at New Martinsville, January 21, 1921.

RAYMOND HANSFORD LEU, M. D., a prominent young physician and surgeon at New Martinsville, joined the navy about the time he graduated in medicine, and was a medical officer with the Marines in France during twenty three months of the great war.

Doctor Leu was born at Adeline in Lawrence County, Kentucky, October 26, 1893. His grandfather, Michael Von Leu, was a native of Austria and spent most of his life at Schaufhausen, Switzerland. He was a lawyer by profession, was a soldier in the Franco-Prussian war of 1871 and died at Schaufhausen, Switzerland, in 1895. His son Daniel Leu, now living at New Martinsville, was born at Schaufhausen in 1859, was reared and educated in Switzerland and learned the trade of stone cutter and stone mason. In 1870 he came to the United States and settled at Catlettsburg, Kentucky, and in 1898 came to New Martinsville, where he has done an extensive business as a stone contractor. He has built many bridges in Wetzel County and throughout the state. Daniel Leu is a democrat and an active worker in the Presbyterian Church. He married Miss Clara Miller, who was born at Adeline, Kentucky, in 1869. They have two sons, Raymond H. and Julius Frederick. The latter is a florist and owner of greenhouses at New Martinsville.

Doctor Leu acquired his early education in the public schools of Wetzel County and in 1912 entered West Virginia University. He remained there through regular year and two summer terms, taking one year and two summer courses in the pre-medical work and two years in the medical school. In the fall of 1915 he went to Washington D. C., entering George Washington University Medical School for one year. In the fall of 1916 he resumed his medical studies in the medical department of the University of Tennessee at Memphis, where he graduated M. D. in

C. M. G. Lewis

17. He is a member of the Phi Chi medical fraternity. Doctor Leu entered the Naval Medical Corps in May, 17. The first month he was attached to the United States Naval Hospital at Norfolk, Virginia. Then followed a period of training with the University of Pennsylvania and Jefferson Medical College, following which he joined the Marines at Quantico, Virginia, and August 22, 17, sailed for France, landing at St. Nazaire. He was attached to the First Battalion, Sixth Regiment, U. S. Marines, and for thirty days was on the firing line in the Verdun sector. While there he was gassed and shot in the leg by a piece of shrapnel. For two months he was a patient in a base hospital at Brest, and then for seven months was on Vincent Astor's private yacht, U. S. S. Albatross, and for six months on the U. S. S. Bridgeport. July 22, 1919, after twenty-three months in France, he was returned to the United States. Doctor Leu was commissioned a first lieutenant at Norfolk, Virginia, and was promoted to captain while at Brest, in January, 1918, following the period of hostilities he was put on the U. S. S. Rochester, and on that ship served while on cruise round the Gulf of Mexico, Panama Canal, the Orient, and is finally transferred to the U. S. Hospital at Fort Lyon, Colorado, where he received his honorable discharge, October 31, 1920, after more than three years in the service. On returning to New Martinsville, Doctor Leu at once resumed his office, and has had a rapidly growing clientele. His offices are in the Federal Realty Building. Doctor Leu, who is unmarried, is a republican, a member of the Presbyterian Church, is affiliated with New Martinsville Lodge No. 1, Loyal Order of Moose, and is a member of the American Legion and the Forty and Eight.

CASSIUS MCCARL LEMLEY, C. E., who is geological engineer in charge of investigation and special reports in the service of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad system, with residence and official headquarters at Morgantown, Monongalia County, is born at New Freeport, Pennsylvania, on the 29th of May, 1866, and is the eldest of the children of Elihu Showalter Lemley and Victoria (Dalrymple) Lemley. The Lemley family of this branch was settled in Western Pennsylvania prior to the War of the Revolution, and George Lemley, great-grandfather of the subject of this review, was a private in Captain Philip Gable's Company, Fifth Battalion, Philadelphia County Militia, for the year 1781. His son, George (II) was born in Greene County, that state, May 17, 1786, and in his native county the latter died on the 10th of June, 1862. February 27, 1806, recorded the marriage of George Lemley (II) to Christena Shriver, who was born June 18, 1785, and whose death occurred December 19, 1877. The names and respective dates of birth of their children are here recorded: Alza, June 15, 1807; Henry, May 26, 1808; Rachel, May 30, 1811; Sarah, April 7, 1815; John S., grandfather of the subject of this sketch, November 27, 1817 (died November 1, 1902); Jane, June 4, 1820; Abraham, November 27, 1822; Elizabeth, May 13, 1825; and Jacob, October 4, 1831.

On the 1st of December, 1839, John S. Lemley wedded Miss Elizabeth Heingardner, who was born in Rockingham county, Virginia, June 10, 1819, and whose death occurred August 19, 1908. Mrs. Lemley was a daughter of Michael Heingardner, who was widely known in the South as a successful herb doctor, and who traveled extensively throughout Virginia and other Southern states and as far north as Pennsylvania, for the purpose of healing the sick by means of his herb remedies. John S. and Elizabeth (Heingardner) Lemley became the parents of eight children: Elihu S., father of the subject of this review, was born October 21, 1840; Sarah was born February 2, 1843, and died in infancy; Thomas P. was born January 21, 1849; Hannah S. was born April 7, 1851, and died in childhood; Dr. William H., who is born March 29, 1853, was graduated from the medical department of the University of Ohio, and took a special course in the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, Maryland; Alfred J. was born May 24, 1856, was graduated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, Maryland, and also took a special course in the Historic Old Jefferson Medical College in the City of Philadelphia; Solomon S. was born March 1, 1859; and Jefferson D. was born October 1, 1861.

Elihu S. Lemley was reared and educated in his native county and as a young man he wedded Miss Victoria Dalrymple, who was born in Washington County, Pennsylvania, September 23, 1839, a daughter of Charles Dalrymple, whose father was a patriot soldier in the war of the Revolution. Mrs. Lemley had two sisters, Priscilla and Mary, the latter of whom became the wife of Dr. John McCarl of Wadestown, West Virginia (then Virginia), who was official surgeon of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in connection with the construction of its line from Cumberland, Maryland, to Wheeling. He retired from the practice of medicine in 1879 and engaged in the grain brokerage business at Chicago, Illinois, where he lost all of his material property in the great fire of 1871. With cash resources which he retained Dr. McCarl purchased a farm of one thousand acres near Clifton, Illinois, where he engaged in agricultural and dairy enterprise on a large scale, he having continued in active management of this business until 1902, when he turned the property over to his sons, after which he lived retired until his death in 1916, at the patriarchal age of ninety-one years.

Elihu S. Lemley was born on the old homestead farm in Greene County, Pennsylvania, near the West Virginia line, and as a young man he drove cattle from West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania to the City of Baltimore. Thus he became thoroughly familiar with the topography and roads in what is now West Virginia. At the time of the Civil war his sympathies were entirely with the cause of the Confederacy, with the result that he ran away from the parental home, made his way to the South and entered the secret service of the Confederate government. His knowledge of West Virginia made his services of great value to the Confederacy, and he was many times detailed to guide bands of men through the mountains of this state to enlist in the Southern armies. He was many times fired upon, was twice captured, and while on this first occasion he made his escape, on the second his good fortune failed in this respect, with the result that he was held as a prisoner of war at Columbus, Ohio, until after the close of the war. At Columbus, he formed the acquaintance of Miss Victoria Dalrymple, who was assisting in the care of ill and wounded soldiers, and on the 10th of February, 1865, their marriage was solemnized. They settled at New Freeport, Greene County, Pennsylvania, but in 1868 they came to Monongalia County, West Virginia, and settled on a farm in Battelle District. In that district Mr. Lemley owned and resided for varying intervals on three different farms, and in 1878 he removed to Burton, Wetzel County, this state, where he now maintains his home. For years he owned and operated a threshing machine, besides which he gave attention to teaming and to dealing in lumber and timber, as well as to the raising of horses. He has always had a great fondness for horses, and today, at the age of eighty-one years, can jump astride his horse from the ground. He and his wife are earnest members of the Baptist Church, and he is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Of the children, Cassius McCarl, of this review, is the eldest; Miss Florence Anna, who was born in 1868, remains at the parental home; Alburn McCarl was born in 1870 and died at the age of five years; John S., who was born in 1872, resides in Houston, Texas; Miss Elizabeth May, born in 1874, remains with her parents; Miss Mary Veronica, born in 1876, died at the age of thirty-nine years; and James Harrison Cleaver, born in 1882, is a resident of Baltimore, Maryland.

Cassius McCarl Lemley was reared on the home farm in Wetzel County, and he was only twelve years of age when his father placed him in charge of the farm. In the meanwhile he profited fully by the advantages of the local schools, and at the age of fifteen years he taught in one of the rural schools of Wetzel County. He continued his service as a teacher during the winter terms until he was twenty years of age, and thus earned funds with which to defray the expenses of his higher education. In the spring of 1887 Mr. Lemley entered the University of West Virginia, and in this institution he was graduated in 1891, with the degree of Civil Engineer. His was the first class to be graduated in the engineering department of this university, and though the class had nineteen members only three of the number proved eligible for graduation, the other two having been T. D. Lynch and F. G. Ross. During the winter of his junior year at the university Mr. Lemley taught school, and on holidays and in vacations he worked with engineering corps, to replenish his expense funds. He was graduated also with the Cadet Corps of the university, in which he ranked as senior first lieutenant and acting captain of Company A. On the day of his graduation Mr. Lemley went to Waynesburg, Pennsylvania, and took a position as rodman with an engineering corps on the Pittsburgh, Washington & Southern Railroad. In 1892 he was in charge of construction and rebuilding of the main line of the P. W. & B. Railroad between Baltimore and Philadelphia, and the P. & W. Railroad between Baltimore and Washington, besides being assistant in the construction of the Wall yards, now called Pitzeir, in 1891-2. While still with the Pennsylvania Railroad system he was assistant engineer for the R. T. Marvin Engineering Company of Baltimore, in connection with engineering work in that city. From July 4, 1894, to July 18, 1895, he was acting chief engineer in charge of location and construction of the Washington & Great Falls Railroad. From that time until August, 1896, he was acting chief engineer for and laid out and built the Washington, Alexandria & Mount Vernon Railroad, for which he served as consulting engineer from April, 1898, to January, 1899. He was chief engineer in the building of the Myersville & Catocin Railroad, which was the first electric freight line constructed in the United States. On August 11, 1899, Mr. Lemley was appointed assistant engineer for the B. & O. Railroad Company, and from that time until June, 1904, was in charge of location and construction of branch lines, and within this period he located and constructed the Hacker's Run branch, a coal-road extension of the above mentioned line; the Point Pleasant, Buckhannon & Tygarts Valley Railroad; the Burnersville branch (a coal line up to the Century mines); survey and location of the West Virginia Short Line Railroad. From July, 1904, to 1908, he was assistant engineer in charge of surveys and location of a low grade trunk line from the Ohio River to the Potomac, across the Alleghany Mountains. From 1908 to 1916 he was assistant engineer in charge of special work and investigation and reports on the resources of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad system and other lines tapping the same territory, and in this connection he had charge of the reports which had much to do with preventing the Wabash Railroad from making an entrance into West Virginia, besides which he made and reported an estimate of the coal tonnage adjacent to the Baltimore and Ohio system. From 1916 to 1918 he was geologist in charge of resources, coal, oil, gas, limestone and timber for this great system, and since 1918 he has been geological engineer in charge of the geological engineering work for the Baltimore and Ohio system.

Mr. Lemley has the distinction of being the first to be appointed a railroad geologist in the United States, and he has won high reputation in the various fields of engineering work that have engaged his attention, with the result that his services are frequently sought by large corporations, both as a geologist and engineer. The great value of his services in connection with the Baltimore and Ohio system is evidenced by the fact that everything pertaining to the development of the resources of that system has to be reviewed by him before being brought up for executive action.

During the Spanish-American war Mr. Lemley was consulting engineer to two large contracting companies engaged in war work at Washington and Philadelphia. In the year 1922 he is consulting engineer to two important independent coal corporations and two large oil corporations.

While he was a student in the university, 1887-91, Mr. Lemley was fortunate in studying and working under the direction of Col. T. Moore Jackson, the first to hold the chair of engineering in the University of West Virginia, and Dr. I. C. White, the eminent geologist of Morgantown, in making the first geological survey of the Pennsylvania extension, from Greene and Washington counties, Pennsylvania, through West Virginia, and in locating what later became known as the Mannington and Wolf Summit oil fields, the largest in this state. Data obtained in this survey were later used by Dr. White in his first geological survey of West Virginia. Mr. Lemley was also with Col. T. Moore Jackson of Clarksburg, West Virginia, when he made the reconnaissance survey of the West Virginia Short Line Railroad from New Martinsville to Clarksburg, the lowest grade between the Monongahela and Ohio Rivers. In 1899, made a report to the president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company relative to the resources of that system, especially in the State of West Virginia, and as a basis for future development. This report had much to do with leaving the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad and entering that of the Baltimore & Ohio.

Mr. Lemley's professional work has brought him into personal contact with men of great prominence and influence, including Messrs. John K. Cowan, Oscar G. Murray, L. F. Lorce, former presidents of the Baltimore & Ohio E. H. Harriman, the late Henry G. Davis and the late Stephen B. Elkins, besides many others.

During his association with Mr. Harriman, when the latter was considering a coast to coast low grade line, he offered solution of the Allegheny Mountain grade between the Ohio and Potomac rivers by presenting a plan for a water gap tunnel about twenty-eight miles in length through the Allegheny Mountains, which was discussed also with Harriman by James M. Graham, chief engineer of the Baltimore & Ohio, and which was so favorably received by Mr. Harriman that he stated to Mr. Lemley that he would certainly like to see this line built, and to work out the proposition as a future project in case it could not be constructed at present time, as he considered it one of the greatest and most economical engineering feats in the United States.

Mr. Lemley is a member of the Society for the Advancement of Science, served as president of the West Virginia University Engineering Club, and the Columbia Literary Society of the W. V. U.; is a member of the Phi Sigma Kappa second fraternity chartered in the West Virginia University in 1891. He is a member of the Navy League, Washington, D. C., of the Kiwanis Club of Morgantown, and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Mr. Lemley's first wife was Mary Heilig Little, of Luthville, Maryland, who died without issue. On June 7, 1919, he married Miss Katherine Kalling Landwehr, who was born at Baltimore, Maryland, a daughter of Gerhart A. Mary (Kalling) Landwehr, both natives of that city and deceased. Mrs. Lemley graduated from the University of Maryland. She is popular in the social activities of Morgantown and is an active member of the Present Day Club of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Lemley have had two children, Katherine Dalrymple, born November 9, 1911, and Cass McCarl, Jr., born June 16, 1913, who died February 19, 1919.

BENJAMIN O. ROBINSON, M. D., has been established in the practice of his profession in the City of Parkersburg since the year 1904, and is consistently to be designated as one of the representative physicians and surgeons of his native county, the name of the Robinson family having been prominently and influentially linked with civic and industrial history in this county since the pioneer days.

Dr. Robinson was born in the Lubeck District of Wood County, West Virginia, on the 10th of March, 1879, and one of the four children—all living—of James W. and Margaret Ann (Taylor) Robinson, both of whom likewise were born and reared in Wood County. James W. Robinson's father, Benjamin Robinson, was the pioneer founder of the family in Wood County, where he obtained land and developed a productive farm and where he played well his part in connection with the earlier stages of civic and material progress, both he and his wife having been honored pioneers of the county at the time of their deaths. James W. Robinson gained his youthful education in the schools of his locality and period, and in connection with the basic industries of agriculture and stock growing he here achieved large measure of success. He was a man of civic loyalty and progressiveness, commanded unqualified popular esteem and was influential in community affairs of public order. He served as county assessor and later as land appraiser in his native county, and he was distinctly an honored and representative citizen of Wood County at the time of his death in 1913, his widow being still a resident of her native county, which is endeared to her by many hallowed memories and associations.

The invigorating discipline of the old home farm compasses the childhood and earlier youth of Dr. Robinson, and the made good use of the advantages of the public schools of a native county is indicated by the fact that at the age of fifteen years he became a successful and popular teacher of the school of his home district. In consonance with his self defined ambition and purpose he entered in 1900 the College of Physicians and Surgeons in the City of Baltimore, Maryland, and in this great institution he was graduated in 1904, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. While in Baltimore he further fortified himself by the valuable clinical experience which he gained in one year of service as an intern in Mercy Hospital. Upon receiving his degree he returned to his native county and engaged in active general practice at Parkersburg, the county seat, in which city he is long controlled a large and representative practice. The doctor has insistently kept in touch with advances made in medical and surgical science, and in evidence of this is the fact that on three different occasions he has taken effective post-graduate courses in the celebrated Post-Graduate School of Medicine in New York City. Though his practice is of general order, Dr. Robinson gives special attention to surgery, in which department of professional work he has gained high reputation. He is actively identified with the American Medical Association, the Southern Medical Association, the West Virginia State Medical Society and the Wood County Medical Society. During the period of American participation in the World War Dr. Robinson served as a member of the Examining Board of Wood County, in connection with the calling of young men into the nation's service, and he is otherwise prominent in connection with local patriotic activities. In the time-honored Masonic fraternity the doctor's maximum York Rite affiliation is with the Commandery of Knights Templar in his home city, and in the Scottish Rite he has received the thirty-second degree, besides which he is a member of Nemesis Temple of the Mystic Shrine. He is a member also of Parkersburg Lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and of the Elks and Country Clubs of his home city.

September 30, 1916, recorded the marriage of Dr. Robinson and Miss Marjorie Cloy Behringer, of Defiance, Ohio, and she is a popular figure in the representative social activities of Parkersburg.

JOHN DANA. A few miles above Parkersburg is the City of Marietta, the site of the first permanent settlement established in the Northwest Territory. The Marietta Colony, organized in New England, extended its holdings up and down the river on the Ohio side for a number of miles, including the little town of Belpre, just across the river from Parkersburg. One of the original members of the Marietta Colony was Captain William Dana, and he chose his land at Belpre. The Dana farm has been in the possession of members of that family for more than a hundred and thirty years, and naturally the interests of the Dana family have expanded to Parkersburg, where a number of the family have become prominent in business and civic affairs, including Mr. John Dana, head of the Dana Company, wholesale grocers.

He is a great-grandson of Captain William Dana, who in 1740 was a great-grandson of Richard Dana, a French Huguenot who came from England to Cambridge, Massachusetts, in 1640 and was the ancestor of the widespread and distinguished American family of this name. Captain William Dana was born at Cambridge, Massachusetts, and ended as a minute man in the Lexington alarm on the day of the battle of Lexington. He became a member of the Dana Company organized to promote settlement in the Northwest Territory, and he reached Marietta in June, 1788. He erected and burned a kiln of brick that summer, and was the first brick maker in the Northwest Territory. As noted above, he chose his land allotment at Belpre, and in November, 1789, arrived with his family to occupy this land. It was covered with a heavy growth of timber, and his first task was clearing away the woods. In the spring of 1795 he set out on his land the first apple orchard of grafted fruit, and the last tree of the orchard stood until the spring of 1875. The Danas for a century or more have been prominent in the horticulture and nursery industry of this section of the Ohio Valley. Captain William Dana married in 1770 Mary Sheroff, of the noted New England family of that name. Of their eleven children the first born after the family came to Ohio was George, whose birth occurred at Belpre March 18, 1790. He spent his entire life on the old farm and in 1816 engaged in the nursery business, a business that greatly stimulated the commercial orchard industry of the Ohio Valley. George Dana died April 6, 1865. His wife was Deborah Ames Fisher.

Their son George, Jr., was born at the old homestead December 4, 1821, attended Marietta College and the Ohio University at Athens, and became associated with his father in the nursery business. As a business man he had numerous interests on the Virginia side of the river, and for many years he was a stockholder and director in the First National Bank of Parkersburg. His home was always the old farm at Belpre. He died June 21, 1892. In 1852 he married Lucy Byington. He and his bride made a trip to the Choctaw Nation in old Indian Territory. Her father, Rev. Cyrus Byington, was a New England missionary who went among the Choctaw Indians as early as 1820, and continued his work there for many years, having translated portions of the Bible into the Choctaw language.

John Dana, a son of George and Lucy (Byington) Dana, was born February 10, 1856, on the Dana farm at Belpre. He is a graduate of Marietta College, and early in his business career came to Parkersburg. Since August 1, 1910, he has been president of the Dana Company, which is properly considered as the oldest wholesale grocery house at Parkersburg. The business was founded in 1862 by M. Woods & Company at the corner of First and Ann streets. Later the business was conducted by Frank Jenkins, who in 1868 sold out to Thompson & Jackson, comprising George W. Thompson, Henry C. Jackson and General John J. Jackson. This firm moved the location to the corner of Third and Ann streets, and Henry C. Jackson was the leading spirit in the business until it was sold to the Dana Company.

While his business is in Parkersburg, John Dana still maintains his residence at Belpre. He has served as mayor of that town, and for many years as a member of its Board of Education. He is a republican and a member of the Congregational Church. February 10, 1886, he married Anna Lockwood. She was born at Paden Valley, now Paden City, in Westbuck County, West Virginia, daughter of Jacob E. and Olivia (Paden) Lockwood. She is a great-granddaughter of a West Virginia pioneer, Obadiah Paden, who prior to 1790 moved out of the Susquehanna Valley of Pennsylvania into the beautiful region named in his honor as Paden Valley, Virginia, now West Virginia, and which remained in the family until about 1871. He became a farmer, was a Quaker, and never held office, and so far as known none of his family did. He was considered wealthy in those days, and accumulated much land and other property, all of which was willed to his heirs. His wife was Esther Dunn. One of their sons was James Paden, who married Elizabeth Elson, of a family near Meadville, Pennsylvania. James Paden was a farmer in Paden Valley and died before the Civil war. He was one of the prosperous and influential citizens of his locality. There was a large family and the following children lived to have families: Olivia, who was married to Jacob E. Lockwood; David, who married Elizabeth Pennington; Elizabeth, who became Mrs. Ephraim Wells; Elson, who married Martha Hayman; and Obadiah, who married Miss Mary Ann Thompson. Jacob E. Lockwood and wife were the parents of five children: Anna Elizabeth, wife of John Dana; Ida M., deceased, who married Herman O. Witte; Charles Edward, who died in infancy; William Clinton and Blanche Paden Lockwood, both of Parkersburg, West Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dana became the parents of six children. The oldest, George R. Dana, who was born June 20, 1887, was a graduate of Marietta College, grew up in his father's business, and was active manager of the Dana Company when he died April 4, 1917. June 28, 1911, he married Grace Coe, and left one son, George William Dana. The second child of Mr. and Mrs. Dana is Miriam Isabel, who is the wife of Elliott Sargent Stone and lives at Belpre. Lockwood Nye, the third child, was a first class sergeant in the Quartermaster's Department at Camp Sherman during the World war and is now a resident of Parkersburg and one of the officials of the Dana Company. He married Velma

Edith Crow, daughter of Captain William and Louise (Somers) Crow, of Ripley, Jackson County, West Virginia. The fourth of the children is Roderick L., a resident of Parkersburg and manager of the old Amherst Company of Balpre, Ohio. He married Mildred Martin and has two children: Martin Lawrence and Richard Bancroft. Jeanette Paden and Edward Byington are at home. Mr. and Mrs. Dana have also reared in their home Florence O. and Marshall E. Witte, who through their mother, Ida M. Lockwood Witte, are descendants of the old Paden stock.

JAMES E. MILLER, who is president of the J. E. Miller Company in the City of Parkersburg, is known and honored as one of the most progressive business men and loyal and public-spirited citizens of this vigorous Ohio river city. He was born in Washington County, Ohio, on a farm near the Ohio River and not far distant from the city in which he now maintains his home. The date of his nativity was August 25, 1874, and he is a son of Austin D. and Mary E. (Goddard) Miller, both of whom were born and reared in Jackson County, Ohio. David Miller, grandfather of the subject of this review, was born and reared in New Hampshire, a representative of a sterling Colonial family of New England, and he was a young man when he made his way to Ohio from New Hampshire and became a pioneer farmer in Jackson County. He was reared on his father's New England farm. Austin D. Miller served as a gallant soldier of the Union in the Civil war, as a member of an Ohio regiment of volunteer infantry, and after its close he continued for many years as one of the representative exponents of farm industry in Washington County, Ohio, where his death occurred in the year 1910 and where his widow still maintains her home. Of the five children three are living.

James E. Miller reverts with satisfaction to the fortifying experience that early became his in connection with the activities of the old home farm on which he was born and with the operations of which he continued his association until he had attained to his legal majority. In the meanwhile he profited by the advantages offered in the public schools of his native county, and later he completed a course in a business college at Parkersburg, a city with which he has been familiar since his childhood days. At the age of twenty-one years Mr. Miller made a radical change in environment and occupation by going to the city of Chicago, in which great western metropolis he was employed three years in a clerical capacity in a leading mail-order mercantile establishment. In 1898 he returned to the home farm, and after there remaining two years he went to Columbus, Ohio, where he continued his residence seven years and where his active association with the furniture business gave him the experience that has proved of inestimable value in his individual activities in connection with this branch of mercantile enterprise.

In 1907 Mr. Miller came to Parkersburg and engaged in the retail furniture business. Success attended the venture, and he had developed a well equipped establishment at the time when, in 1913, the property was destroyed in the great flood which devastated much of the city in that year. He then incorporated the Miller Furniture Company, which he sold in 1918. He forthwith made provisions for the re-establishing of his business, and incorporated as the J. E. Miller Company. As president of this company he has built up one of the leading enterprises of the kind in the city. The large and well appointed furniture establishment of the J. E. Miller Company is at 404 Market Street, and is metropolitan in equipment and service, with a substantial patronage of representative order.

Mr. Miller is independent in politics, and he and his wife are active members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Parkersburg. In the time-honored Masonic fraternity he is a past master of Mount Olivet Lodge No. 3, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; is at the time of this writing, in 1921, an officer of Jerusalem Chapter No. 3, Royal Arch Masons, and of Calvary Commandery, No. 3, Knights Templars; while in the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite he is past venerable master of Purnell Lodge of Perfection No. 2, and an officer in Odell S. Long Chapter No. 2, Rose Croix. He is also affiliated with Nemesis Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, and is a member of its fine patrol.

The year 1899 recorded the marriage of Mr. Miller and Miss Linnie M.'Dye, of Marietta, Ohio, and they have eight children, namely: Edwin J., William T., Marie E., Carl and Elsie (twins), Roscoe, Margaret and David.

CHARLES A. KREPS is one of the able lawyers of West Virginia and has had a busy practice at Parkersburg since 1903. He has also gained prominence in the republic party of the state and is treasurer of the West Virginia Bar Association.

Mr. Kreps was born January 22, 1875, at Greenville Mercer County, Pennsylvania, son of Adam T. and Anna (Hamblin) Kreps.

His great-grandfather, Michael Krebs, as the name was spelled in several generations, was a Revolutionary soldier, having been a corporal in Captain Baltzer Ort Company, Second Battalion, Lancaster County Militia, a private in Captain David Krause's Fourth Company, Second Battalion, Lancaster County Militia. He was a hatter by trade and lived at Lebanon, Pennsylvania. His son, Jacob Krebs, was born at Lebanon in 1772, married Catherine Hetterick in 1794, also became a hatter, and about 1798 established his home in Franklin County, Pennsylvania where he built up an extensive and prosperous industry. His son, Jacob F. Kreps, was born in Franklin County in 1818 and died in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, in 1881. He acquired a good education, learned his father's trade and for some years traveled over the Ohio Valley as a salesman for his father's product. In subsequent years his business interests became widely extended, including merchandising the foundry industry and railroading. He was a member of the Legislature after the war, held a number of local offices and was a leader in arousing his community to action at the beginning of the Civil war, and five of his sons were volunteers. He was a local minister of the Methodist Church. Jacob F. Kreps married Eliza Turney in 1831. She was born in 1811 and died in 1887.

The sixth of their ten children was Adam Turney Kreps who was born in Franklin County, Pennsylvania, December 31, 1842. He was for three and a half years in the Civil war being with the 15th Pennsylvania Cavalry, known as the Anderson Cavalry, 145th Regiment, Pennsylvania volunteer and for about a year and a half was a first lieutenant of the 67th and 92nd Regiment, U. S. C. I. After the war he became a manufacturer of engines and saw mills at Greenville Mercer County, and subsequently removed to West Virginia, where he was in the timber and lumber business as an oil and gas production. He married Alice Hamblin, who was born in Mercer County in 1849. Her father, John K. Hamblin, was a son of Samuel and a grandson of John Hamblin, a was born at Washington, New York, in 1809, lived for seven years in Ohio, and in 1838 settled at Greenville, Pennsylvania where he established the first foundry, and conducted the business for nearly half a century.

Charles Albert Kreps, oldest living son of Adam T. Kreps and wife, came with his parents to Parkersburg in 1894, when he was nineteen years of age. He had graduated from the high school of Greenville, Pennsylvania, in 1892, and in 1894 received his A. B. degree from Marietta College in Ohio. He then entered George Washington University in the City of Washington, where he received his law degree in 1900 and in November of that year began his professional practice at Parkersburg.

Mr. Kreps was a member of the local draft board during the World war. He served five years as chairman of the Republican County Central Committee, and has held the post of treasurer of the West Virginia Bar Association fifteen years. He is also a member of the American Bar Association. Mr. Kreps is unmarried and has found time to cultivate a number of social and civic interests, though his legal practice is always been heavy. He is a Knight Templar and third second degree Scottish Rite Mason and Shriner, and is past master of Mount Olivet Lodge No. 3, A. F. and A. M., past high priest of Jerusalem Chapter No. 3, R. A. M., prominent commander of Calvary Commandery No. 3, K. T.

THOMAS EDWARD GRAHAM. Parkersburg as a great growing center of commerce and industry will always be due to the enterprise and personality of the late Thomas Edward Graham. He was more than a plain, practical business

J. E. Graham

Mr. Harvey removed to Parkersburg in October, 1878, and for two years was associated as publisher with the West Virginia Walking Beam, a weekly periodical devoted to the oil industry. His associates were Van A. Zeveley, founder of the paper, and Watt Warren. The Walking Beam met an untimely death at the end of two years. After its obsequies

Mr. Harvey found work with the Parkersburg Sentinel, and to that old and prominent West Virginia journal he has dedicated the best years of his life. He has been connected with every department of the paper, though primarily his interest is in the news and editorial department. The Sentinel was founded in 1875 by J. W. Horner. At his death about two years later he was succeeded by his son, Rolla E. Horner, who continued as publisher and editor of the Sentinel until 1909. The property was then sold to the Parkersburg Sentinel Company, of which Allan B. Smith was president until his death in 1918. Mr. Harvey succeeded Mr. Smith as president and general manager of the publishing company in addition to the duties he has long performed as editor.

Of his character as a newspaper man Judge Tavenner says: "Charles P. Harvey is the dearest lover of truth of any newspaper man I have ever known. He finds no work too arduous in order to arrive at the truth. This characteristic he exemplifies not only as a newspaper man, but as a private citizen."

It is noteworthy that Mr. Harvey has never taken a part in practical politics, though is a democrat when it comes to voting. He is a member of the Parkersburg Chamber of Commerce, the local Kiwanis Club, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and is a Catholic. He married Miss Minnie McKone, of Piedmont, West Virginia. Their only son, Robert Emmet, was in the World war and died in 1920. Their two daughters are Marjorie Cecelia and Genevieve, the latter now Mrs. Merritt T. Duveraux, of Portland, Oregon.

STEPHEN CHESTER SHAW. While he never accumulated riches, Stephen Chester Shaw distributed the wealth of his lifetime endeavor and his influence generously throughout the long period of his residence at Parkersburg, where he was justly esteemed as one of the city's foremost and most beloved men.

He was born in Lewis County, New York, in 1808, son of Philip Shaw. As a boy his health was delicate, and after reaching manhood physicians held out only a brief expectancy of life for him. To find a more equable climate he started South in 1832, but traveled only as far as Parkersburg, where he found the circumstances that combined a congenial atmosphere and eventually enabled him to live usefully for nearly fifty-eight years. Though an utter stranger, he secured employment in the office of the Circuit Court clerk. At that time John Stephenson was clerk and also kept a hotel. Stephen C. Shaw served as deputy clerk several years, and during that time married Fanny Edelen. The capabilities perhaps that brought him employment in the county clerk's office at first was his skill as a penman. While there he acquired a broad range of legal knowledge, particularly in drawing up legal papers, and subsequently for many years he made a regular profession of chancery work, probating wills, settling estates, and also acting as expert accountant. At the beginning of the Civil war in 1861 he espoused the Confederate cause. Though past military age, he would have gone into the army but for feeble health. His blood relatives were all on the Union side.

Stephen C. Shaw could never have achieved the position of a man of wealth. He always had burdens that required all his income to satisfy. Besides supporting his own family he helped to rear a number of other children, and his love and devotion to his friends caused him to endorse a great deal of paper, frequently leading to losses. He was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and this church was benefited both by his advice and writings. He was a strong believer in temperance and organized the first Good Templar Lodge at Parkersburg. The social side of his life was also represented by membership in the Masons and Odd Fellows. Stephen Chester Shaw died at his home in Parkersburg in 1891, and though thirty years have elapsed his memory is still green there.

The next to the youngest of his six children is Robert M. Shaw, who was born on Friday, March 13, 1847, and has lived all his life in Parkersburg. He attended public schools but at the age of twelve went to work to earn his own living, being employed as a printer's "devil." At eighteen he entered merchandising, and was in that line for twenty years and for twenty-eight years was on the road as a commercial traveler. For several years past Mr. Shaw has been general manager of the two plants of the White Star Laundry Company. He has been identified with the Parkersburg Chamber of Commerce, is a Mason, has been a life-long democrat, and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

In 1868, at the age of twenty-one, he married Ann Logan, daughter of Randolph Logan. Of the nine children born to Mr. and Mrs. Shaw four daughters and two sons living.

CURTIS MILLER HANNA. A brainy lawyer of Parkersburg who has in a brief number of years earned a high rank in profession, Curtis Miller Hanna has also been interested some extent in politics, in public questions affecting community and state, and for over a year was in the service of his country during the World war.

He was born on a farm near Charleston, West Virginia, October 6, 1886, only son and child of Russell K. & Katharine (Pfeiffer) Hanna. The parents were native Virginians and his father for many years conducted a mercantile establishment in one of Charleston's suburbs. He died in 1891 and the widowed mother is still living.

Curtis Miller Hanna grew up in the vicinity of Charleston, attended public schools, and finished his law course in University of West Virginia. He passed the bar examination in 1908, and for about five years practiced at Parsons Tucker County. From June, 1913, to March, 1915, he was assistant insurance commissioner of the state, resigning that work to come to Parkersburg and achieve a permanent and substantial place in his profession.

Mr. Hanna left his office and on February 25, 1918, enlisted as a private in the Ordnance Department of the United States Army and in July of the same year was sent overseas. Six months later, after the armistice was signed, he returned home and received his honorable discharge April 1919. Mr. Hanna is a republican in matters of politics, and has kept in close touch with political issues and movements in his home state. Besides his law practice he is secretary and counsel for the Rainelle Oil Company and the North & South Railway Company.

Mr. Hanna is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and the Loyal Order of Moose. On November 1917, he married Mildred Dare, daughter of J. M. Dare.

HON. EDGAR R. STAATS, member of the State Senate, representing the Third District, is a lawyer by profession, a resident of Parkersburg, and was born in Jackson County, where his family of Staats has been one of prominence for a great many years.

Senator Staats was born in Jackson County, January 1, 1878, son of George W. and Diana (Vaughn) Staats. His father was a Union soldier in the Civil war. Edgar Staats acquired a common school education, attended Marsh College, and spent five years in West Virginia University paying his own expenses while there. He graduated in law in 1903 and in 1905 began his practice at Spencer. He was elected in 1907 prosecuting attorney for Roane County, holding that office until 1912. In 1913 he was sergeant-at-law in the House of Delegates, and in the same year removed to Parkersburg, where a favorable reputation having preceded him, he at once entered into a law practice that has grown in volume and importance in successive years.

The Third District, comprising the counties of Pleasants, Ritchie, Wirt and Wood, elected him to the Senate in 1919. His record of service in the Senate was one of more than routine importance. He was chairman of the committee on privileges and elections and a member of the judiciary and good roads committees. He has always been a student of the good roads problem, and has contributed perhaps the most constructive measure in recent times to the good roads program. In the session of 1919 he introduced the proposal for a Constitutional Amendment taking the Class A road out of the hands of the County Court and placing them under the charge of the state. The measure carried by a majority of 118,000, and in the session of 1921, following the Constitutional Amendment, the Legislature gave unanimous approval in both Houses of the bill creating a State Road Commission which was a thing unprecedented in the annals of state legislation. Mr. Staats is a republican. He is a member of the and the Parkersburg Chamber of Commerce. April 16, 1864, he married Mrs. Edith (Jones) Rosser.

ROSS FARIS STOUT. While in former years and at present number of diverse interests claim his attention—merchandising, farming, stock dealing, coal operating—the distinctive accomplishment most widely associated with the name of Ross Faris Stout is as a horseman, breeder and owner of some of the most notable animals owned in West Virginia. His home and business offices are in Clarksburg, the citizenship of Harrison also recalls his record as a new sheriff of the county.

He was born on his father's farm five miles south of Parkersburg, October 2, 1864, being the oldest of the six children of Benton and Josephine (Faris) Stout. Five of these children are living. The parents were also born in Harrison County, and spent their lives here on a farm. Benton Stout was a very successful farmer and a highly respected citizen, and to the age of seventy, and his wife is still living at the age of seventy-eight. They were active Methodists and reared their children in the same faith. Benton Stout was a democrat, but never a seeker for political honors. His parents were James M. and Celia (Basil) or (Bassel) Stout, natives of Harrison County. Josephine (Faris) Stout was the daughter of Ross and Sarah (Green) Faris, also natives of Harrison County.

Ross Faris Stout, who was named for his maternal grandfather, grew up on the farm, and there learned lessons of industry and perseverance that have been invaluable to him all his subsequent experiences. He was his father's constant helper on the farm until he was twenty-one and in the meantime acquired a common school education, supplemented by the training of the school of experience. His independent undertaking was as a merchant at Quiet Dell in Harrison County. The instinct and talents of a dealer have always been prominent in Mr. Stout's character, while he was a merchant at Quiet Dell, he engaged in dealing in horses and cattle, and gradually developed an extensive business buying and shipping cattle. The last few years he was in this business he bought and shipped cattle for exporters. Beginning about 1896 Mr. Stout for years was in the lumber industry, operating a lumber yard in Webster County. Fire eventually destroyed the yard bringing him heavy losses. About that time he was suffering ill health, and his physician advised a change of climate since his physical condition suggested tuberculosis. Acting on this advice Mr. Stout went to Denver, Colorado, and for two years lived in the high altitude. The next year of his residence there he became interested in coal mining, and ever since has had some interests in the mining of this precious metal, though never on a large scale.

On returning to West Virginia Mr. Stout resumed the operations of his timber claim in Webster County for about five years and in the meantime again dealt in cattle. At the end of this four years he was called back to Harrison County to take the management of the estate and affairs of his father who had recently died, leaving a farm of over a hundred acres and a number of other interests. Since that date Mr. Stout's business affairs have largely revolved around the homestead farm. For years he was one of the leading dealers in cattle. In 1912 he was asked to stand for democratic candidate for the office of treasurer and sheriff of Harrison County, was nominated and elected. His official service of four years beginning in January, 1913, was an interruption to his regular business as a farmer, stock man and at the same time constituted a most efficient service to the county. When he went out of office his books balanced to a cent. The republican state treasurer paid him the following tribute, "that his books were the very best kept in the state."

From boyhood Mr. Stout has been fond of horses and horse racing. While still on the old farm as a boy he was the owner of a standard bred horse. He suspected that his father's attitude toward horse racing was unfavorable, and therefore the training of the horse was conducted on a remote meadow at night. One night while returning the horse to the barn, his father inquired the meaning of the heavy pounding of the horse's feet on the turf, and the son gave a frank exposition of his plans to enter the horse in "the green ring" at the county fair. Mr. Stout will never forget his father's laconic reply: "Young man, horse racing is very uncertain." The truth of that statement has frequently been verified in his experience, for he has won many races he never expected to win, and lost many he never expected to lose.

Mr. Stout began his active career as a racer about 1908. Since then he has owned and raced many standard bred horses including the following: Major Hunter, M. F. D., Major Stout, Lord Stout, Blanche Carter, Lotto Watts, Birdona, Lady Venus, Lady Bennett, King Stout, L. Stout, El Canto and Lord Roberts. He has had a few pacers in his stables. Besides owning a string of horses that have appeared at a number of circuits, Mr. Stout is senior member of the firm Ross F. Stout and Brothers, and ranks as one of the leading breeders of standard bred horses in the East. Their stock farm embraces the old homestead in Harrison County. The brothers associated with him are Alfonso and Carl C. Stout. In their stables they own and keep several standard bred mares, including Blanche Carter and others, while their stallions are El Canto sired by San Francisco, and Lord Roberts sired by Aaron.

As noted above Mr. Stout has his home in Clarksburg, his business offices being in the Union Bank Building. He has a number of business connections, and some years ago became interested in coal mining, and as an owner has developed some valuable property now leased. He is vice president and director of the Clarksburg Trust Company and president of the Greenview Brick Company of Clarksburg.

Mr. Stout is a Knight Templar and a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason and Shriner, an Odd Fellow, and has been affiliated with the Methodist Episcopal Church since he was twenty years of age.

During a portion of his boyhood on the old home farm there lived in the same community Thomas Johnston and family. On leaving West Virginia, Mr. Johnston removed to Brooklyn, New York, taking his family, including his daughter, Minnie C., then about twelve years of age. Mr. Stout never forgot this companion of his youth and in later years through correspondence arranged a visit, and from that visit there resulted a marriage in 1893. Mr. and Mrs. Stout became the parents of three sons. The oldest Johnston Stout was killed at the age of thirteen in his father's lumber camp. The second son, Ross F. Stout, Jr., died at the age of two years. The youngest son and the only one now living is Edson Stout, age seventeen.

CORNELIUS KENNEDY. The record of a life of sturdy integrity and steady industry, and of even notable business success, may be told in a few words, but its value to family and community requires much greater space and even then may fall far short of doing justice. The life of the late Cornelius Kennedy, the original founder of the great business corporation known as the Kennedy Construction Company at Parkersburg, West Virginia, illustrated the value of persistent industry, honorable business methods, and proper recognition and appreciation of the duties of good citizenship.

Cornelius Kennedy was born in County Limerick, Ireland, May 1, 1837, and died at his home in Parkersburg, West Virginia, December 7, 1919. He was fourteen years old when he accompanied his parents, John and Margaret (O'Neill) Kennedy, to the United States, one of a family of five children. They first resided at Wytheville, Virginia, and while living there both John and Cornelius helped in the building of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad through that section. John Kennedy died in Virginia, and subsequently his widow and children came to Parkersburg, where her death occurred.

Such educational privileges as Cornelius Kennedy ever enjoyed were afforded in his native land, but no lack of necessary knowledge was ever apparent throughout his long association with some of the keenest business men of the country. He grew to strong and robust manhood, and when the war between the states was precipitated he served for a time in the Confederate Army as a teamster, and afterward was engaged as watchman at the wharf boat landing, Parkersburg, then engaged in teaming for the boat owner, and still later embarked in the teaming business on his own account.

Mr. Kennedy continued his teaming business until about 1889. In the meanwhile public improvements were in progress at Parkersburg and the first paving done was one square on Market between Sixth and Seventh streets. The contractor for this work engaged Mr. Kennedy to do the teaming. When the next paving contract was let by the city it was secured by Cornelius Kennedy, and from that time on his importance in this line of work increased until he was recognized as one of the leading contractors in this section and a large employer of labor. His reputation as a street paving contractor extended beyond Parkersburg, and he was called to Buckhannon, Clarksburg, Fairmont, Grafton and many other cities and satisfactorily filled paving contracts. He carried on his business under the style of Con. Kennedy, contractor, until 1911, when his son, John R. Kennedy, became his partner and the firm name of C. Kennedy & Son was retained until August, 1919, when Mr. Kennedy sold his interest to his son, John R., who organized the present firm operating as the Kennedy Construction Company and carrying on the same line of work established by Cornelius Kennedy.

Cornelius Kennedy married Mary Kane, and a family of eleven children was born to them, John R. Kennedy being the fifth in order of birth, which took place at Parkersburg, April 3, 1878. He spent two years at St. Vincent's College, Beatty, Pennsylvania, and two years at Pittsburgh College, now Duquesne University. On June 13, 1898, he enlisted for service in the Spanish-American war, served eight months in Cuba and was honorably discharged at the close of the war. His business interests have been practically confined to street paving contracting, and it has been his proud ambition to maintain the same high class, dependable methods and standards that have been associated with the name of Kennedy for so many years. He married Miss Ella A. Martin, of Oakland, Maryland, in 1900, and they have three children: Dorothea, Mary and Margaret.

In his rise to ample fortune and public esteem, Cornelius Kennedy largely remained the unpretending man of other days, careful about his own business affairs but taking comparatively little part in politics, although at one time he served usefully in the City Council. Respected by his fellow citizens, he was very generally esteemed by his employees, who always found him generous as well as just. The cause of charity in him found a willing ear and an open purse. Mr. Kennedy and his family were of the Roman Catholic faith.

HARRY OTIS HITESHEW, a Parkersburg lawyer, is a member of the firm Kreps, Russell & Hiteshaw, which represents some of the best abilities and resourcefulness of the West Virginia bar. Mr. Hiteshaw has long been a power in Parkersburg politics and local affairs, and is a member of a family that has been prominent in this part of the Ohio Valley since earliest pioneer times.

For several generations the Hiteshews lived in Maryland and were Quakers. The grandfather of H. O. Hiteshaw was Isaac Hiteshaw. The father was Isaac Wesley Hiteshaw, who was born in Maryland and became one of the pioneer trainmen of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. He was a conductor on the Frederick Division and had charge of the train which carried the soldiers to Harper's Ferry at the time of John Brown's raid. During the Civil war he was in charge of a train between Baltimore and Harper's Ferry. He came as a passenger on the first train into Parkersburg, and thereafter made his home in that city until his death on February 26, 1898. For a number of years he was in the wholesale produce and feed business, and later was a farmer. He was a democrat in politics and in religion was affiliated with the Episcopal Church.

At Parkersburg October 17, 1871, Isaac W. Hiteshaw married Columbia Ann Bradford. She was born at Parkersburg August 16, 1845, daughter of Otis Little and Elinore M. (Talbot) Bradford. To this marriage were born four sons: William B., Charles Talbot, Holmes Moss and Harry Otis.

Through his mother H. O. Hiteshaw is a lineal descendant of that distinguished Puritan Governor, William Bradford, of the Massachusetts Colony. Without taking up in detail the genealogical account it is interesting to note that William Bradford had a son William, a grandson William and a great grandson William; the latter had a son John and a grandson John; the latter was the father of Robert and the grandfather of Robert. The last named Robert Bradford, in the eighth generation from Governor William, was born at Plymouth Massachusetts, in 1750, was a Captain in the American for during the Revolution and brevetted major at the end of the war, and soon afterward moved to the Northwest Territory to take possession of the square mile of land granted to him. He built a log house immediately opposite the foot of Eleonore Hassett Island, and in 1790 built a house at Belpre, just across the river from Parkersburg and lived, there until his death in 1823. His son Otis Little, maternal grandfather of H. Hiteshaw, was born at Belpre in 1799, but spent the greater part of his life in Parkersburg, where he was long prominent in the river trade.

Harry Otis Hiteshaw was born at Parkersburg November 12, 1882. He attended the public schools, and took both literary and law courses at the West Virginia University, graduating in law in 1903. For a year he remained at Morgantown as an associate of former Governor William E. Glasscock, and in the fall of 1904 returned to Parkersburg. Here he practiced with A. Gilmer Patton until the latter's death and then became junior partner of Hiteshaw and McDougall. The firm dissolved partnership when Mr. McDougall was elected to the bench. Since then the firm of Kreps, Russell & Hiteshaw has been organized.

For many years Mr. Hiteshaw has been intimately identified with republican politics in Parkersburg. However, he has not sought political honors outside the strict lines of his own profession. In 1905 he was appointed commissioner of accounts. He was elected prosecuting attorney of Wood County in 1908 and re-elected in 1912, and altogether he served eight years, being the only man ever re-elected to three successive terms in this office in Wood County.

Mr. Hiteshaw is a Knight Templar Mason and is a member of the Elks, the Chamber of Commerce, is a trustee of the Kiwanis Club and belongs to the Kappa Alpha club of fraternity. He is a member of the Episcopal Church. At 26, 1910, at Parkersburg, Mr. Hiteshaw married Ethel Sa White, daughter of Governor A. B. White. They have a daughter, Grace Talbot Hiteshaw.

HUBERT E. GAYNOR, M. D. It is far from the custom of medical men to lay claim to being the most important factor in the life of their communities, but, standing as they do guardians at the gate of health, they undoubtedly deserve such recognition. Parkersburg, West Virginia, can be sure receiving the best of medical attention, as this is the home of a particularly able body of physicians and surgeons, a lead member of which is a native son, Dr. Hubert E. Gaynor.

Dr. Gaynor was born at Parkersburg, September 16, 1878, and is a son of Patrick H. and Margaret Jane (Hark) Gaynor, the former of whom is a native of Athens County, Ohio, and the latter of West Union, West Virginia. Dr. Gaynor, the grandfather of Dr. Gaynor, was the founder of the family in the United States. He was born in Ireland, immigrated in 1845, located in Athens County, Ohio, cleared up a pioneer farm and spent the remainder of a busy, useful life on his homestead. Patrick H. Gaynor was one of a family of six children. He was afforded excellent educational privilege in Ohio, and afterward for many years was a railroad man. He is a well known and highly respected citizen of Parkersburg, and is a member of the police force of the city, serving in the office of desk sergeant.

Hubert E. Gaynor attended the public schools at Parkersburg through boyhood and then entered Duquesne University at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and was graduated from the commercial department in 1899, and in 1904 received the degree of Bachelor of Arts. By that time he had determined on the study of medicine, and in 1905 entered Georgetown Medical University at Georgetown, Washington, D. C., from which he was graduated with his medical degree in 1909.

For eighteen months following graduation Dr. Gaynor served as resident physician of the Children's Hospital, Washington, D. C. Early in 1911 he returned to Parkersburg and entered into a general practice, and has been highly successful. During the World war he was actively interested in local patriotic movements, and responded when the call went out from the government for medical assistance, setting aside his personal affairs. He was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps and was awaiting orders when the armistice was signed, when he resumed private practice at Parkersburg.

Dr. Gaynor is first vice president of the West Virginia State Medical Society, and belongs also to the County Medical Society, the Georgetown Medical Society and the American Medical and the Southern Medical Associations, and since 1917 has been a member of the State Public Health Council. He still continues his interest and membership in the Phi Chi college fraternity, and is active as member of the American Legion. He belongs to the Roman Catholic Church.

ORRA F. COVERT, M. D. The city of Moundsville, Marshall County, claims Dr. Covert as one of its representative physicians and surgeons and as a loyal and public-spirited citizen. He was born at North Fairfield, Huron County, Ohio, February 10, 1865, and is a scion of one of the sterling pioneer families of the Buckeye State, to which the original representative of the Covert family removed from the State of New York and settled in the historic Western Reserve in Ohio. Both the father and paternal grandfather of Dr. Covert were born in Ohio.

Dr. Covert supplemented the discipline of the public schools by attending Heidelberg College at Tiffin, Ohio, and in 1901 he was graduated from the celebrated Rush Medical College in the City of Chicago. He came to West Virginia in 1893, and has since been continuously engaged in active and successful practice in this state. He has been a resident of Moundsville since 1904, and here has a substantial general practice of representative order. He has taken post-graduate courses in the New York Post-Graduate Medical College, the medical department of Tulane University in the City of New Orleans, in leading clinics in the City of Chicago and at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland. Dr. Covert is chief surgeon of Glendale Hospital and is one of the most prominent surgeons in this part of the state. He is identified with the Marshall County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. In the World War period Dr. Covert was called into active service in the Medical Corps of the United States Army, in which he received commission as a captain and in which he was in service at Camp Sherman, Ohio, for eight months. Since the close of the war he has served as acting assistant surgeon in the United States Public Health Service.

Dr. Covert married Miss Alice F. Farrar, of Burlingame, Kansas, in which state her father was a pioneer settler, he having taken prominent part in the vigorous service which prevented the extension of slavery into that state. The land which he owned is Osage County, Kansas, is still in the possession of the family, and his venerable widow is still living (1921). Dr. and Mrs. Covert have one son, Leo D., who is in the practice of medicine in Bellaire, Ohio, and who is specializing in diseases of the eye, nose and throat. He received his degree of Doctor of Medicine from Western Reserve Medical College, Cleveland, Ohio. Dr. L. D. Covert married Gladys Perry, of Asthabula, Ohio.

MARTIN LUTHER CONNELLEY. In Liberty District, Ohio County, ten miles northeast of the City of Wheeling is situated the fine homestead farm of Mr. Connelley, who is now one of venerable native sons of this county and who has stood representative of loyal and progressive citizenship during the course of a long, active and successful career. He was born in Richland District, this county, September 29, 1842, a son of Elisha and Lorena (Eaton) Connelley. In the possession of the family is an antique arithmetic, published in 1816, and having entry of births in the Connelley family.

Elisha Connelley was born in Maryland, near the eastern coast, November 26, 1812, and he was nine years old when his father, William Connelley, there died. The widow and children later removed to Washington County, Pennsylvania, Elisha having been eighteen years old at the time. Soon afterward he came to what is now West Virginia and settled in Ohio County. He brought his mother and other members of the family to the new home, and the mother passed the closing years of her life with one of her daughters, at Wheeling, where she died at the venerable age of ninety-three years. The son, Eli, became a farmer in Marshall County, and his death occurred at Moundsville, when he was eighty-eight years old, one of his sons having met his death while serving as a soldier in the Civil war. William, another of the children of the widowed mother, remained in Wheeling, was a tailor by trade but eventually engaged in the grocery business at North Wheeling, one of his sons, John W., being still a resident of Wheeling.

About the year 1834 Elisha Connelley married Lorana Edmonds, who was born in Pennsylvania, a daughter of William Edmonds, the date of her birth having been January 26, 1816. Elisha Connelley's death occurred April 4, 1898, when he was in his eighty-sixth year, his wife having preceded him to the life eternal. After his marriage Elisha Connelley and his wife established their home in a modest cabin at Greggsville, and he became a teamster for Mr. Gregg, who was engaged in burning charcoal for the iron furnaces of this district. Mr. Connelley later engaged in farming on shares, and from the returns from this line of enterprise he purchased a small house at Greggsville. With increasing prosperity he erected buildings in that village and also became the owner of four farms. He was an energetic and able business man and became one of the representative exponents of agricultural and live-stock industry in this section of the state. He lived virtually retired during the last twenty years of his life, but continued to give his attention to his live stock and farm interests in a general way. He was originally a whig and later a republican in politics, and was one of the few in Richland District who voted for Abraham Lincoln for president of the United States in 1860. He lived to see Richland District become a republican stronghold. He and his wife were converted under the teachings of Alexander Campbell and became members of the Campbellite or Christian Church at Wheeling. Of the children the eldest was William, born at Wheeling, in 1836. He became a farmer and later a feed dealer. Benjamin, born in 1838, served through the Civil war as a member of the Fifteenth United States Regulars, and he was somewhat more than seventy years of age at the time of his death. Rachel, born in 1840, is the widow of George King and resides at Martins Ferry, Ohio. Martin Luther, of this review, was the next in order of birth. Eliza Jane, born in 1845, is the widow of Gilbert Holmes and resides at Garden City, Kansas. Perry, who was born in 1848, was a mere boy when he enlisted for service as a soldier of the Union in the Civil war, but his parents caused his release. At the age of eighteen years he enlisted in the United States Army and was assigned to service on the plains of the West. After his discharge from the army he engaged in mining in the West, and finally, with a companion, he started for the old home, nothing further having been heard of him by members of the family and the supposition being that he and his companion lost their lives in a blizzard.

Martin L. Connelley was reared and educated in his native county and has been actively identified with farm enterprise from the time of his boyhood. He has owned and resided on his present homestead farm since 1870, the same comprising 110 acres, one of the first cabins in this part of Ohio County having been erected on this farm, and the fine springs in the vicinity having led Mr. Connelley to erect his present house near the same. He has made the best of improvement on his farm and has here specialized in the raising of sheep. He served fourteen years as a member of the school board of his district. In 1893 he lost his left arm, below the elbow, while operating the first husking machine brought across the Ohio River into West Virginia. He was associated with A. R. Jacob in organizing and developing the local Farmers Mutual Insurance Company, to the upbuilding of which he devoted many years, in the face of strenuous opposition on the part of old-established companies, and he has the satisfaction of knowing that this corporation has become one of substantial and important order and been of great benefit to the farmers of the locality. The company began operations with $150,000 insurance in force, and when the first loss was paid there was in force $214,000. The business has been remarkably prospered, every loss has been adjusted without recourse to law, for a period of five years no assessments were made, and the corporation now has in force more than $5,000,000 of insurance, its field of operations in Ohio and Marshall counties, West Virginia. Mr. Connelley continued as secretary and treasurer of the company from the time of its incorporation until 1920. He has been for fifty years a zealous member of the United Presbyterian Church at Roneys Point, the church having recently celebrated the semi-centennial of its organization. His wife likewise was an earnest member of this church. Mr. Connelley has been a supporter of the prohibition party forty years—from the time that St. John was its nominee for president. Mrs. Connelley, whose maiden name was Mary E. Giffin, was born and reared in Ohio County and her death occurred in 1884. Of the four children the eldest is Lena Jane, wife of William Holmes, of Garden City, Kansas; Frank E., who has active charge of his father's farm, married Mrs. Elizabeth (Thiers) Blotzer, who has two children by her first marriage—William and Harry; Joseph L. B., who is associated with the Riverside Tube Works, at Wheeling, married Emma Summers, and they have one child, Laura Jean; Laura L., youngest of the children, became the wife of William Connelley and was a young woman at the time of her death.

WILLIAM WEBSTER WHYTE, of Welch, is serving his tenth consecutive year in the office of county clerk of McDowell County, and has long been one of the prominent and influential citizens of this county, where he was for twenty-four years chairman of the Republican County Committee, besides which he has served as county sheriff and county assessor. He is president of the Pocahontas Insurance Company and secretary and treasurer of the Excelsior Pocahontas Coal Company.

Mr. Whyte was born in Amelia County, Virginia, on the 27th of November, 1860, and is a son of Henry and Elizabeth (Webster) Whyte, the former a native of Norfolk, that state, and the latter of Amelia County. The mother died in 1901, aged fifty-nine years, and the father was seventy-two years of age at the time of his death, in 1906. Henry Whyte was a valiant young soldier of the Confederacy in the Civil war, in which he served in the commissary department of the famous Mahone Brigade. He became a republican at a time when such political affiliation was looked upon with general disfavor in Virginia. He was in railway service during virtually his entire active career, and was long an efficient and popular conductor on passenger trains between Norfolk and Petersburg. Later he was in similar service on the Norfolk & Western Railroad. His father, Henry Whyte, Sr., was born in the City of Dublin, Ireland. Henry and Elizabeth (Webster) Whyte became the parents of one son and four daughters.

William W. Whyte attended a preparatory school at Petersburg. He became connected with the Norfolk and Western Railway and for some time was in the maintenance of way department. On the 10th of November, 1888, he came to Elkhorn, McDowell County, West Virginia, in the employ of the Houston Coal Company, and he has been closely identified with coal mining industry in this section of the state, the while he has held various executive positions and has authoritative knowledge of all details of this line of enterprise.

From early youth Mr. Whyte has shown an active interest in politics, and he has been a leader in the councils and campaign activities of the republican party during the period of his residence in McDowell County. He was elected county sheriff in 1896, and in this office gave an effective administration during his term of four years. He was county assessor four years, and since 1912 he has served continuously as county clerk. He has been actively concerned in the development of coal mining in this section, the first coal having been shipped from McDowell County in September, 1888, about one month before he here established his residence. He is affiliated with the local Blue Lodge and Chapter of the Masonic fraternity, as well as the Commandery of Knights Templars at Welch and the Temple of the Mystic Shrine in the City of Charleston, he having served two years as master of the Blue Lodge at Welch. Mr. Whyte has shown both efficiency and a fine sense of loyal stewardship in the various public offices of which he has been the incumbent, and he has secure place in popular confidence and esteem in his home county.

In 1899 Mr. Whyte married Miss Mary Watson, daughter of James Watson, of Chester, Pennsylvania, and they have two sons, James W. and William Webster, Jr.

WILLIAM J. HATFIELD is giving a vigorous and effective administration as sheriff of McDowell County and is one of the popular citizens of Welch, the county seat. He was born on a farm on the Tug River, in Pike County, Kentucky, and the date of his nativity was August 28, 1883. He is a son of Matthew E. and Alice (Davis) Hatfield the former of whom was born in Pike County, in 1849, and the latter of whom was born in the year 1864, their home being now at Rose Siding, Pike County, Kentucky. For many years Matthew E. Hatfield was actively identified with lumbering operations on the Tug River, and took many rafts of logs down the river to the markets. He has been active also as a farmer. On his farm in Pike County, Kentucky, the New Thacker Coal Mining Company is now operating mines. He is a stalwart republican and is a member of the Baptist Church, his wife being a member of the Presbyterian Church. She was born at St. Joseph, Missouri. Of their eight children the eldest and the youngest are deceased.

The public schools afforded William J. Hatfield his early education, which was supplemented by a course in the National Business College at Roanoke, Virginia. Thereafter he was associated with commercial interests at Bluefield, West Virginia, until 1903, when he came to McDowell County and became a successful dealer in real estate, besides which he is interested in three drug stores—one at Welch, one at Iaeger and the third at Wilcox, this county. He has held various official positions in the City of Welch, including that of deputy sheriff. In 1916 he was elected county assessor, and in 1920 he was chosen sheriff of the county, in which office he is fully justifying the popular vote that made him the incumbent. He is affiliated with both York and Scottish Rite bodies of the Masonic fraternity and Beni-Kedem Temple of Charleston, West Virginia, as well as with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Loyal Order of Moose. He holds an interest in the Welch Insurance Agency, of which he is president and is a leader in the local ranks of the republican party.

In 1907 was solemnized the marriage of Sheriff Hatfield and Miss Pearl Johnson, who was born at Glen Lyn, West Virginia, a daughter of J. L. Johnson.

BERNARD SINCLAIR CLEMENTS, M. D. Nearly all the mining families in the Matoaka District have learned to appreciate both the professional skill and the kindly character of Doctor Clements, who came here as a mine physician some fifteen years ago, and has performed his work conscientiously and capably throughout the greater part of the industrial history of that locality.

Doctor Clements was born on a farm in King William County, Virginia, August 20, 1881, son of Eugene V. and Virginia (Clay) Clements. His mother is related to the family of Henry Clay. Clements is an English name. Eugene V. Clements died in 1914, at the age of sixty-three, and his wife died in 1909, aged sixty. Eugene Clements owned a large amount of land and was an extensive farmer in Virginia, and also had two grist mills and did custom grinding for the patronage of a large territory. He provided well for the educational advantages of his children, always voted as a democrat and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The family consisted of six sons and one daughter, Doctor Clements being the youngest son. Ben P. Clements is a cotton planter near Selma, Alabama; Thomas also lives in Alabama; Eugene, Jr., is on the old homestead in Virginia; Dowman is at Richmond; and Vernon died at the age of seventeen.

Harvey H. Lamm

Bernard S. Clements graduated from William and Mary college in 1901 and for two years was engaged in teaching. In 1904 he entered the Medical College of Virginia, graduating in 1907, having carried double work the first two years and passing creditable examinations in every subject. He was also interne in the Richmond City Hospital during 1907, and on leaving there came to West Virginia and for a few months was located at Giatto in Mercer County and then into to Matoaka. Here his practice has been chiefly as a contract physician and surgeon for the mines. This has been heavy and burdensome duty, requiring one or more assistants most of the time, and as he was here during the reconstruction period he had many cases that called for conscientiousness beyond that of an ordinary medical practitioner. He now has charge of the practice for the Redmont Mine, the Algonquin, Weyanoke, Thomas No. 2 and Smokeless mines, including about six hundred families besides his general practice in and around Matoaka.

Doctor Clements in 1908 married Alice Cobb, daughter of John P. Cobb, of Stoney Creek, Virginia. She died in 1909 at the birth of her son, Bernard, Jr. In 1911 Doctor Clements married Blanch Ashworth, daughter of R. C. Ashworth, and a native of Marion, Virginia. The two children of their marriage are Richard K. and Sarah Bousham. Dr. Clements is a member of the Methodist Church. Doctor Clements is affiliated with Rock Lodge of Masons, Ramwell Chapter, R. A. M., is a stockholder in a number of commercial enterprises, and is affiliated with Mercer County, State and American Medical Associations and the Mercer County Club.

CHARLES H. GILMER is a business man of wide experience throughout the district of the Big Sandy and Kentucky rivers, and for a number of years has had his interests more centrally located at Matoaka in Mercer County, where he is president of the Matoaka Wholesale Grocery Company, vice president of the First National Bank, and manager of the Matoaka Hardware Company.

Mr. Gilmer represents an old and prominent family of Virginia and was born at Lebanon in Russell County, Virginia, June 13, 1881, son of E. T. and Ida (Vermillion) Gilmer, who are still living on their farm in Russell County, his father at the age of sixty-two and the mother at fifty-six. His father has always been a loyal democrat, served on the school board, and the family are Methodists.

Charles H. Gilmer, third in a family of eight children, attended Russell College, but at the age of seventeen left school and home and came to Bluefield, West Virginia, where he entered the Bluefield Hardware Company as order clerk. He remained in the local offices and warehouses of the company for three years, gaining a thorough knowledge of the business, at the end of which time he entered a manufacturing business for three years and then became a traveling salesman to look after the business of a large territory along the Big Sandy and Kentucky rivers, including portions of the three states of Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky. At that time the Louisville and Nashville Railroad was extending its line to Fleming, Kentucky, and in the absence of railroad facilities Mr. Gilmer traversed his territory frequently on horseback and in wagons. In the meantime, in 1906, his brother, M. G. Gilmer, had started the Matoaka Hardware Company. In 1916 Charles H. Gilmer came to Matoaka to take the active management of the business, since his brother had been appointed postmaster. Since then Mr. Gilmer has rapidly extended his local commercial interests, and in addition to the management of the hardware company he became one of the organizers of the First National Bank, of which he is vice president, and helped organize the Matoaka Wholesale Grocery Company, of which he is the active head. His abilities and capital have identified him with a number of other local concerns.

Mr. Gilmer in 1910 married Melcinia Hatcher, and they have one daughter, Ida Gray. They are members of the Methodist Church and Mr. Gilmer is chairman of its board of stewards. He is affiliated with the Masonic Lodge at Parkersburg, the Royal Arch Chapter at Bramwell, is a Knight of Pythias, a democrat and a member of the Mercer County Country Club.

HON. HARVEY WALKER HARMER. It is a privilege not enjoyed by all men, to have stood in the front rank of the progressive movements that have, in the past few years, brought the United States to its present position of proud supremacy along the lines of humanitarianism and higher citizenship. It is the justifiable claim of those who love best their native land, that the lamp of liberty lighted by their colonial ancestors so many generations ago still steadily illumines the way along the path of real progress, and that no better proof could be afforded than that given by the nation-wide approval of the momentous additions to the immortal Constitution that recent legislation has made effective. To have been a factor and potential influence in legislation at this time, proves true patriotism and marked public efficiency. In this connection attention may be centered on one of West Virginia's distinguished citizens, Hon. Harvey Walker Harmer, a leading member of the bar at Clarksburg, and twice a member of the West Virginia State Senate.

Harvey Walker Harmer was born at Shinnston, Harrison County, West Virginia, July 25, 1865, a son of Benjamin Tyson and Margaret (Shepler) Harmer. The first representative of the Harmer family in America was an English Quaker who came to Pennsylvania with William Penn. During the Revolutionary war, the great-grandfather, Jacob Harmer, and possibly his father, despite the peaceful principles of their religious belief, served in the Patriot army, in the contingent from Philadelphia. In that city Jacob Harmer (2), the grandfather, was born January 23, 1794, and he was the founder of the family in Winchester, Virginia, where Benjamin Tyson Harmer was born on January 1, 1824. In 1851 he married Margaret Shepler, and in the spring of the following year they came to Shinnston, in what is now West Virginia. Benjamin Tyson Harmer resided there until his death, December 4, 1890. He was a wagonmaker and undertaker, a competent, reliable business man, an active influence in the Methodist Episcopal Church, a faithful Odd Fellow, and a conscientious supporter of the principles of the republican party. For four years he served as president of the County Court.

Harvey W. Harmer attended the public schools in his native place and then entered the State Normal school at Fairmont, from which he was graduated in 1889, following which he taught school for some years, in the meanwhile preparing for a course in law at the West Virginia University, from which institution he received his degree in 1892. Mr. Harmer immediately entered into practice at Clarksburg, where for many years he has ranked as a leader of the bar. In addition to the distinction won in professional life, he has served in many positions of trust and responsibility, and in public affairs has achieved results that reflect credit and honor on his name.

Early in his political life, Mr. Harmer served two years as deputy circuit clerk, for nineteen years was secretary of the Board of Education at Clarksburg, and from 1895 until 1901, was a member of the State Board of Regents of the State Normal schools. In 1894 he was first prominently called into public life by his election to the House of Delegates, where he served two years, and in 1900 was elected state senator, serving as such for four years, and re-elected in 1913 for a second term of four years. When first elected to the Legislature, back in 1894, Senator Harmer was termed the "boy member of the legislature." Nevertheless he made a profound impression at that time by introducing and securing the passage of a number of important measures among which may be named a bill to take politics out of the state university and normal schools, by making the Board of Regents non-partisan. At this session he also introduced a resolution to give women the right to vote. While this early resolution failed to carry, it showed an enlightened understanding and a measure of moral courage that brought him considerable distinction as a pioneer advocate of what, at that time, was an unpopular measure with the majority in West Virginia. That his early opinions had undergone no change was proved when, in the special session of 1920 he introduced in the Senate a resolution to ratify the nineteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution granting suffrage to women. The resolution on a tie vote failed of passage, but when a like resolution passed the House and was reported to the Senate he took the leadership of what proved to be the most memorable fight for the suffrage amendment in all the states. It was by his splendid leadership and thorough knowledge of parliamentary rules that he kept the resolution pending before the Senate for ten days, or until an absent senator was located in California and brought back, and with his vote the resolution was adopted and made it possible for the suffrage or nineteenth amendment to be ratified in time to give the women of all the states the right to vote at the presidential election of 1920. In like manner, the cause of national prohibition has for years engaged his earnest support. In 1903 he voted in the Senate for a state-wide prohibition law, and again in the Senate in 1919, offered the resolution to ratify the eighteenth amendment, and led the fight for its passage. As a statesman, his record is without a blemish. Senator Harmer acquitted himself well in still other capacities. From 1906 to 1907 he served as mayor of Clarksburg and gave the city a fine business administration. He was supervisor of the United States census in 1900 and 1910, and was referee in bankruptcy from 1899 to 1901. During the World war he was a member of the Harrison County local advisory board and was active in every patriotic movement of the time. From his youth he has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and actively identified with its various agencies for good. In 1908 he was lay delegate from West Virginia to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church held at Baltimore, and for several years past has been a trustee of the West Virginia Wesleyan College at Buckhannon.

In 1901 Senator Harmer was married to Miss Nellie Marten, a daughter of Henry C. and Dora (Britner) Marten, residents of Shepherdstown, West Virginia. An ardent republican throughout the entire period of his political life, Senator Harmer has always been faithful to his political obligations and his chosen friends are men whose public careers and private lives have been as irreproachable as his own. Aside from political, professional and social connections of a more or less responsible character as usually claims attention from a man of marked importance, Senator Harmer has definitely identified himself with no fraternal organization except the order of Odd Fellows.

JOHN B. NEAL, manager of the Matoaka Wholesale Grocery Company, not only has a fundamental knowledge of the grocery business itself, but also the grocery trade of a large section of Southern West Virginia. He is a very capable business man, also an active leader in the general welfare of Matoaka and has spent practically all his life in Mercer County.

He was born near Wills on New River in that county March 13, 1865, son of William and Martha (Smith) Neal. His father died in 1911, at the age of eighty-one, and his mother in 1915, aged seventy-seven. William Neal was a native of Monroe County, West Virginia, and prior to the Civil war moved to Mercer County. He became a Confederate soldier and was stationed with the reserves at the battle of Gettysburg. About 1870 he moved from Wills to Rock. His career was that of a farmer, and he was a member of the Methodist Church, while his wife was a Baptist. She was a daughter of Ben Smith and a niece of Capt. William Smith, the founder of Princeton. William Neal and wife had five children: George, who for many years was a teacher in Mercer County and died in 1899; Newton, who lived on the old home place at Rock and died in 1913; Clementine, wife of William Smith, of Athens; and Henry, who lives at Montcalm in Mercer County.

John B. Neal, oldest of the three living children, acquired his early education at Rock and later attended the Princeton High School. At the age of fourteen he was given his first term of school to teach, and every successive winter until he was twenty-one he taught, and usually attended school to advance his own education during the summer. His earnings as a teacher he turned over to his father, and when he left home at the age of twenty-one, his father gave him only eleven dollars to bridge over the gap leading to his first employment. He soon joined an engineer corps surveying and locating mines in Mercer, Raleigh and Raleigh counties for the Flat Top Coal Corporation, later the Pocahontas Coal and Coke Company. 1891 Mr. Neal opened a general stock of merchandise at Rock, and was in business there for nine years. Following that he became a traveling salesman for the Flat Top Coal Company of Bluefield, and for thirteen years represented this company in the territory of Mercer, Wyoming and Raleigh counties. When the Matoaka Wholesales Grocery Company was organized in the spring of 1921 he became its manager, a post of duty for which his long experience made him especially well qualified. Mr. Neal also vice president of the First National Bank of Matoaka and is a director of the Princeton National Bank, having helped organize both institutions. He is a director of Brand Shoe Company, a wholesale house at Roanoke, Virginia, and is interested in a number of coal operations.

In 1895 he married Miss Ida Bailey, daughter of Al C. Bailey, of Rock. Their family consists of four live children: Bernard, an employee of the Matoaka Wholesales Grocery Company; Perry, a carpenter living at Rock; George, attending the Concord State Normal at Athens; and a son, a schoolboy; while Howard died while serving in the United States Army before the World war. Mr. Neal has been a master of the Lodge of Masons at Rock, is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Knights Pythias, and is a democratic voter.

JOHN H. BIRD, M. D. By the effective work he has done as a physician and citizen at Rock in Mercer County, Doctor Bird has added to the many distinctive professional associations of the Bird family. He comes of a family of doctors and professional men.

He was born at Athens in Mercer County October 6, 1858, son of John S. H. and Elizabeth Jane (Vermillion) Bird. His father, who was born in Montgomery County, Virginia and died at Athens, West Virginia, February 20, 1917, the age of seventy-three, joined the Confederate Army at Bland, Virginia, at the age of sixteen, served four years and after the war moved to Mercer County, West Virginia where he was a farmer. He was always deeply interested in the cause of education and was a member of the local educational board for many years. His wife, Elizabeth Jane Vermillion, was born in Pulaski County, Virginia, and now seventy-four, living at Athens. Her father, Dr. Jar R. Vermillion, was a pioneer physician at Athens. Doctor Vermillion, Harvey French and John S. H. Bird were close friends, and their common interest in education made them prime movers in founding what is now the Concord State Normal at Athens. Eight descendants of Doctor Vermillion are either physicians or dentists. John S. H. Bird's wife were the parents of sixteen children, twelve of whom are living, and two of the sons are dentists, S. T. at Princeton and Keith at Gary. John S. H. Bird was an officer in the Regular Baptist Church, while his wife was a Missionary Baptist.

Dr. John H. Bird attended the normal school at Athens taking a stenographic course, and for three years was the employ of the R. E. Wood Lumber Company. This version into business gave him the money to prepare for a professional career. In 1901 he entered the Maryland Medical College of Baltimore, graduating in 1905. He took special work in anatomy, surgery and obstetrics. Following his graduation he practiced at Athens, associated with Doctor Thornton for a time, but soon removed to Rock, where he has enjoyed an ever increasing clientele, and from 1918 to 1912 conducted a private hospital there. He is a member of the Mercer County and State Medical Societies.

WILLIAM A. MILLER, manager of the Princeton Milling company at Princeton, Mercer County, is one of the prominent figures in the industrial and commercial life of this section of the state, and is a citizen of utmost loyalty and progressiveness. He was born in Craig County, Virginia, January 20, 1865, and is a son of George C. and Melvina (Caldwell) Miller, the former of whom died in 1903, aged fifty-eight years, and the latter of whom passed away in 1897, at the age of fifty-eight years. Though George C. Miller was long identified with farm industry, he also gave many years of effective service as a teacher in the public schools, and not a few of the leading citizens of the present day in Tazewell County, Virginia, and Wayne County, West Virginia, were numbered among his pupils. In 1871 Mr. Miller came to Mercer County, West Virginia, and settled on a farm on Greasy Ridge, both he and his wife having passed the remainder of their lives in this county and both having been devoted members of the Baptist Church, in which Mr. Miller held various official positions. In politics he was a staunch democrat, and at the time of the Civil war he gave two years of service as a soldier of the Confederacy. Of the eight children only two are now living—John W., a farmer near Spanishburg, Mercer County, and William A., of this review.

William A. Miller was a lad of six years at the time when the family home was established in Mercer County, and he gained his youthful education in the public schools of the various localities in which the family resided while his father was engaged in teaching. At the age of twenty-one years he opened a small general store at Ingleside, Mercer County, and there he developed a prosperous enterprise. After continuing this business eleven years he sold the same and took the position of mill foreman for the firm of Suddith & Bailey at Welch, McDowell County, where he remained thus engaged for six years. He then became associated with Bloom Swim in the purchase of a saw mill at Oney Gap, Mercer County, and they operated the mill three years. Mr. Miller thereafter held for three years the position of bookkeeper for the wholesale establishment of the Mercer Grocery Company at Princeton. The next three years found him in effective service as manager of the Princeton Milling Company, a position which he reassumed after an interval of two years' administration as city treasurer. Mr. Miller is an able and substantial business man and is a citizen who has a secure place in popular confidence and esteem. His political allegiance is given to the republican party, he is affiliated with the Blue Lodge and Chapter of the York Rite of Masonry, and he and his wife hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

In 1892 Mr. Miller wedded Miss Dean Stinson, daughter of Loraine Stinson, of Mercer County, and she passed to eternal rest in 1904. She is survived by two sons and three daughters. Bernard B. is engaged in farming on the old homestead of his maternal grandfather on Greasy Ridge, this county, and in this enterprise his younger brother, Guy, is associated. In 1907 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Miller with Mrs. Mamie (Oney) Straley, daughter of E. M. Oney, of Mercer County, and the one child of this second marriage is a son, William A., Jr.

FRED G. STROEHMANN has been a business builder, creator of a large and valuable industry for the City of Wheeling, and just thirty years ago founded what is now the Stroehmann Baking Company, incorporated, and in all its successive improvements it has never failed to keep the lead in the matter of quality and wholesomeness of product.

Mr. Stroehmann has been an American by residence and in fact and in loyalty for forty years. He was born in the City of Leun, Kreis, Rhine Province, Germany, August 3, 1866, son of Jacob and Catherine (Lotz) Stroehmann. He attended the common schools, served his apprenticeship at the baker's trade, and at the age of sixteen reached the United States, September 22, 1882. After four years at Parkersburg he moved to Wheeling, and was a journeyman for six years with the Wheeling Baking Company.

Mr. Stroehmann established a business for himself in April, 1892, his first shop being at 2211 Market Street, quarters which he subsequently used as a retail store. Several successive additions and purchases were made, beginning about ten years after the opening of the first plant, until Mr. Stroehmann acquired for the use of his business all the ground from the corner of Twenty-second up to and including his original shop. On this ground was erected in 1911 a large four-story baking plant, equipped with every facility known to the baking art. This business was one of the first in the Upper Ohio Valley to introduce not only the mechanical devices for the utmost efficiency in the baking of bread and other products, but also in the sanitary handling of the product and in measures and safeguards for the health and welfare of the employees.

On the basis of the large business which Mr. Stroehmann had built up the Stroehmann Baking Company was incorporated in 1905. The executive officers were: Fred G. Stroehmann, president; L. F. Stroehmann, vice president; W. H. Truschel, secretary and treasurer; R. M. Truschel and C. H. Stroehmann, directors.

The Stroehmann Baking Company built a large plant in 1916 in Huntington, West Virginia, also bought a plant in 1919 in Ashland, Kentucky, which are all successfully operated through the Wheeling main office, and are all under the personal direction of Mr. Stroehmann.

Mr. Stroehmann is now one of the older active business men of Wheeling, and his citizenship has been on a par with his commercial success, revealing his public spirited attitude again and again. He has been a member of the Board of Trade and the Business Men's Association, and is a member of the various Masonic bodies at Wheeling, affiliated with Ohio Lodge No. 1, A. F. and A. M., Union Chapter No. 1, R. A. M., Wheeling Commandery No. 1, K. T., Wheeling Masonic Club, and is a thirty-second degree Mason, and a member of Osiris Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is also a member of Wheeling Lodge No. 28, B. P. O. E. He is a republican and he and his family are German Lutherans. Mr. Stroehmann married Miss Louise Koehler, a native of Wheeling. The five children of their marriage are: Carrie, Freda, Carl, Harold and Irene.

HENRY HUTTON BALL, proprietor of the substantial and prosperous mercantile enterprise conducted under the title of the Hub Clothing Company at Princeton, Mercer County, is one of the representative citizens and merchants of the thriving little city that is the judicial center of this county, and he is serving at the time of this writing, in the winter of 1921-2, as president of the Business Men's Club of Princeton. He was born in Russell County, Virginia, May 15, 1879, and is a son of Isaiah Drake Ball and Rebecca (Lockhard) Ball, both likewise natives of Russell County and representatives of old and honored families of that section of Virginia. Isaiah D. Ball was seventy-nine years of age at the time of his death, June 29, 1821, his wife having passed away in 1907, at the age of sixty-one years. He was a saddler and harnessmaker and also owned a small farm in his native county, whence as a young man he went forth as a loyal soldier of the Confederacy in the Civil war. He was a staunch democrat and took deep interest in party affairs, though never desiring to hold public office. He died in Princeton, West Virginia, at the home of his daughter, the wife of Dr. B. W. Bird. Mrs. Isaiah D. Ball died in Roanoke, Virginia. Both were zealous members of the Baptist Church, in which Mr. Ball long served as a deacon. Of the twelve children six are now living.

Henry H. Ball attended the schools of his native county until he was fourteen years of age and thereafter worked his way through the high school at Tazewell, Virginia. He then obtained the position of timekeeper in the employ of Walton & Luck, railroad contractors, in McDowell County, West Virginia. Later he clerked in a general store at Welch, that county, and he next came to Bluefield, Mercer County, and took a position with the Ferrell Mercantile Company. This connection continued until 1906, when he came to Princeton and engaged in the men's clothing and furnishing-goods business.

He had saved from his earnings about $1,000, and on this basis and that of timely assistance of friends, as coupled with his excellent business reputation, he was able to begin his independent business under favorable conditions. He now conducts one of the large and well equipped mercantile establishments of Princeton, and has made the Hub Clothing Company known and honored for excellent service and fair and honorable dealings. In more recent years Mr. Ball has conducted also a prosperous real estate business, and associated in the same with his brother John K., he has erected a number of houses in Princeton, his civic pride and loyalty being such that he is ever ready to do all in his power to further the material and civic advancement of his home city. He was president of the Princeton Chamber of Commerce at the time when its title was changed to the Princeton Business Men's Club, and of that latter he is now the president. He is a democrat in political allegiance, is a member of the Baptist Church, and his wife holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

The year 1904 recorded the marriage of Mr. Ball and Miss Eva Bolin, daughter of F. A. Bolin, who formerly lived at Athens, this state, but who is now a resident of Princeton. Mr. and Mrs. Ball have two children: Helen Lockhard and Virginia Gordon. Another daughter, Mary Lee, died at the age of seven years.

BRAMWELL B. HUNT, who had given specially effective service as a member of the County Court of Mercer County was given further evidence of popular esteem and confidence in 1920 when he was elected sheriff of the county, an office in which he is giving a characteristically vigorous and circumspect administration. He was born in Tazewell County, Virginia, which adjoins Mercer County, West Virginia, and the date of his nativity was July 15, 1866. He is a son of Henry F. and Louisa (Redwin) Hunt, and is a representative of one of the old and influential families of Tazewell County, where Henry F. Hunt passed his entire life, he having been seventy-four years of age at the time of his death in 1914. He served thirty-four years as justice of the peace and was otherwise prominent in community affairs. In the period leading up to the Civil war he was one of three men in his district to oppose the secession of the Southern states, and he refused to serve as a soldier in the Confederate Army. In the so-called reconstruction period after the war he did all in his power to revive the prostrate industries and civic prosperity of his native county. He was a member of the republican party from its organization until his death. He was a prosperous farmer and was a man whose character was the positive expression of a true and loyal nature. Both he and his wife were earnest members of the Baptist Church. Their children were twelve in number, six sons and six daughters.

Bramwell B. Hunt gained his early education in the schools of his native county, including the high school at Cedar Bluff, and thereafter he taught five months in a rural school. He then engaged in the lumber business at Swords Creek, Russell County, Virginia, and he continued to operate a saw mill and to deal in lumber for twelve years. In January, 1900, he came to Mercer County, West Virginia, and engaged in farm enterprise near New Hope, besides becoming a dealer in live stock, which he sold principally to the coal operators in the Pocahontas field. In January, 1914, Mr. Hunt assumed his official duties as a member of the County Court, and in his six years' incumbency of this position he was chairman of the court four years. Within his regime splendid progress was made in the building of good roads in the county, and his record marked him as eligible for further service in public office, with the result that in the autumn of 1920 he was elected county sheriff. He is a stalwart in the local ranks of the republican party, is a member of the Business Men's Club of Princeton, and he and his wife hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

In 1889 was solemnized the marriage of Sheriff Hunt with Miss Rachel Steele, daughter of George W. Steele, who was a prominent citizen of Tazewell County, Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Hunt have four children: Clarence entered the nation's aviation service in connection with the World war, his technical training having been received at Kelley Field, Texas, and at Dayton, Ohio, and since the close of the war he has been identified with the river improvement service in the State of Florida. Joseph G. has active management of his father's farm. Clyde S., who is chief clerk to his father in the sheriff's office, and Blanche M. are at the parental home in Princeton. The two younger sons were ready for war service, but were not called into the army.

GEORGE HARRY BROWN is one of the representative young business men of the City of Princeton, Mercer County, who is manager of the Mercer Motor Company, agents for the Ford automobiles and Fordson tractors, besides which he is an interested principal in the Farmers Supply Company.

Mr. Brown was born at Wilmington, North Carolina, January 4, 1887, and is a son of William and Theresa Carole (Penny) Brown. William Brown, a skilled machinist, now employed at his trade in the shipyards at Newport News, Virginia, and is sixty years of age at the time of this writing, in the winter of 1921-2. Of the two sons the subject of this sketch is the younger, and the elder, William, is a ship foreman for the Norfolk & Western Railroad at Williamsburg, West Virginia.

George Harry Brown has stated that he gained his early education "wherever he could find it," and his mental organization indicates that he fully improved such opportunities came to him. At the age of eighteen years he began an apprenticeship as a machinist in the shipyards at Newport News, Virginia, and during his apprenticeship of four years received 50 cents a day in wages. After work hours at the shipyards he sold newspapers on the streets, and at night worked as usher in theaters, besides acting as scene shifter, acting minor parts as a supernumerary, besides selling candy to the patrons of the house. He so applied himself as to become a skilled machinist, and in 1909 he was in the United States transport service along the Atlantic coast, he having been on the vessel which brought home the bodies of American soldiers killed in the Spanish-American war in Cuba. In 1910 Mr. Brown came to Princeton, West Virginia, as machinist in the employ of the Virginian Railroad Company, and he continued his service in local shops of this road until 1919. His early training as a newsboy prompted him here to open the Brown News Stand, which he opened in 1911 and which became one of the popular establishments and social resorts of the city. He conducted it until 1919. In 1920 Mr. Brown became associated with T. M. Fry and others in establishing the Farmers Supply Company, which has developed a substantial and prosperous business, and later he became one of the principals in the organization of the Mercer Motor Company, which has the agency for the ever popular and reliable Ford automobiles. The plant of the company is the best modern equipment, with well ordered repair shop and with a full line of supplies and accessories.

In June, 1918, Mr. Brown entered the World war service as the nation's first lieutenant with the Sixty-third Engineers. Without preliminary training he was sent to France, where he was assigned to duty at Cote d'Or. He remained in France until the signing of the armistice brought the war to a close, and had the distinction of returning home as the George Washington when that vessel brought President Wilson and other members of the peace conference back to the United States. He was baggage officer on the transport which bore his command to France and battalion baggage officer and troop baggage officer in France. He is serving in this latter capacity on the return voyage, and this brought him into personal contact with many celebrated men who returned on the George Washington, the special vessel of the President of the United States.

Mr. Brown is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, including the Commandery of Knights Templars at Bluefield and the Temple of the Mystic Shrine in the City of Charleston, and he is a member also of the Knights of Pythias and the Business Men's Club of Princeton.

In 1915 Mr. Brown wedded Miss Dora Palmer, daughter of O. D. Palmer, who is the owner of a large cotton plantation at Gulf, North Carolina. Mrs. Brown is an earnest communicant of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and is a popular factor in the social activities of Princeton.

After graduating, Doctor Caldwell came to Matoaka and was associated with Doctor Clements as a mine physician, but for the past three years has practiced as an individual and has a justly high reputation in his profession in this section. Since the war he has been a member of the Volunteer Medical Corps.

RUSH FLOYD FARLEY, M. D. One of the well-known and capable members of the medical fraternity practicing in the coal mining districts of Mingo County, and a veteran of the World war, is Dr. Rush Floyd Farley, of Burch. Doctor Farley was born March 6, 1887, in Mingo County, West Virginia, and comes of an old Virginia family of Irish origin, being a son of Thomas Benton and Nancy (Pinson) Farley, natives of Virginia. Thomas B. Farley was a young man when the war between the states came on, and he enlisted under the flag of the Confederacy, as a private in the Thirty-sixth Virginia Infantry, his commanding officer being Gen. Jubal Early. At the battle of Winchester he was wounded and captured by the enemy, having at that time risen to the rank of top sergeant, and was confined at the prison at Point Lookout for six months. Upon his exchange he returned to his home, recovered from his wound and engaged in farming and merchandising. Subsequently he married a Virginia girl and reared a family. He became one of the well-known and prominent farmers and merchants of Mingo County, where he had considerable property holdings, and where he was esteemed and respected by all who knew him.

Rush Floyd Farley attended the public schools of Burch Post Office and the Concord Normal School at Athens, following which, having decided upon a professional career, he entered the University of Kentucky, at Louisville, where he pursued a medical course and was duly graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine as a member of the graduating class of 1912. At that time he entered upon the practice of his profession at Holden, West Virginia, but after one year decided that he needed further preparation for the successful practice of his chosen life's vocation and accordingly went to Rochester, Minnesota, where he did post-graduate work with the eminent Mayo Brothers. Later, in 1914, he further fitted himself by doing post-graduate work under the late Doctor Murphy, the distinguished Chicago surgeon. Returning to West Virginia, he re-engaged in practice at Ivatoon Coal River, and was there engaged until July 17, 1917, when he enlisted in the Medical Reserve Corps of the United States Army. He went to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, November 15th, was transferred to Camp Meade, Washington, D. C., and on December 15th sailed from Hoboken, New York, for overseas. Landing first in England, he sailed from Southampton across the English Channel to LeHavre, France, and went to the Vosges Mountain Hospital in Alsace-Lorraine, this being the One Hundred and Fourth Field Hospital, which was on the move the greater part of the time owing to its proximity to the front line. He was then transferred to Souilly, France, and later to Creel, where he was assigned to the mobile operation unit, with a detachment of French troops to do first aid duty. After two months he was sent to Neuf Chappelle, later to Rivelle, where he was with the Third Cavalry, Twenty-sixth Division, and then to Varennes, with a first aid outfit. During the period that he was in France his headquarters were Base Hospital No. 66, his being the first regular army outfit in France from America and on the move, giving first aid everywhere. When the armistice was signed he was on the road to Sedan, and remained there until February 15, 1919, when his outfit moved back to St. Nazaire, and after ten days left for home, arriving at Newport News, March 1, 1919. He went then to Richmond, Virginia, later to Baltimore, Maryland, and then to Washington, D. C., and Boston, Massachusetts, finally receiving his honorable discharge March 15th after twenty months in the service. He was promoted to captain. Returning to Holden, West Virginia, Doctor Farley became surgeon for the Island Creek Coal Company, with which he was connected one year, and finally came to Burch Post Office, where he engaged in the general practice of his profession, specializing in surgery. He still holds membership in the United States Medical Reserve Corps. He is highly thought of in his profession in Mingo County, and has gained the full confidence of a large number of patients.

On April 17, 1917, at South Charleston, West Virginia, Doctor Farley was united in marriage with Miss Clara Mae Burlington, daughter of Sherman and Fannie Burlington, the former of whom is in the Government service, having charge of Lock No. 6. In 1911 he became assistant cashier of the Bedford County Bank at Montvale, Virginia, a position now filled by one of his younger brothers, Harold P. He continued his connection with the bank in his old home town for a period of seven years, and since 1918 he has been cashier of the Bank of Matoaka, one of the solid and well ordered financial institutions of Mercer County, West Virginia. He is a stalwart in the ranks of the democratic party, has completed the cycle of York Rite Masonry, and was senior warden of the Blue Lodge at Bedford, Virginia, at the time of his removal to his present home village. He early tendered his service to the Government when the nation became involved in the World war, but was rejected for active military service. His loyalty found expression, however, in zealous work in furthering the various patriotic activities in his community, including the Government war loans, Red Cross work, etc.

December 30, 1914, Mr. Ferrell wedded Miss Ruth Whitburn, of Princess Anne County, Virginia, and they have one daughter, Sarah F.

F. S. Martin.

JAMES GARFIELD WHITE, of Princeton, judicial center of Mercer County, is a successful contractor in railroad connection and is a progressive member of the County Court. He was born at Oakvale, this county, June 7, 1880, and is a son of James A. and Derinzia H. (McKinzie) White, both native natives of Mercer County, where the former was born at Oakvale and the latter at Ingleside. The father was shot and killed in 1899, while making an arrest in his official capacity as sheriff of his native county, and he was five years of age at the time of his death. His widow died away in 1907, at the age of forty-five years. James White was elected sheriff of Mercer County in 1888, and the first republican to be elected to this office, of which he continued the incumbent four years. Thereafter he was two years representative of Mercer County in the House of Delegates of the West Virginia Legislature, and in 1907 he was again elected county sheriff, in which position he served until his tragic death. His father, James A. White, Sr., was a loyal soldier of the Union in the Civil War. Both the White and McKinzie families were established in Mercer County in the pioneer days, and John A. Kinzie, maternal grandfather of the subject of this review, was a prominent and influential citizen of this county. James Garfield White, a member of a fine family of third children, attended the public schools and the Central Normal School at Athens, and thereafter he was actively identified with farm enterprise until he turned his attention to lumber manufacturing as operator of a saw mill at Oakvale. Later he became associated with the non-Tolliver Company in heavy construction work on the Norfolk and Western Railroad at Narrows, Virginia. Later became junior member of the firm of Lipscomb & White, which built six miles of the Virginian Railroad, from Oakvale to Clark's Gap. Since that time he has held many contracts for construction work for the Virginian Railroad, the Norfolk & Western Railroad, and the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, in West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, South Carolina and other states. He is now a member of the contracting firm of White & Wood, which his coadjutor is L. S. Wood of Gaffney, South Carolina. Mr. White was elected a member of the County Court in 1918, and his broad experience in heavy construction work made him specially eligible for this office, in which he became authoritatively concerned in carrying forward construction of modern highways and other good roads in his home county.

Mr. White is a stalwart in the ranks of the republican party, his Masonic affiliations are with the Blue Lodge at Narrows, Virginia, the Chapter of Royal Arch Masons at Athens, West Virginia, the Commandery of Knights Templars at Bluefield, Mercer County, and the Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston. His wife is an active member of the Missionary Baptist Church.

January 1, 1918, recorded the marriage of Mr. White and Myrtle Spangler, daughter of L. P. Spangler, of Glen Elder, Virginia, and the two children of this union are Florence and Flora M.

CHARLES EDWARD HUGHES. The business interests of Charles Edward Hughes, whose home is at Rock in Mercer County, have been chiefly identified with contracting in the building of houses and other construction work in the coal districts. His interests have extended to banking and other branches of business, and at all times he has played an effective public spirited part in his home community.

Mr. Hughes was born in Campbell County, Virginia, twenty miles south of Lynchburg, October 7, 1873, son of Charles H. and Katharine (Woods) Hughes, the former a native of Pittsylvania County and the latter of Campbell County, Virginia. The father moved to Campbell County as a young man. He served four years in the Confederate Army, and while doing picket duty at Gettysburg one of his toes was shot off. His regular occupation was that of a farmer. He was a democrat and for many years a member of the board of stewards of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He died in 1918, at the age of seventy-eight, and his mother is now eighty-one and living at Alta Vista. Charles Edward Hughes was the sixth in a family of ten children. His brother Samuel is inspector for the Pocahontas Fuel Company. At the age of sixteen Mr. Hughes left school and the home farm, and for two years following was a brakeman in the service of the Southern Railway Company between Charlottesville and Daaville. He came to Keystone, West Virginia, as a carpenter on contract work, and after six months removed to Arlington, where he remained two years engaged in similar work. For about five years his headquarters were at Stone Eagle, Virginia, where he did an extensive business building houses over the Pocahontas coal field. For another four years he was at Sagamore on Crane Creek in Mercer County, and since then his home has been at Rock. Mr. Hughes has built by contract probably more houses in this coal field than any other contractor. For a time he was associated with John Doss. Mr. Hughes was one of the organizers of the First National Bank of Matoaka and is one of its directors and is a director in the Matoaka Wholesale Grocery Company.

In 1900 he married Miss Alice Nuckles, daughter of John B. Nuckles, of Graham, Virginia. They have a family of five sons and three daughters. Mr. Hughes is a steward in the Methodist Episcopal Church, for ten years has been master of the Lodge of Masons at Rock, is affiliated with Athens Chapter, R. A. M., Bramwell Commandery, K. T., the Mystic Shrine at Charleston, has served as chancellor commander of Montcalm Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and is a member of the board of school trustees at Rock.

FRANK STEWART MARTIN came into the Guyan Valley soon after the first railroad was built, and has been one of the men of real enterprise and civic leadership at Logan, where he is proprietor of the Logan Bottling Company. This business was established in 1905, when the town was new and when the development of the valley was just getting under way.

Mr. Martin was born at Paintsville, Johnson County, Kentucky, February 1, 1872. His parents, Rev. John and Julia (Gilkerson) Martin, were natives of Boyd County, Kentucky, and his father died in 1919, at the age of seventy-nine, and his mother in 1913, at the age of sixty-seven. Rev. John Martin for many years was a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was a pastor in the West Virginia conference and also in East Kentucky. In this state he had charge of work in Huntington, Charleston and Point Pleasant, and for a number of years was presiding elder of the Big Sandy District. He was an intimate friend of the well-known business man and capitalist of Eastern Kentucky, the late John C. C. Mayo, and he preached at Mr. Mayo's funeral. Rev. Mr. Martin in his earlier days was a teacher. Earnest, sincere and eloquent, he numbered his friends by the thousand. He and his wife had eight children. The oldest son is H. F. Martin, formerly a superintendent on the Northern Pacific Railroad and now in business as a contractor of heavy construction at New Westminster, British Columbia. Another son, Forrest, is a traveling salesman. Warren lives in Philadelphia. Robert is in the electrical supplies business. Edward is with the Nickel Plate Plant at Huntington. A daughter is the wife of Dr. Thomas Dugan, a dentist at Huntington.

Frank Stewart Martin spent his boyhood in the several places where his father was pastor, and acquired his education somewhat disjointedly as a consequence. Later he took a business course in the Eastman Business College at Poughkeepsie, New York. At the age of twenty he went to the Northwest, and for two years was in the State of Washington, an employee under his brother, then a superintendent of the Northern Pacific Railroad. After returning East Mr. Martin followed various business lines, and was in the laundry business at Huntington.

He left that city, attracted by the great promise of the new Town of Logan, and in 1905 established the first laundry here. He continued the operation of that business for several years, until he sold out, and it is now conducted as the Aracoma Laundry Company. In the same year that he established his laundry he engaged in the bottling business, his being the first plant at the time in the valley. He started both enterprises on a small scale and kept them going apace with the development of the valley. In 1910 his present bottling plant was erected, and has since been increased. He bottles and distributes soft drinks all up and down the valley. For twelve years he has been manufacturer and distributor over this territory of coca-cola, and manufactures and distributes an extensive line of other widely advertised soft drinks. One feature of his plant is a deep well of the very purest water, which is of course an important ingredient of his products.

Mr. Martin served three terms as a member of the city council of Logan, has been vice president of the Chamber of Commerce and the Business Men's Association, and is interested in every plan for the advancement and betterment of the community. He married in 1910 Miss Helen Vorhees, a native of Portsmouth, Ohio. Mr. Martin is a trustee of the Methodist Church, is a member of the Masonic Lodge and Chapter of Logan, the Knight Templar Commandery and Beni-Kedem Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston, and also belongs to the thirty-second degree, Scottish Rite Consistory. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Elks, and is a democratic voter.

JOHN W. RICKEY, M. D., stands forth as a dean of his profession in Marshall County, where he has been established in active practice as a skilled physician at Moundsville for nineteen years. He has practiced his profession for a period of virtually fifty years. He was born at Harveys, Greene County, Pennsylvania, April 14, 1842, and is a son of Abraham A. C. Rickey, who was born in the State of New Jersey in 1804, of Scotch parentage, and who was a young man at the time of the family removal to Western Pennsylvania, where he became a prosperous farmer and where he continued to reside until his death, at the age of seventy-six years. His father died in middle life, while his great-grandfather attained to the patriarchal age of 103 years.

Dr. Rickey is one of two survivors in a family of ten children, of whom he was the ninth in order of birth. Two of his sisters died at the age of ninety-two years, one brother at the age of eighty-one, and another brother at the age of eighty-three. It thus becomes evident that the family is one of marked longevity, and the Doctor himself has the physical and mental poise of a man many years his junior. Dr. Rickey gained his early experience in connection with the activities of the home farm, and he supplemented the discipline of the common schools by attending Waynesburg College at Waynesburg, Pennsylvania. Thereafter he prepared himself for the medical profession, and he has been continuously engaged in practice since the year 1873. He was established in practice at Glen-Easton, Marshall County, West Virginia, until 1902, when he removed to Moundsville, which city has since been the central stage of his earnest and effective professional service. He took a course of lectures in a leading medical college in the City of Cleveland, Ohio, and has continued a close student of medicine, in which his skill has been augmented by many years of successful practice. He is identified with the Marshall County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association, and he served several years as a member of the United States Board of Pension Examiners for Marshall County. He has secure place in the confidence and esteem of his professional confreres and is frequently called into consultation on critical cases. In the autumn of 1861, within a short time after the inception of the Civil war, Dr. Rickey, then nineteen years of age, was preparing to join neighbor boys in enlisting for service as a soldier of the Union, but his parents refused consent to his enlistment. Within a short time thereafter he was so injured by being caught in the mechanism of a threshing machine that it became necessary to amputate his right leg. It was largely due to this infirmity that he was led to prepare himself for the profession which he has honored by his able and earnest service. He has been affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows since the late '60s and is still a member of his original lodge, at Cameron, West Virginia, where he had established his residence in 1865 and where he passed the various chairs in his lodge. The Doctor is an earnest member of the Presbyterian Church, as was also his wife, who died in 1910, after their marital companionship continued forty-two years.

At Cameron, this state, in 1868, Dr. Rickey wedded Mary Clara B. Williams, who was born in Virginia, in 1852 daughter of Uriah Williams, who was among the first locomotive engineers on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and continued his service in this capacity many years, his death having occurred at Cameron, West Virginia. Of the child of Dr. and Mrs. Rickey the eldest is Willis M., who is a train dispatcher for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, Cumberland, Maryland. Mayes B. and John E. are also dispatchers for the same railroad at Wheeling, West Virginia, and both reside at Moundsville. It is worthy of note the maternal uncle of these sons, U. B. Williams, was a train dispatcher at Cameron in their boyhood days, and thus very early became interested in telegraphy. Nellie, the daughter of Dr. Rickey, is the wife of A. E. Drew, of Indianapolis, Indiana. They are the parents of two daughters, Pauline and Dorothy.

J. HOWARD HOLT, who is engaged in the practice of law at Moundsville, judicial center of Marshall County, has won success and prestige as one of the representative members of the bar of the northern part of West Virginia.

Mr. Holt was born on Knawls Creek in Braxton County, Virginia, (now West Virginia), on the 19th of September, 1848, and is a son of Jonathan and Eve Ann (Mealy) Holt. He attended the public schools of his native county and a those of West Milford, Harrison County, and he early manifested the studious habits and insatiable appetite for reading that have proved potent in expanding his mental horizon wide limits, he being distinctly a man of liberal education in a general way as well as in the profession of his choice. His advancement representing in large measure the result of his own efforts. He has proved an effective character-builder and a man of worthy achievement, has maintained a steady outlook upon life and has won success and honor in his exacting profession, in which connection he has proved tireless determination and zealous application can prove quite effective as mere collegiate education, which latter was his portion. He has been a man of thought and action, a such an one is fortified for the overcoming of obstacles and disadvantages that would baffle one of less courage and determination. Mr. Holt read law in his home, and upon examination before the West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals at Wheeling he was admitted to the bar November 8, 1884. He has given nearly forty years to the work of his profession, has long been known as a resourceful trial lawyer and a counsellor and has appeared in connection with many important litigations in the various courts of this section of the state. During a large portion of the time since he established in the practice of law Mr. Holt has given effective service as commissioner of both Circuit and County Courts. He was originally a democrat in political allegiance, but in 1886 aligned himself with the prohibition party, in which he gained prominence as a leader in campaign activities and in the general work of the party from the first he was foremost in the campaign of the prohibition party in West Virginia, a prohibition amendment in that year having been defeated by 40,000, but a splendid victory for the cause came in 1911 when a similar amendment was carried in the state by a vote of more than 92,000. Mr. Holt is a most zealous member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and that he is fully fortified in his religious faith needs no further evidence than a reference to a poem of which he is the author, the same containing seventeen cantos, of admirable literary and logical order and having attracted the favorable attention of many leaders in the orthodox religious circles of the nation, this poem being entitled: "A Layman's Answer to Agnosticism." Mr. Holt has given much time and thought to prison reform, and his work, his speeches and his writings in this connection give evidence of the profundity of his humanitarian impulses at his fine conception of the springs of human motive. His first wife, whose maiden name was J. Ella West, died three years after their marriage. For his second wife Mr. Holt wedded Miss Annie P. Thatcher, and they became the parents of five children: J. Howard, Jr., died at the age of twenty-five years; Fay Marguerite is the wife of Hollis Edison Davenport

New York City; Forest Primrose is the wife of Ignatius Annan, of Moundsville; and Sara Fern and Charles William Annan at the parental home. One child Kenneth, by his first wife, died young. Mrs. Davenney, Mrs. Brennan and Mrs. Sara Fern are talented violinists and the whole family has appeared in connection with nearly all Chautauqua treasuries. Mr. Duvenney was identified with community work at Washington, D. C., where he was a member of the reception committee in charge of affairs in the welcome accorded to President and Mrs. Wilson upon their return to France, after the historic peace conference.

Close study and research have given Mr. Holt a broad and deep conception of crime and its punishment, and on this subject he wrote a most interesting and logical monograph, which has been published in two editions, in pamphlet form, copies of the article having been placed in the hands of every judge and every legislator of West Virginia at the time when the first edition was issued. So masterful and humane a sifting of criminology is represented in this brochure it could hardly be wished that its circulation were extended throughout the length and breadth of the land. That in a professional way Mr. Holt consistently holds to the principles which he maintains in this published article is indicated by the fact that he had the probably unprecedented experience of appearing in defense of a criminal, "Holly" Griffith, who received very different sentences to life imprisonment for three different murders, the case having been one of celebrity in the criminal annals of West Virginia. His argument against capital punishment is regarded as unanswerable.

JEAN H. WOOD is a graduate of Bethany College, is superintendent of the City Schools at Littleton in Wetzel County, and is an ex-service man who saw active duty on battle fronts in France.

Mr. Wood, prominent among the younger educators of West Virginia, was born at Bristoria, in Greene County, Pennsylvania, November 13, 1896. His grandfather, Jonah Wood, was born at Whitely, Pennsylvania, in 1824, spent practically all his life in Greene County, and besides farming owned and operated a sawmill. He died there in 1918. His second wife was Miss Smith, grandmother of Superintendent Wood. She was born in Pennsylvania in 1827 and died in Greene County in 1903. Morgan A. Wood, father of Jean H., has also been a teacher. He was born March 15, 1859, at Bristoria in Greene County, was reared and married there, taught school for a number of years in Greene County, and since 1916 has been a resident of Littleton, West Virginia, where he has served as bookkeeper in the Bank of Littleton. He was for two terms mayor of Littleton, is now a justice of the peace, is a democrat in politics and a leading member of the Baptist Church, being superintendent of the Sunday school. He is affiliated with Wind Ridge Lodge No. 1053, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Morgan A. Wood married Josephine Roger, who was born in West Virginia July 21, 1857. Their family consists of six children: Hazel, wife of Randolph Antill, an undertaker at Cameron, West Virginia; Laura, principal of the high school at Reader in Wetzel county; Jean H.; Mary, a teacher in the sixth grade at Blansbee, Brooke County, West Virginia; Ralph, in his first year at Bethany College; and Leah, a senior in the Littleton High School.

Jean H. Wood acquired his early advantages in the rural schools of Greene County. He graduated from the Richhill High School in 1915, and the following fall entered Bethany College, Bethany, West Virginia. He received his A. B. degree from Bethany in 1919. He is a member of the Tau Kappa Alpha, a college fraternity, eligibility to which is based on prominence in public speaking. Mr. Wood represented Bethany College in the Tri-State Oratorical Contest held at Geneva College at Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania, and won second place.

On September 19, 1917, Mr. Wood, who was not quite twenty-one at the time, answered the call to the colors, and was in training nine months at Camp Lee, Virginia. He was made a sergeant in Light Artillery. After this training he was sent overseas, arriving in France June 8, 1918, as a member of the 314th Field Artillery, 80th Division, A. E. F. With this division he participated in the St. Mihiel campaign and in several battles of the Argonne, and altogether spent fifty-one days on the firing line. After the signing of the armistice he was stationed near Dijon, France, left for home May 24, 1919, arriving at Newport News June 8th, and received his honorable discharge at Camp Lee June 15, 1919.

As a school man Mr. Wood was for one year principal of the St. Clairsville High School at St. Clairsville, Ohio, and in the fall of 1921 became superintendent of schools at Littleton. He has six schools under his supervision, a staff of seventeen teachers, and a scholarship enrollment of 420. He is a member of the West Virginia Educational Association. In politics Mr. Wood is a democrat and he is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

At Parkersburg March 26, 1921, he married Miss Edna Long, daughter of Simeon Lee and Myrtle (Aberegg) Long, residents of Littleton, where her father is a prominent business man, a lumber dealer and president of the Bank of Littleton. Mr. and Mrs. Wood have one child, Cecil Kenneth, who was born December 10, 1921.

Mr. Wood is descended from a long line of educators. His great-great-grandfather Smith was one of the early instructors in Washington and Pennsylvania, and his grandfather, James Smith was also a prominent teacher in Washington.

Mr. Wood descended from a long line of educators. His great-great-grandfather Smith was one of the early instructors in Washington County, Pennsylvania, and his grandfather, James Smith, was also a prominent teacher in Washington County, Pennsylvania. His grandmother Wood, whose maiden name was Mary Smith, taught in Washington County, and, as above stated, his father taught in Greene, Brooke and Wetzel counties.

BERNARD ALEXANDER PYLES is one of the veteran bankers of Wetzel County, and has had the post of cashier in the Bank of Littleton since that institution was established. He is a native of Wetzel County, and came to the bank with an equipment of experience as a teacher, mercantile clerk, surveyor and farmer.

Mr. Pyles was born near Silver Hill March 19, 1862. The Pyles family has been in this section of West Virginia for nearly a century. His grandfather, Michael Pyles, was born in 1814 and was an early day farmer in Marshall County, and about 1877 moved to another farm which he owned in the same vicinity but over the line in Wetzel County, where he lived until his death in 1880. Michael Pyles married Martha Burley, who was born near Moundsville and died in Wetzel County. Her father, Jacob Burley, was a pioneer merchant of Moundsville and also owned a large amount of land in that vicinity, part of the modern city of Moundsville being built on his farm.

Felix Pyles, father of the Littleton banker, was born near Moundsville in 1835 and spent all his active days devoted to the profession and business of agriculture. He was reared and married in Marshall County, and soon after his marriage moved to the vicinity of Silver Hill. He served during the last year of the Civil war in a West Virginia regiment of infantry and was a democrat in politics. Felix Pyles, who died at his home near Silver Hill in 1903, married Evaline Rinehart, who was born in Wetzel County in 1831 and died at the old homestead near Silver Hill in 1907. The children of this old couple were: Martha, wife of Alonzo Kelley, a farmer in Marshall County; John, a farmer who died as a farmer in Wetzel County, aged sixty; Jane, wife of William Miller, a farmer, and both died in Wetzel County; Bernard A.; James A., postmaster of New Martinsville; Jacob B., who has charge of the Wetzel Natural Gas Company's plant at Hundred; the seventh child, a son, died in infancy; Thomas I. is a farmer in Wetzel County, as is also his younger brother, Michael; and Mrs. Vallarie Higgins died in Clarksburg.

Bernard Alexander Pyles had a common school education in Wetzel County. His father's farm was his home until 1901. In the meantime he had taught two terms in Wetzel County, for a number of years worked in a country store, and did surveying and general farming until he was elected in 1901 cashier of the Bank of Littleton, and since then his home has been at Littleton.

The Bank of Littleton was established under a state charter May 20, 1901, and it has a record of prosperous growth and has unusual resources for a bank in a town of this size. Its capital stock is twenty-five thousand dollars, surplus and profits of fifteen thousand dollars, and deposits averaging four hundred thousand dollars. The bank officials are: S. L. Long, president; F. W. Daugherty, vice president; B. A. Pyles, cashier, and the directors are S. L. Long, F. W. Daugherty, B. A. Pyles, Baker Cosgray, all of Littleton, J. K. Long and John L. Carney, of Silver Hill, Ellis Miller, also of Littleton, U. G. Thomas, of Glover Gap, and Dr. W. V. Teagarden, of Cameron.

Mr. Pyles has acquired some good real estate investments in Littleton, including a business building, two dwellings, and his own modern home. As a banker he was especially interested during the war in the sale of the Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps, and did much to stimulate this community in filling its quota. Mr. Pyles is unmarried and is a democrat in politics.

MCDONALD FAMILY. Among the pioneer families in the southern part of the state perhaps no one group has shown greater unity in purpose and enterprise than the McDonalds of Logan County. As the name indicates, they are of Scotch ancestry, and they have manifested the Scotch traits of thrift and forehanded judgment in holding on to and developing lands and other interests that came to them by inheritance. Of the present generation two of the prominent members are Bruce McDonald, of Logan, and Millard McDonald, of Mallory, and their father, William Wallace McDonald, is also a prominent figure in the article that follows.

It was before the Revolutionary war that the first members of this family appeared in this region of Virginia. They settled on Tom's Creek in Montgomery County. The ancestor of the family now under consideration was Edward McDonald, who settled and purchased a large tract on Clear Fork of Guyan in that part of Virginia now Wyoming County, West Virginia. He located there about 1787, purchased part of the Gordon and Cloyd survey on Huff's Creek, and these lands are still in the possession of the McDonald family. Edward McDonald developed a farm and was extensively engaged in the live stock business in that pioneer epoch. All the McDonalds of the present have been hard workers.

Joseph McDonald, a son of Edward, lived to the age of eighty years. He was the father of William Wallace McDonald, who was born at the old home place in Wyoming County, April 1, 1817. In 1844 he moved to the mouth of Huff's Creek, where he first purchased a farm and later acquired 14,000 acres of land, still retained by his descendants and now owned by the W. W. McDonald Land Company, which was incorporated in 1913 to handle this and other property interests. Individual members of the family have added large tracts to this original holding. A large part of these lands were underlaid with valuable deposits of coal, and some of the principal coal operations in this part of state are on the McDonald property. These include the Standard Island Creek operations at Taplin, the Logan Mining Company's operations at Earling, the Mallory Coal Company on and at the mouth of Huff's Creek, the Logan-Elkhorn Coal Corporation, the Long-Flame Coal Company.

William Wallace McDonald died at his home place on Huff's Creek, August 15, 1902. He had to teach himself, but was thoroughly well educated and a student and a thinker all his life. As a young man taught a number of schools in Wyoming County. His brother Isaac had inherited the old homestead, and while William Wallace had some financial assistance from his father, he was, generally speaking, the architect of his own destiny. He went in for high grade live stock, and at one time owned a fine herd of Durham cattle. He was a liberal supporter of the Methodist Church, and his home was always open to the Methodist ministers. He was a democrat, was in sympathy with the South at the time of the Civil war, and at one time was taken prisoner by Northern troops, but soon released.

The first wife of William Wallace McDonald was Minerva Dingess, a sister of John and Guy Dingess. Guy

Dingess lived below Logan in Guyan Valley. By the first marriage there were two children. Charles L., died the old home in 1888, at the age of forty-one. His sister Mary A., lives with her son, Warren Perry, and is the widow of Oliver Perry, who died in 1895.

The second wife of William Wallace McDonald was Parthena Scaggs. She was born in Montgomery County and died at the old home in 1873. She was the mother of the following children: Millard, who is mentioned in later paragraphs; Bruce; Bilton, who is unmarried, lives in Logan and is president of the W. W. McDonald Land Company; Wayne, born in 1864, who was a merchant, a timber man and died in 1900; Ann Brook, born in 1866, died in California in 1908, and was the wife of C. J. Turley, of Boone County, now deceased; Miriam Ali, born in 1868, is the wife of John Robinson, a farmer, Cambria, Virginia; Marshall, born in 1872, died in 1900.

Bruce McDonald, the second son, was born at the mouth of Huff's Creek, February 8, 1860. He and his brother Bilton attended the free schools of their neighborhood, and after getting all the education they could there they each taught one term of school. Then, in quest of further education, they walked overland to Athens, Mercer County where they attended a term of school at Old Concord Church, a school taught by Captain French, and then which has since been developed the Concord State Normal. After the close of the term they walked home and taught another term of school at a salary of $18 a month. Following this they left home to attend school again, and this time they traveled by rafts down the Guyan River to the mouth, went by train to Hinton and thence walked to the Concord School. After the second term at Concord the brothers continued teaching for several years. In the fall of 1885 Bruce and Bilton entered the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, and remained there at the studies for about one year. In 1887 Bilton was elected superintendent of schools for Logan County, but on a count of ill health was unable to fill out the term and his brother Bruce took his place. Many people in this section of West Virginia recall Bruce McDonald as a capable teacher in various localities. At one time he taught in the Town of Logan. He and Martin Jones were teachers of the two-room school conducted in a frame building that stood on the present site of the splendid high school at Loga. Bruce McDonald's first official position was as a member of the school board in the Tridiphia District.

Later, in 1904, he was elected a member of the Legislature, and served until 1908, and was a member of the committees on mines and mining and education. He was commissioner of the County Court from 1912 to 1919, and the last six years president of the court. For six years he was associated in partnership with his brother Millard in the mercantile business at the mouth of Huff's Creek. They dealt in a large range of commodities, including ginseng and timber, which they rafted down the river to market. On leaving Huff's Creek Bruce McDonald moved to Taplin, where he lived and continued in business for fifteen years. He brought his goods up the Guyan River on a push boat, and at the same time sent large quantities of timber down the stream by rafts.

Bruce McDonald became a resident of the City of Logan in 1912. He and the other heirs in 1913 incorporated the 14,000-acre estate of their father as the W. W. McDonald Land Company, Incorporated, of which Bilton is president, Bruce, vice president, and S. E. McDonald, son of Millard, secretary and treasurer. Bruce McDonald is one of the organizers and is vice president of the Guyan Valley Bank, and is a member of the board of directors of the First National Bank. He is a steward and trustee of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and has helped to build several churches. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Masonic Lodge and Chapter, West Virginia Consistory No. 1 of the Scottish Rite at Wheeling, and Beni-Kedem Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston. He also belongs to the Elks and is a democrat. Mr. McDonald is unmarried.

Millard McDonald, the oldest son of his father's second marriage, acquired his education in the home schools and a ing man he married Vicia Buchanan, daughter of Buchanan. She was born near Matewan on Big y. They have four living children: S. Elmer, who is secretary of the W. W. McDonald Land Company, is a member of the First National Bank of Logan and president of the Merchants and Miners Bank; Lillie May, wife of J. H. Oakley, who is associated with the Guyan Supply Company of Logan; Nora, wife of W. D. Phipps, of the Mercantile Company; and Mabel, wife of Dr. C. B. is, a dentist of Stollings in Logan County.

Millard McDonald and wife are Methodists, and he is a member of the board of stewards in his home church and his father and brother, has assisted actively in churching. Millard McDonald was born in 1838. For four years he was a merchant on Huff's Creek and for many years has continued his operations as a stock dealer.

RACHEL COOMBS OGDEN, publisher of the Wheeling Intelligencer, is one of the most successful newspaper men in Virginia.

He was born at Worthington, West Virginia, January 12, 1851, son of Presley Benjamin and Mary Ellen (Coombs) OGDEN. He was educated in the Fairmont State Normal School and graduated A. B. from West Virginia University in 1877. He soon afterward entered the newspaper business, and in 1890 established the Wheeling News. He made the News the first permanently successful evening paper in West Virginia, and still continues the active head as secretary of the News Publishing Company.

In 1904 Mr. Ogden purchased the Wheeling Intelligencer, and has been an institution in the life of Wheeling and the Ohio Valley since prior to the Civil war. Mr. Ogden is president of the Intelligencer Publishing Company. Besides his heavy responsibility involved in the managements of these two leading papers of Wheeling he is the principal owner and director of a number of other daily newspapers.

Mr. Ogden holds two honorary degrees, LL. D. from Mary College and D. C. L. from West Virginia Wesleyan University. For years he has been an influential figure in republicanism in West Virginia. He is a member of the Episcopal Church, the University, Masonic, Wheeling County Port Henry Clubs. On October 13, 1890, he married Frances Morehouse of Brownsville, Pennsylvania.

DR. GEORGE BEERBOWER. In the citizenship of Preston among other outstanding lives of usefulness developed in humble childhood environment, one whose career was marked with victory, whether in the varied activities of life and professional engagements or in that social conduct with his fellows which is an unfailing barometer of the worth of a man. Dr. Lloyd George Beerbower, the efficient and successful dentist and the successful business man of Terra

Alta, the accident of birth makes him a native son of West Virginia. Doctor Beerbower's life interests have been identified with the people and the things of West Virginia, and what he is and what he has accomplished has been the result of inspiration received in this state. He was born just west of the West Virginia line in Fayette County, June 2, 1857.

His paternal American ancestor was Philip Bierbauer, who with other Casper and a sister, who died at sea, left Germany in 1700, and in 1732 they emigrated from Amsterdam to settle in Pennsylvania. Philip Bierbauer spent the last part of his life in York County. His son Philip moved into Preston County when this was a country still undivided from the domain of the wilderness. He established his home on Glade Farm, where at the close of his life he was laid to rest. Among his numerous children was Philip, the third, who followed the temptation to join his brothers and sisters in West and spent his life where he married and reared his family.

His thirteen sons and daughters were the ancestors of those of the name still living in this section. The youngest child of Philip the third was George S. Beerbower, who was born near the site of old Fort Morris in the Glade Farm community March 22, 1820, and died July 19, 1879. His first wife, Catherine DeBerry, was born April 8, 1818, and died March 18, 1857. Her children were: William D., who was a minister of the Lutheran Church; Silas; Allen; and Lydia, who married Milton Robinson. Saloma Laub, second wife of George S. Beerbower, was born March 24, 1840, and died January 19, 1896. Her children to reach mature years were: Martha J., who married J. Allen Reckard; Charles W.; Emma Alice, wife of T. L. Gribble; and Dr. Lloyd George, of Terra Alta.

Lloyd George Beerbower was an infant when his father died. His training therefore fell to his mother, who had scanty means to provide for the necessities of her family. His married sister, Mrs. Reckard, exercised a christian influence over the boy, and it is due to these two good women that he has achieved a large measure of success and good deeds. He and his brother Charles were long closely and intimately associated, and as boys they shared in the heavy labor of the farm and realized the value of economy and the necessity of personal sacrifice. Both were endowed with capacity for larger things than their environment offered, but it required a teacher to develop this. About the time his father died Doctor Beerbower's parents returned to Glade Farm in Preston County and he remained there to the age of seventeen, getting the fundamentals of his education in the nearby schoolhouse. About that time his mind was diverted from the commonplace routine at home by Professor McGrew of Philadelphia, who furnished the opportunity for delivery from the monotony of the farm by offering him a place in the crew of young men he headed selling Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress. He soon developed the art of salesmanship, and in his experience as a salesman through Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia acquired a really liberal education and the polish of a man of affairs. After returning he was induced by his brother Charles W. to join him in a selling campaign of their own. They equipped themselves with a wagon fitted for the work, sold Pilgrim's Progress by day and created interest in the book by giving stereopticon lectures at night. It was a program successfully and profitably carried out, and while they were making money they were also gaining an indispensable knowledge of the world and affairs. They quickly grasped the advantages of the learned over the unlearned, and while stimulating knowledge they also perfected themselves in that easy address which carries men through life. At the same time they were doing something more than a selfish service, since the literature they distributed brought enlightenment with it to those who craved knowledge.

The next phase of progress of these two brothers was to fit themselves for teaching, and to that end they became pupils of the revered and accomplished historian and teacher, the late Samuel T. Wiley, who proved himself a firm friend of the brothers and placed them under lasting obligations for the wise counsel he gave as well as the knowledge he dispensed. Through that inspiration the brothers entered the Wesleyan College of West Virginia at Buckhannon, of which Dr. Beerbower is now a member of the Board of Trustees. After an experience as a teacher George Beerbower accepted an offer to travel again, this time representing Underwood & Underwood of New York, selling stereoscopic views in the capacity of a general agent. Among the student body of various colleges, furnishing employment to many young men and women to earn money during their vacation period, to enable them to pay their way through college.

In the meantime he had descended upon dental surgery as his proper vocation. In June, 1895, he graduated from dental college and during his summer vacations he had employed his growing knowledge and skill among his friends and acquaintances at home. Before graduating he had decided to locate at Galveston, Texas, but he abandoned that idea and chose to settle in the little commercial metropolis of Preston County at Terra Alta, a community that has known him and esteemed him now for nearly thirty years. His dental offices are on the second floor of the Beerbower-Zeller Building, which he helped build in 1910. Doctor Beerbower is a charter member of the West Virginia Dental Society, has been constant in attending its meetings, has served on some of its important committees and in 1913 was chosen president of the society. In July, 1911, Governor Glasscock appointed him a member of the Board of Dental Examiners.

Doctor Beerbower is also president of the Terra Alta Light Company, president of the Terra Alta Development Company, a corporation for the promotion of the city's growth, is a director of the Terra Alta Bank and member of its Finance Board, and is cashier of the Preston Republican Publishing Company.

His ancestors were Lutherans, but Doctor Beerbower is a Methodist, faithful in attendance and for several years was superintendent of the Sunday School. He is a Knight of Pythias, a past master of his Masonic Lodge, is present high priest of the Royal Arch Chapter, and in politics is a republican, with independent leanings in local affairs. He has been three times mayor of Terra Alta, and served four years on the Board of Education of Portland District.

June 28, 1906, Doctor Beerbower married Mary Elizabeth Stafford, daughter of William E. and Mary (Shahan) Stafford. Her father was a Union soldier in the Civil war, and the Staffords and Shahans were early represented in the settlement of Monongalia and Preston counties. Mrs. Beerbower finished her education in a preparatory school at Keyser, and was a teacher until her marriage. Doctor and Mrs. Beerbower have two sons: Albert Stafford, born April 9, 1909; and Fred Vance, born July 30, 1912.

ULYSSES S. WELCH. Terra Alta in Preston County esteems Ulysses S. Welch as one of the most substantial of its citizens, not only as a business man but as one whose helpful interest and cooperation is extended to any of the affairs of the community, particularly the schools.

Mr. Welch, who for a number of years has operated the custom mill at Terra Alta, was born at Albright, Preston County, March 23, 1867. His remote American ancestors were Welsh people. His father was Samuel E. Welch, whose brothers and sisters were T. Jefferson, Jacob, Joseph, Mrs. Jacob Feather, Mrs. Harry Feather and Mrs. Josephus Childs, all now deceased. Samuel E. Welch was a Union soldier during the Civil war, being in a cavalry regiment under General Sheridan in the Valley of Virginia. The loss of a finger was the only important wound he received. At the close of active hostilities in the East he was sent with his regiment to the West, where he participated in several Indian campaigns. He was married while still in the army, and after the war he became a locomotive engineer. For some years he was on the Pittsburgh Division of the Baltimore & Ohio, and then made his headquarters at Kansas City and was in the service of the Kansas Division of the Union Pacific. He died in the spring of 1880, at the age of fifty years. Samuel E. Welch married Rachel L. Bishop, daughter of Samuel Bishop, who spent his life as a farmer in the Albright community of Preston County. She is now seventy-three years of age and living at Albright. Her children were Ulysses S., Frank D., of Cumberland, Maryland, and Reed F., of Morgantown.

Ulysses S. Welch was thirteen years of age when his father died. He had attended the common schools of Albright, and after the death of his father he moved to Terra Alta and began earning his bread as an employee of J. W. Rigg Son & Company in their woolen mills. He learned the carding business or trade in that factory. Leaving that firm, he became a partner in Freeland, Casseday & Company, millers, and was an active participant in the business until their mills burned. He then rebuilt the plant, took over the interests of his partners, and has ever since been doing business as a miller at Terra Alta. He has a forty barrel mill, and its operations have been carried on steadily for the grinding of feed of all kinds. One special product is buckwheat flour. Much of its output is shipped to markets outside the county, and in this and other ways the plant has proved a useful industry of the town. Mr. Welch is also a stockholder and director of the Terra Alta Bank.

The two years he spent on the council was an era of practical progress of municipal improvement in Terra Alta, and during that time the first brick pavements were laid, the sewer system and city water system installed, and gas mains laid. Mr. Welch is now on his second term as a member of the Board of Education of Portland District. The most important matter being considered by the board is the building of the new high school, and an architect has been requested to submit plans for that purpose. Mr. Welch grew up in the atmosphere of the dominant political party in Preston County and cast his first vote for James G. Blaine. About the time he reached his majority he joined the Terra Alta Lodge of Odd Fellows and is also a member of the Woodmen of the World. He was reared under Methodist influences, but now a member of the Church of the Brethren.

In Preston County, near Tunnellton, August 14, 1891, married Miss Elizabeth Casseday, daughter of John Elizabeth (Bucklew) Casseday. She was born near Tunnellton, youngest of twelve children, the others surviving: James, Mrs. Harriet Fike and John B. Mr. and Mrs. Welch have one daughter, Iva M. She is a talented young woman and a very capable educator. She is a graduate of the University of West Virginia, is now an instructor in the Terra Alta High School, and is continuing her advanced studies during the summer vacations in Columbia University at York.

A. STALEY SHAW, justice of the peace for the Port District and former sheriff of Preston County, has lived practically all his life in the Terra Alta community and has been a prominent figure therein.

He was born near Albright in that county April 6, 1841. His grandfather, Benjamin Shaw, was born in the north of Ireland, and identified himself with Preston County considerably more than a century ago. He lived out his life here as a farmer and married Mary Martin, daughter of Daniel Martin, another representative of one of the oldest of Preston County's families. Benjamin and Mary Shaw had one son, William Shaw, and by a second marriage Benjamin Shaw had descendants.

William Shaw was born in Preston County December 1812, and grew up on Muddy Creek in the locality of Y. Point. There were few and limited schools during his youth, and his own knowledge of books was meager, though he became a man of practical industry. He married Sarah Gibbs, and they lived on the Gibbs farm near Terra Alta. His father, Aaron Gibbs, came into Preston County and made his home here, and spent his life as a farmer near Terra Alta. William Shaw died in August, 1891, surviving his wife six weeks. He was reared a democrat, but from the time of the Civil war until his death was a republican and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. His children were: N. A. Shaw, who was first married to A. P. Jenkins and then to D. W. Wolfe and died near Cranesville in Preston County; M. A. Shaw, who was married to Garrett T. White and died in Terra Alta; Sarah A. Shaw, who was first married to J. W. Chidester and then to J. H. Rigg, and died just east of Terra Alta; and A. Staley Shaw.

A. Staley Shaw was a pupil in the early schools of the locality where the family lived, all of his education being acquired in subscription schools. He responded to the call for militia at the time of the Civil war, but did not stay away from the home locality. His tasks and responsibilities were with the home farm until he was twenty-four, when he married, and then remained at the old homestead as a farmer. Subsequently he bought a farm nearby, and continued his career as a practical man of agriculture until 1912. At the death of his wife he turned over the farm management to his sons.

Squire Shaw, as he is generally known, has for many years been a useful factor in the public service of the county. In 1877 he was made deputy under Sheriff F. M. Ford, and served throughout that term. In 1884 he was elected high sheriff, succeeding of Elisha Thomas. He made the campaign as a republican, with which party he affiliated from the earliest of his first vote. He won the nomination and convention as one of four candidates, and is now the only one of the four living in the county and the oldest living ex-sheriff. His service from 1884 to 1888 was a rather peaceful and law-abiding period, only one murderer being tried and only eleven persons being taken to the penitentiary at Moundsville while he was sheriff. On leaving this office Squire Shaw resumed farming, but soon afterward answered another call to public duty, when he was elected to the County Court as successor of Commissioner J. P. Jones. He was president of the Court Board and served four years. During this time the court purchased the poor farm. In 1916 he was elected justice of the peace of Portland District, succeeding Squire G. Whitehair, and in 1920 he was re-elected and is now serving his second term.

On May 27, 1869, Squire Shaw married near Newburg Sarah A. Jones. She was born in Staffordshire, England, February 15, 1844, and was thirteen years of age when parents, Thomas and Sarah (Whitehouse) Jones, came to America and settled in Preston County, living on Scotch Hill near Orrs, and in that community Sarah grew up and married. Her parents are buried at Newburg, and she was one of a large family of children. Mrs. Shaw died April 13, 1912, after forty-two years of married life. Of the children ofquire Shaw the oldest is Emma M., wife of M. H. Dodge, of Terra Alta, and they have a daughter, Edna L. The other two children are twin sons, William Roy and Thomas Ray, both farm owners near Terra Alta, but William R. is officiating as principal of the Terra Alta High School, while Thomas is connected with the People's Store of Terra Alta. William T. married Edna Mayer and Thomas R. married Stella Smith, but neither has children.

Judge Shaw since the age of twenty has been an active Methodist, serving in an official capacity in the church, for some years was a trustee and is the present church treasurer. His only fraternity is the Knights of Pythias, and he is a past hancellor of Alpine Lodge No. 35 at Terra Alta.

Squire Shaw's first recollection of Terra Alta was when he was about five years of age and when his parents first moved to that community. It then contained its first log cabin, that of E. E. Alfred, who owned much if not all of the ground now embraced within the townsite. The old pioneer cabin as long since been destroyed and its owner died not far from where he founded upon the mountain top of the Alleghenies in Preston County. In 1850, when the Shaw family settled here, the Baltimore & Ohio Railway was constructing its single track line through Preston County. Staley Shaw, now the venerable district justice, frequently witnessed the progress of the work and saw the diminutive locomotive puffing and struggling under its heavy drag of material until it passed on toward the West and then saw the introduction of freight and passenger traffic, observed its growth from decade to decade, the building of a second track and then a third one, the improvement of the roadbed by the replacement of the iron rail with the heavy steel rail, the superseding of the primitive engines and freight cars and passenger coaches by powerful, stronger and better ones, the introduction of the Pullman and the dining car as the culmination of broad equipment. Terra Alta was developing apace with these improvements as its main traffic artery, and it became a little metropolis marking the east entrance of West Virginia, a beacon light in the march of progress for several generations. Judge Shaw is one of the few survivors of the old players on this human stage, and all who know him say that he has played well his part.

E. FLOYD SCAGGS. From the quality of work he has done in elevating the standards and promoting the efficiency of the schools of Logan County E. Floyd Scaggs is a notable leader in West Virginia educational affairs. With long experience and at the same time with youth at his command, his earnestness and high ideals are the qualities most needed in a state where the educational processes are being made to serve the insistent requirements of modern life.

Mr. Scaggs, who is county superintendent of schools, was born on his father's farm near Latrobe on Buffalo Creek, Logan County, January 30, 1859. His grandfather, Joseph Scaggs, was a pioneer of Logan County, served as a Confederate soldier in the Civil war, was taken prisoner on Huff's Creek and was confined at Johnson's Island in Lake Erie during the greater part of the war. After the war he resumed farming, and he was killed by a falling tree on his farm at the age of sixty. Rush F. Scaggs, father of the county superintendent, was born in Montgomery County, Virginia, December 27, 1857, and was a child when the family moved to Nightbert in Logan County. He has been a farmer as well as a carpenter, and for four years was justice of the peace in the Tridelpia District. Rush F. Scaggs married Louisa Chambers, who was born on Rum Creek in Logan County, November 20, 1867. Her father, Capt. L. E. Chambers, was commander of what was known as the Logan Wild Cats in the Confederate army. His home was at the mouth of Rum Creek. He twice served as a member of the State Legislature, was chairman of the Democratic County Committee several times, was an official member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and served on the Board of Education. He built the Chambers Church and school. Captain Chambers died in 1916, at the age of eighty-nine. Rush F. Scaggs and wife now live at Man in Logan County. Of their seven children three are teachers, Floyd, Alfred D. and Ina M.

E. Floyd Scaggs acquired his early education in the graded schools of Logan County, and without means beyond his own earnings he had to secure his higher education through his own efforts and in the intervals of his career as a teacher. While teaching he took extension work in the University of West Virginia, pursued courses in Marshall College and at the Concord Normal at Athens, and took a course in law with the American Correspondence School of Law of Chicago. He began teaching at the age of eighteen on a third grade certificate, at a salary of $30 per month, paying $5 a month for his board. He taught his first school on Rum Creek, and after that he taught every year until he was elected county superintendent in 1916. Mr. Scaggs taught the graded schools at Man, Earlring, Rich Creek and Accoville. He continued his own studies constantly while teaching. As county superintendent he has largely reorganized and systematized the school work of the county, and all the modern school buildings have been erected under his supervision.

In 1913 he married Miss Emma Burgess, daughter of Park Burgess, of Man. They have one son, Luther L. Mr. and Mrs. Scaggs are members of the Nightbert Memorial Methodist Church of Logan, and he is teacher of the Bible Class in the Sunday school. In Masonry he is affiliated with the Masonic Lodge, Logan Chapter, R. A. M., Scottish Rite degrees, Beni-Kedem Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston, and belongs to the Odd Fellows Lodge at Amherstvale, and the Elks Lodge at Logan.

T. FRED BROWN is the manager of the Brown Coal Company, with headquarters at Princeton, Mercer County, and his associate in the ownership of the business is his father, William A. Brown.

Thomas Fred Brown was born near Oakvale, Mercer County, June 15, 1887, and is a son of William A. and Olivia (Broyles) Brown, both likewise natives of Mercer County. The latter died in 1901. William A. Brown, who was born August 10, 1863, has long been prominent and influential in connection with business and civic affairs in his native county, and in earlier years was here actively engaged in farm enterprise. He served as county superintendent of roads and also as county sheriff, his political allegiance being given to the republican party. In addition to being identified with the coal business he is a successful contractor in concrete work and in road and street construction. He is a member of the church organization formed by Pastor Russell, and in adopting this faith he gave up his affiliation with the Masonic and Elks fraternities.

T. Fred Brown supplemented the discipline of the public schools by attending the Concord State Normal School at Athens, and thereafter he was for ten years associated with his brother J. W. in the retail grocery business at Princeton. He then became associated with his father in the organization of the Pioneer Coal Company, with coal yards on the east side of the Virginian Railroad, at Princeton. Later the father and son organized the present Brown Coal Company, which has well equipped yards and which controls a substantial wholesale and retail trade.

Mr. Brown and his wife are members of the First Baptist Church. In 1908 Mr. Brown married Miss Bessie Curtner, daughter of Crockett Curtner, of Mercer County, and the two children of this union are Isabelle and T. Fred, Jr.

THOMAS MAURICE FAY, president and manager of the Farmers Supply Company at Princeton, judicial center of Mercer County, and vice president of the Bank of Princeton, was born on a farm in Loudoun County, Virginia, September 20, 1868. He is a son of Joseph and Sarah (Stone) Fry, both likewise natives of the Old Dominion State, where they passed their entire lives, the father having died in 1899, at the age of sixty-nine years, and the mother having passed away in May, 1918, likewise at the age of sixty-nine.

Both were earnest communicants of the Lutheran Church. The two surviving children are Thomas M., of this review, and Mrs. Lena J. Cost, who still resides in the old home county. Prior to the Civil war the Fry family had been one of substantial prosperity, but the ravages of the war brought disaster to this as to many other families in Virginia. What remained of the old estate was sold by Thomas M. Fry after the death of his father, whose entire active career was marked by association with farm enterprise.

Thomas M. Fry gained his rudimentary education in an old log schoolhouse that required yearly treatment with mud, which was crowded between the logs to keep the wind from entering too freely, the Civil war having so lowered the prosperity of the community that no means were available for supplying a better school building. Later on Mr. Fry attended high school in the City of Washington, D. C., for one year. In 1888 he went to St. Johns, Stafford County, Kansas, where for three years he held a position in the First National Bank, at a salary of $35 a month. In 1891 he went to Kansas City, Missouri, and after having there been employed one year in the National Bank of Commerce he returned to his native county. After remaining for a time on a farm he again went to Kansas, where he held a position in a bank at Downs until the institution failed. For a time thereafter he was clerk in a dry-goods store, and in May, 1893, he went to Hudson, Michigan, where for seven years he held a position in Thompson Brothers Savings Bank. For two years thereafter he was again on a farm in Loudoun County, Virginia, and he then became cashier of the Purcellville National Bank at Purcellville, that state. After retaining this executive office four years he came to Princeton, West Virginia, where for the ensuing eleven years he was cashier of the First National Bank. Since that time he has been vice president of the Bank of Princeton, and his has been a potent influence in the upbuilding of this substantial institution. In 1919 Mr. Fry organized the Farmers Supply Company, and the Mercer Motor Company, handling Ford products, and he has since continued president of both companies, the business of which has become one of broad scope in the handling of automobiles, motor-trucks, tractors and all kinds of farm implements, machinery and general supplies. Mr. Fry has been identified with banking enterprise for more than a quarter of a century, and he reverts with agreeable memories to his pioneer experience in Kansas, especially in view of the fact that there, at St. Johns, was solemnized in 1891 his marriage with Miss Neva Benford, a native of Indiana. They have two children: Harry B. graduated from Roanoke College, Virginia, and thereafter attended the School of Finance & Commerce in New York City, where he now resides and where he follows his profession as a certified public accountant; Dorothy is the wife of Dr. W. C. Epling, who is engaged in the successful practice of dentistry at Princeton. Mr. Fry is one of the liberal and progressive citizens and representative business men of Princeton, is a republican in politics, is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias, and he and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in their home city, he being a member of its board of stewards.

ADOLPHUS R. FIKE is an undertaker and embalmer at Terra Alta, and has been a citizen of that town since October 2, 1907. Mr. Fike is a man of many gifts and versatile accomplishments, has been a farmer, merchant, carpenter and contractor, and has administered some public offices with credit and efficiency.

This versatility has been a decided characteristic of the Fike family during its various generations in Preston County. The members of the family have been distinguished for their steady industry and also for the devotion that is the outgrowth of deep religious impulses. The first American of this family came from the Province of Hanover early in the eighteenth century. His grandson, Christian Fike, married Christina Livengood. Their five sons were Christian, Jacob, John, Joseph and Peter, and their two daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Lichty and Mrs. Barbara Shrock.

Of this family Peter Fike was born in Somerset County, Pennsylvania, November 3, 1794, and in 1851 removed to Sang Run, Garrett County, Maryland, and in 1854 to Preston County, West Virginia. He spent the remaining years of his life as a farmer and cooper in the Eglen community where he died November 28, 1871. In 1818 Peter Fike married Magdalene Arnold, daughter of Elder Samuel Arnold, of Burlington, West Virginia. The children of their union were: Samuel A., David, Moses, Aaron, Susan, who married John Snider, Mary, who married Phenix Miller, Christi, who was the wife of Jacob Weimer, Annie, who married Jeremiah Miller, Lydia, who married Henry Speicher, and Magdalene, Mrs. John Weimer. All the sons were farmers and three of them, Samuel, Moses and Aaron, were ministers of the Church of the Brethren. They gave little attention to politics, and Moses only was a militia soldier during the Civil war and is the only survivor of the ten children, a home being near Eglen.

Elder Aaron Fike, father of Adolphus R. Fike of Terra Alta, was born April 25, 1840, on Indian Creek in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, was reared in Garrett County, Maryland, and after the age of fourteen in Preston County. He was the best possible use of the limited educational opportunity that came to him. He lived and reared his family on a farm, and farming was always his chief vocation. After his marriage he and his wife lived for a year with his father, during that time he employed his mechanical skill in making furniture, and continued that until he had sold enough to equip his own home for housekeeping. On June 3, 1860, he was elected to the ministry of the Church of the Brethren after having been a member of the organization one year. He preached four years and was then ordained an elder, thereafter much of his time and energies were given to preaching and to ministering in church affairs. He went about these duties with singular disregard of his own comfort and hardships entailed in riding horseback to distant congregations. As is the custom of that denomination, he did all his ministerial work without compensation. The intervals between his church duties were diligently employed on his farm and in providing for his family's comforts. He roamed about over the country in all kinds of weather, preaching, baptizing, and frequently rode back a distance of fifty miles. On two occasions he reached home frozen to the saddle and had to be helped from the horse, his hands and feet being thawed out in cold water. He paid little attention to swollen streams, fording or swimming them on his horse. Once he tried to urge his horse into Cheat River when it was high, but his faithful animal refused to make the venture and later he discovered that the stream had washed a new channel ten feet deep at that point. During his young years he endured the hardships easily, but later an affliction came upon him which made it impossible to travel on horseback, and he then walked to his appointments. His son Adolphus occasionally accompanied him, they walked together eight miles to the services and then walking back Adolphus as a boy once accompanied his father twenty miles away to fill an appointment, and they made the distance on foot on Saturday, and after preaching on Sundays they returned home together. Aaron Fike's health began failing him at the age of thirty-five, and during the remainder of his long life he suffered much pain and inconvenience without ceasing his labors. For forty years he was assistant elder in charge of the German settlement congregation, and then became elder in full charge. Aaron Fike reared a numerous family of healthy children, ministering to the physical needs when sick in some homely way and never spending more than five dollars for doctor's services while they were growing up. Affection and love for his children was one of his predominant characteristics, though he was positive in exacting obedience from them, and he always set them an exemplary deportment. Aaron Fike passed away on a Sunday in December, 1916, and his funeral was preached by Elder Jonas Fike, his nephew.

On March 29, 1860, Aaron Fike married Rebecca S. Rudolph, a daughter of John Rudolph. She was born near Eglen January 7, 1841, and died March 29, 1916. The children of this good old couple were: Matilda, wife of John Vought, of Eglen; Tabitha, who married Charles P. Jones and lives at New Windsor, Maryland; Amelius, a farmer at Eglen; Adolphus Roland; Lucinda, who married Dennis Biser, of Eglen; Phenix L., of Peace Valley, Missouri; Emma a farmer and minister near Eglon; Lorenza lives at Red House, Maryland, and, like his brothers Phenix and Emra, is a minister of the Church of the Brethren; Ellmina, died at Eglon, wife of Bertis Bucklew; Celesta, Mrs. Joseph Livengood, of Salisbury, Pennsylvania; and Hurley W., of Myersdale, Pennsylvania.

Adolphus R. Fike, whose history is now taken up after reviewing his honorable ancestry, was born at Eglon October 19, 1866. As a boy he attended the Slaubaug School, worked for his father on the farm, was employed on public works, and also in the lumber woods for the J. L. Romberger Lumber Company. About that time he married and began farming. He lived on his farm at Hebron for seventeen years, and supplemented the income from his farm by carpenter work and by undertaking. He kept a stock of undertaking goods at his home in the country, and his hearse was the first one in that locality.

Mr. Fike sold his interests at Eglon in 1907 and removed to Terra Alta, where he has since been a leader in the undertaking service. For seven years he did carpenter work as a side line. He also put in a furniture stock, and after six years he made an exchange with his competitor, turning over the furniture to him while he concentrated on the business of undertaking and embalming. Mr. Fike bought and brought to Terra Alta the first automobile hearse in Preston County, in 1917. He has also been a dealer in harness, and to some extent still carries on his trade as a carpenter and contractor.

Mr. Fike was for four years a member of the Council of Terra Alta and for one year mayor. He is a republican and has served as a deacon in the Church of the Brethren.

On September 28, 1890, he married in Preston County Miss Mary Ann Wiles, who was born in Eglon July 12, 1867, daughter of Abraham and Sarah (Stemple) Wiles. She was the only child of her mother, but her father had children by his two other marriages. Mr. and Mrs. Fike have four daughters: Della Frances is the wife of Reed F. Martin, of Washington, D. C. Olive Ruth is a graduate nurse of a Uniontown Hospital in Pennsylvania, and is now superintendent of Fricks Hospital in that city. Violet May is a teacher at Cayford, West Virginia. Lulu Z. is teacher of music in La Plata Institute in Maryland.

NATHAN C. MUSGROVE was for many years in the tanning industry and for the past twenty years has been a mill owner and operator at Fetterman, a suburb of Grafton.

Mr. Musgrove was born in the Laurel Run community of Marion County, September 18, 1858, son of Nathan Musgrove. His father was born in Frederick County, Maryland, in 1824, and in 1849, came to West Virginia. He acquired a liberal education, and taught school for a time after settling in Marion County. He finally established his home on White Day Creek, and continued his life as a farmer there until his death. He was never in politics beyond voting as a democrat, and was an active member of the Christian Church.

Nathan Musgrove was the only member of his family to come to West Virginia. At Old Palatine, near Fairmont, he married Irene Corrothers, a daughter of Andrew Corrothers. She was reared on White Day Creek, near Smithtown. Her people were farmers, and her brother, John W. Corrothers, was at one time called the timber king of West Virginia, and the family as a whole were very prosperous and substantial people. Nathan Musgrove, Senior, died in 1898 and his wife in 1893. They were the parents of seven sons and four daughters, nine of whom are still living, the youngest being fifty years of age. Their son John W. died at Satsop, Washington; Andrew J. was a locomotive engineer when he died at Payneville, Ohio, September 24, 1913; Robert Q. lives at Fairmont; Nathan Columbus is next in age; Samuel M. is a member of the Grafton Bar; Lizzie married A. J. Matthew, of Preston County; Thomas J. operates the old homestead farm on White Day Creek; Milton R. is justice of the peace at Fairmont; Mrs. Belle Henderson lives at Grafton; Iantha, widow of I. T. Hawkins, operates a dairy near Fairmont; Daisy is the wife of C. M. Stanley, of Benton's Ferry, West Virginia.

Nathan C. Musgrove grew up on White Day Creek, acquired his education in the Laurel Run country school, and after reaching his majority left home and for a time was a coal miner in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania. He then returned home and built a tanyard on Laurel Run, and took up the industry, which was satisfactory in that locality for nineteen years. The capacity of his plant was a thousand hides annually. His product was harness and rough leather. The market for his finished harness leather was in Baltimore and Wheeling, and other products were marketed in the East. When he abandoned the tan yard it went into disuse and has practically disappeared. On leaving his old home Mr. Musgrove moved to Fetterman and erected a feed mill. He did a large amount of custom grinding, and also handled flour, feed, sugar and salt by the wholesale. He was one of the charter members and a former director of the Jerry Run Coal Company, and is now a stockholder in the Crafton Banking and Trust Company.

Mr. Musgrove has participated in politics only to the extent of voting the democratic ticket, and is an earnest follower of democratic principals. His first presidential vote went to General Hancock in 1880, and he has participated in every national election since then, voting twice for Mr. Cleveland and twice for Mr. Wilson. He is a member of the Odd Fellows, and is a contributor to the work of the organized church in his community. During the World War he was a member of the wholesale committee of the Food Administration at Grafton, and otherwise participated in the drive for funds.

On September 3, 1885, at Morgantown, Mr. Musgrove married Miss Sarah Kiser, daughter of Samuel Kiser. She died July 25, 1889. Their two children were Nora C., who is now the wife of Lincoln Mason, of Grafton, and has two children, James and Sarah Marie; and John, associated with his father in business, who married Flo Pinnell and has one child, Sarah. For his second wife Mr. Musgrove married Anna J. Kiser, sister of his first wife. She died February 27, 1920. Their surviving daughter, Phonie, is the wife of George Coulson, of Fetterman, and they have one child, Nathan Coulson.

EENEZER ARCHER FRESHWATER is a venerable and honored native son of Hancock County whom it is most gratifying and consistent to accord representation in this history of West Virginia. Though he is now living virtually retired in his attractive home at Chester, this county, he has been in the most distinctive sense a man of thought and action, and marked the passing years with large and worthy achievement. The following statements concerning Mr. Freshwater are well worthy of preservation in this connection. "He is big physically and mentally, and in his business career he never found contracts too large for him to assume and carry through. He keeps in full touch with the trend of the times and feels that his span of life has embraced the most interesting and important period in the world's history. His memory compassed much of the splendid development and progress of Hancock County and he takes just satisfaction in the knowledge that he has been able to contribute his share to this civic and material advancement in one of the finest sections of a great and prosperous commonwealth."

In a modest home on King's Creek in what is now Hancock County Mr. Freshwater was born March 21, 1839, a son of Philip and Eleanor (Archer) Freshwater. Philip Freshwater was born in Brooke County, this state, and was a son of Reuben Freshwater, one of five brothers who settled in the Upper Ohio Valley in the early pioneer days. Philip had four brothers, David, William, George and John. Mrs. Eleanor (Archer) Freshwater likewise was born and reared in Brooke County, and after their marriage she and her husband came to what is now Hancock County and established their home on a farm on King's Creek. Remains of an old iron furnace on this creek are still in evidence and marking an historic point, in that this furnace was used in connection with the manufacturing of firearms used in the War of 1812. On the old homestead farm Philip Freshwater and his wife passed the remainder of their lives, noble, self-sacrificing pioneers who were well equipped to face the problems and responsibilities that fell to them and who reared their children to lives of honor and usefulness. Mr. Freshwater was one of the early breeders of Merino sheep in this part of the state, and became one of the extensive and successful agriculturists and stock-growers of Hancock County as now constituted. He died at the age of seventy-six years, his devoted wife having passed away at the age of sixty-one years, both having been active members of the United Presbyterian Church. Of their children eight attained to maturity: Elizabeth, became the wife of Malcolm Cameron, and both died at Highlandtown, Ohio, she having been seventy-nine years of age at the time of her demise; Nancy, the wife of John Carothers, died at Franklin, Pennsylvania, at the age of eighty-one years; Reuben, who is, in 1922, in his eighty-sixth year, owns and resides on a farm adjoining the old homestead of his parents; Mary J. became the wife of Robert Carson and died at Toronto, Ohio, when about sixty-eight years of age; Ebenezer A., immediate subject of this review, was the next in order of birth; Sarah Jane is the widow of David Carothers and resides at Steubenville, Ohio; Martha Ellen is the widow of Benton Langfitt and resides near the old home farm of her father; Philip married Miss Ellen Woods and was a resident of Ironton, Ohio, at the time of his death, when in middle life.

Ebenezer A. Freshwater was reared on the old pioneer farm and received the advantages of the schools of the locality and period. He early learned the dignity and value of honest toil and endeavor, and soon developed individual initiative as one of the world's constructive workers. After his marriage, which occurred in the spring of 1867, he established his residence on the excellent farm which he had purchased, three miles distant from the old homestead on which he was born. He developed one of the best farm properties of his native county, and remained on the farm thirty years—until 1916, when he removed to the village of Chester. He became the owner of three excellent farms in Hancock County, and in connection with his farm enterprise he operated a brick yard at the mouth of King's Creek, on the Ohio River, where he manufactured paving brick of superior grade. He also bought and shipped wool on a somewhat extensive scale. With the expansion of his brick manufacturing Mr. Freshwater eventually engaged in business as a contractor in the construction of brick pavements. He took contracts for city street paving, and manufactured the brick used for this work, his activities along this line having been initiated fully forty years ago. In his contracting business three of his sons eventually became associated, under the title of E. A. Freshwater & Sons, and this concern has become one of the leaders in this line of enterprise in West Virginia, its extensive operations including both city and country paving contracts. The firm built twelve miles of modern cement road in Hancock County in the year 1921, and the business of the firm aggregated more than $1,000,000 for that year. While Mr. Freshwater is still at the head of this firm, in the development of whose business he has been the most potent force, he has retired from active association with the business, the operations of which are safely entrusted to the three sons who have proved his able coadjutors. He keeps in touch with the contracts assumed by the firm, and has status as one of the substantial and specially successful business men of his native state. The firm has taken contracts in which bonds to the amount of $2,000,000 have been required, and the credit of the firm at banking institutions has been practically unlimited. Mr. Freshwater has reason to take pride in the work which he has achieved in connection with enterprises of broad scope and importance, and in the inviolable place that is his in popular confidence and esteem. He is a republican in political allegiance, and while he has had no desire for public office he served several years as justice of the peace and has ever been loyal and liberal in his civic attitude. Both he and his wife are active members of the Presbyterian Church.

On the 27th of March, 1867, when he was twenty-seven years of age, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Freshwater and Miss Clarinda Ellen Campbell, who was twenty-two years old. The ceremony occurred at the home of the bride's father, James Campbell, near the mouth of King's Creek, and it is pleasing to record that when Mr. and Mrs. Freshwater celebrated their golden wedding, or fiftieth anniversary of their marriage, in 1917, Mrs. Margaret (Orr) Anderson, wife of Frank Anderson, of East Liverpool, Ohio, was present as an honored guest of the venerable couple, whose marriage she had attended as a bridesmaid a half century previously.

In conclusion is given brief record concerning the children of Mr. and Mrs. Freshwater: George Washington is an oil operator in Pennsylvania; James Campbell is a member of the previously mentioned contracting firm of E. A. Freshwater & Sons; Francis Lee is a successful oil operator in the West Virginia fields; Eleanor Archer is the wife of William James, of Chester, Hancock County; Miss Nancy Belle likewise resides at Chester, as a member of the parental home circle; Philip is the second of the sons to be a member of the firm of E. A. Freshwater & Sons; Milton is the executive head of the Freshwater Construction Company, a distinct organization engaged in the paving-contract business, with headquarters in the City of Cleveland, Ohio, his father being financially interested in this business; Elmer is the youngest member of the firm of E. A. Freshwater & Sons; and Ebenezer A., Jr., who resides at Painesville, Ohio, is construction foreman for E. A. Freshwater & Sons. Of the above mentioned children: James Campbell Freshwater married Nora Herron, of Hancock County, West Virginia. The have no living children. Francis Lee Freshwater married Maud McDole, of East Liverpool, Ohio. They have four children, Sarah E., Nancy E., James A. and Frances A. Philip Freshwater married Alma Montgomery, of Ada, Ohio. Milton Freshwater married Carrie B. Wiggins, of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, and their two children are Richard A. and Milton, Jr. Elmer Freshwater married Fern Montgomery of Ada, Ohio. They have four children, Harold L., Fred M. Jeanette and Dorothy F. Ebenezer A., Jr., married Margaret Given, of Wellsville, Ohio.

SAMUEL AUSTIN PRATT, M. D. The oldest practicing physician in Preston County is Dr. Samuel Austin Pratt of Kingwood, who has been a resident of that city since 187 and has been practicing medicine steadily for forty years. He has lived on the same spot of ground for more than a third of a century.

Dr. Pratt was born on Pratt Run, nine miles from Middleburn in Tyler County, West Virginia, August 13, 1849. His father, William Pratt, was born near Norfolk, Virginia, about 1793, and before his marriage moved to West Virginia and was a farmer in Tyler County. He died in 1858, and has served as a soldier during the Mexican war. William Pratt married Martha Underwood, one of the eight sons and three daughters of William W. and Hannah (Willis) Underwood and she died in 1906, at the age of eighty-four. William W. Underwood was one of the most substantial farmers of Tyler County, and represented that district many terms in the Legislature. William and Martha Pratt had the following children: Ellis, William, John, Thomas, Samuel A., Elizabeth Jane, Sarah E., Nancy and Leah. Four of these children intermarried with members of the Weekley family, the son William marrying Ethalinda Weekley, Elizabeth was the wife of Daniel Weekley and became the mother of Bishop Weekley of Parkersburg. Sarah was married to William Weekley. Nancy was three times married and her last husband was Bamberlidge Ash. Leah was the wife of Isaiah Weekley.

Samuel Austin Pratt spent his boyhood and youth on the farm in Tyler County. He continued his education through high school and for a time was a teacher, being the youngest teacher in the county when he began the work. He has pupils from two different counties and from three different districts. After two terms as a teacher he became clerk of a Wick Post Office and for several years was employed by J. B. Smith, a merchant at Shirley in that county.

About this time he began the study of medicine, reading under the direction of Dr. Malloy at Middleburn. From there he went to West Union in Doddridge County, clerked in a drug store for Mr. Martin, and his employer, appreciating his industry and his ambition to become a physician, paid his expenses for one term in Starling Medical College in Ohio. In the meantime Mr. Martin removed to Kingwood and engaged in the drug business, and Dr. Pratt took charge of the business after Mr. Martin's death. He continued with the store until May 1, 1880, when he began the practice of medicine. He practiced as an undergraduate because he was without funds to continue his studies in college, and it was his intention to go on with his course after he had the money therefor. In 1882 the West Virginia Legislature passed the law requiring a physician to be a graduate of a reputable school of medicine or to have ten years continuous ractice. To meet these requirements Dr. Pratt took the examination for his diploma at Grafton and was properly registered under the law. He has now practiced for more than forty years, and for a long time he did the heavy duty exacted of a country physician who is riding and driving most continuously, but is now getting ready to retire from his heavy labor.

Dr. Pratt early in his career was deprived of his patrimony and consequently had to earn his own living and the surplus added for his education. Even when he began practice in Kingwood he had no surplus above a bare existence. His mother furnished him with some bedding, and he placed it upon boxes in his office for a bedstead, and in the morning ut it away in the boxes out of sight of the public. He had to wait for business, and it came slowly. During this waiting period he wrote in the county clerk's office at night for the money to pay his board, and he also made money guarding notorious prisoners to prevent his being taken from the jail by unfriendly hands. In time his abilities gained their proper recognition, and for many years Dr. Pratt has been one of the leaders in his profession. He was one of the examining surgeons of the Baltimore & Ohio Railway and for thirty years was examining surgeon for the United States Government.

In addition to his profession Dr. Pratt has been interested in industrial development, and is a stockholder in the Francois Coal Company of Clarksburg and interested in the same company at Lowesville, and is also interested in the Astor Mines at Flemington.

Doctor Pratt has not been in politics, though always voting the republican ticket. He married in Preston County, August 3, 1834, Miss Jennie R. Wheeler, daughter of David and Jennie R. (Parsons) Wheeler. Mrs. Wheeler died at the birth of her daughter, Jennie, and the latter three days later was brought by Mrs. Bonafield from Tucker County to Kingwood and placed in the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Parsons. Mrs. Pratt has therefore spent all her life in Kingwood, where she was educated. Dr. and Mrs. Pratt have a daughter, Martha, wife of James A. Haislip, of Clarksburg. Mr. Haislip is a civil engineer. The four grandchildren of Doctor and Mrs. Pratt are Jane Rebecca, James A., Jr., Pattie and Bettie.

Doctor Pratt says that "he is a physician by profession and a gun crank from choice." The sports of the field have furnished him an inexhaustible pleasure since early youth. His hunting expeditions have extended out to Wyoming and Montana, and his collections of fine rifles and other weapons include an old time long barrel rifle of his grandfather Parsons. This gun was in its time a weapon of defense against Indians as well as an instrument in the slaying of the big game of the mountains. Mrs. Pratt also has a special hobby, and that is china decoration. She took up this art without any training beyond her individual practice, and the shelves of her liningroom are laden with china ware showing her artistic talents and the possibilities of training native talent in this direction.

MILTON H. PROUDFOOT, M. D. While he has been busy in his work as a physician at Rowlesburg for over thirty years, Doctor Proudfoot has always exemplified the all around interest and good service of a citizen and one willing to work for the welfare of his community. His is a position of peculiar honor and esteem in that part of Preston County.

Doctor Proudfoot was born at Grafton, West Virginia, August 20, 1860. His grandfather came from Old Virginia and settled in Barbour County. He was a slave owner, but very conscientious and religious, and when John Brown raided Harpers Ferry for the purpose of freeing the slaves he took this opportunity of freeing his own blacks. His family consisted of three sons and three daughters by his marriage to Miss Reed. The daughters are all deceased. The sons were: Mack, who died unmarried in Upshur County; Francis R.; and James W., now a resident of Grafton.

Francis R. Proudfoot, father of Doctor Proudfoot, was born in Barbour County, August 18, 1834. He had a common school education, lived on a farm but learned the carpenter's trade, and in 1863 entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company at Grafton in the car shops. He spent all the rest of his active life in the service of the Baltimore & Ohio.

He was promoted to general foreman of car repairs, subsequently transferred to Baltimore and was general foreman of car repairs at Camden Station and remained there on duty until 1899, when he retired on a pension and subsequently lived at Rowlesburg, where he died March 20, 1918, at the age of eighty-four. He had his father's strong religious principles, was a Methodist, and exemplified his religion in everyday life. He was a republican, a Master Mason and a member of the Knights of Pythias. Francis R. Proudfoot married Emily C. Freeman, daughter of Evan Freeman, who came from old Virginia to Taylor County, West Virginia, and was a blacksmith by trade. Mrs. Proudfoot died May 23, 1911. Her children were: Doctor Proudfoot; Mrs. Frank Menefee, of Denver, Colorado; Gordon F., of Franklin, Pennsylvania; and Ernest J., of Rowlesburg.

Milton H. Proudfoot spent his early life at Grafton, that city being his home until he was twenty-four. He was educated in the public schools, and as a young man spent two years in the railway mail service on the Baltimore & Ohio between Grafton and Wheeling. In the intervals of that work he studied medicine, and when he resigned he entered the Starling Medical College at Columbus, Ohio, where he was graduated M. D. in the spring of 1884. Doctor Proudfoot after practicing medicine at Rowlesburg for two years abandoned his growing patronage in that locality to identify himself with a new and rapidly settling community in Kansas, at Kendall, where he located in 1886. A man of his professional ability was greatly needed and esteemed among the pioneers there, and he shared in all their vicissitudes, traveling great distances to see his patients, and being lost on the prairie was a very common occurrence. There were crop failures that soon discouraged most of the settlers, and though Doctor Proudfoot was well contented with the country otherwise he could not remain in the face of rapidly decreasing population, and after four years he too retired from the unequal struggle and in 1890 returned to West Virginia and re-established himself in practice at Rowlesburg. He has had a large private practice, and has also for thirty years been local surgeon for the Baltimore & Ohio Railway, for four years was a member of the West Virginia State Board of Health, and is an active member of the County and State Medical Societies. He is also Preston County examiner for the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and during the World War he and Mrs. Proudfoot took an active part in Red Cross work.

Doctor Proudfoot cast his first presidential ballot for the plumed knight of Maine, James G. Blaine, and the only exception to his party regularity was due to his devotion and admiration for the personality and character of the late Colonel Roosevelt, with whom he went into the progressive party. Doctor Proudfoot is a member of the Board of Education at Rowlesburg and is a trustee and treasurer of the Methodist Church there.

At Baltimore, Maryland, June 29, 1887, he married Miss Lida D. Sawtelle, daughter of W. D. Sawtelle. She was born at Wheeling but was reared and educated at New Orleans, Louisiana, and in 1886 returned to West Virginia to teach in the schools of Tucker County. Her father is still living at Shreveport, Louisiana. The other members of the Sawtelle family still living are Mrs. C. H. Hooton, of Baltimore; Mrs. George, of Brooklyn, New York; Mrs. O. A. Annan, of Baltimore; and the wife of Rev. Robert Wynne, of Shreveport, Louisiana.

Doctor and Mrs. Proudfoot have one daughter, Eva, now Mrs. C. W. F. Coffin, of Englewood, New Jersey. Mr. Coffin is vice president of the Franklin Railway Supply Company. Doctor and Mrs. Proudfoot have two grandchildren, William Allison and Charles Floyd Coffin.

DANIEL JAMES RUDASILL, M. D. An accomplished and successful physician and surgeon Doctor Rudasill has been a resident of Kingwood fifteen years. He located there soon after finishing his medical education, and along with a growing medical practice he has won a host of friends in his adopted community and is regarded as one of Preston County's most valued citizens.

Doctor Rudasill came to West Virginia from old Virginia. His great-grandfather on coming from Germany established his home in Rappahannock County, where he spent his remaining years as a planter. The grandfather of Doctor Rudasill was also a planter in the same county. James A. Rudasill, father of the Doctor, was a merchant in Culpeper, Virginia, and after the war conducted a farm and lived out his life in Madison County. During the war he was in General Mosby's command of Confederate troops, and as a private soldier was in many campaigns but escaped wounds or capture. He had no political ambitions, though he served as a squire in his community. At the time of his death he was the oldest member of his Masonic Lodge. James A. Rudasill married Miss Sarah Elizabeth Carpenter, daughter of John Carpenter, and of a family that was identified with the first settlement of Robinson Valley in Madison County. She died in 1897. The children of James A. Rudasill and wife were: Charles M., who died as a farmer in Madison County; Nannie B., wife of William B. Lacy, of Madison County; Harry Carpenter, who died in Chicago at the age of fifty years; William Albert, of Orange, Virginia; Kate, wife of C. M. Thomas, of Madison County; Nellie, wife of J. H. Tanner, of Culpeper County; Lucien Albert, of Orange; Dora Dean, wife of James P. Bickers, of Madison County; and Daniel James.

Daniel James Rudasill, youngest of the family, was born on the old farm in Madison County, Virginia, July 18, 1879. While a boy there he attended the public schools, was also a pupil in the Locustdale Academy, and at the age of twenty left home to enter the Medical College of Virginia at Richmond. Doctor Rudasill graduated in 1905, and for six months following was an interne in the Newport News General Hospital. He then removed to West Virginia and located at Kingwood. During 1912 he attended the Post-Graduate school of Medicine and Hospital in Chicago, and during 1912-13 he conducted a hospital in Kingwood. He has served as county health officer and is a member of the County and American Medical Associations.

Dr. Rudasill was for a time a member of the City Council of Kingwood. In politics he has always voted and given a rather independent support to the democratic party. He is a Master Mason and is a member of the Session of the Presbyterian Church. At Carmichael, Pennsylvania, October 3, 1917, Dr. Rudasill married Mrs. Mary (Laidley) Groom, a native of Carmichael. They have one daughter, Sarah Elizabeth, born February 16, 1920.

L. BERT HARTMAN. While for many years his energies have been concentrated on business and home affairs at Tunnelton, L. Bert Hartman, member of an old and well known family of this section of Preston County, had some half dozen years of varied experience and hardship in the frozen North, attracted there by the famous Klondike gold discoveries.

Mr. Hartman was born within three miles of Tunnelton, August 1, 1875, and is a son of George W. Hartman. A more complete account of the Hartman family is given elsewhere. His father was a farmer and died at the age of seventy-six.

L. Bert Hartman left the home farm when about sixteen years of age and finished his education in the Kingwood High School about the time he reached his majority. He then worked around the Tunnelton mines, helping as a carpenter to set up the tippie and other preliminary work. He was then in the train service of the Baltimore & Ohio Railway at Grafton as an extra fireman for eighteen months.

He left this, obeying a sudden impulse for great adventure in the gold country under the Arctic circle. He joined several others leaving Preston County, including Marion Boone, William Smalley, Adam Albright, and they first went to Seattle where they spent three weeks outfitting and shipped from there to Cook's Inlet on the steamer Del Norte, making the run without incident in twelve days and landing at Sunrise City May 5, 1898. The country was still covered with ice and snow and the party waited for the ice to go out before attempting work. They prospected in that vicinity without results, and soon all of his companions deserted Mr. Hartman and returned to Preston County. Mr. Hartman, however, was not satisfied to go back without something to his credit beside the journey itself. With other associates he went into the interior, continuing his search for precious metal. At Cook's Inlet he met an old prospector from Los Angeles, N. D. Shippey, and the two were together as partners until he finished his exploration of the Copper River country. They trailed on foot the full length of the Matanooksi River, crossing the divide between that and the Copper River country, trailed the full length of the Nelchina River, crossed Tazlina Lake and trailed the river of that name to the Copper River and eighty miles by sled up that stream. They left their sleds May 6th, went into camp and built a boat, sawing a tree into lumber for that purpose. June 12th they started in their boat up the Copper, following the stream until it became a mere creek. The voyage terminated near the foot of Mt. Rangel, an active volcano, that the east about was all volcanic, with no metal. Returning to scene where the boat was built, they loaded their outfit, dropped down to the mouth of the Sustichina River, started up that stream, and on the 6th of July the boat was overturned and practically all the provisions and other equipment lost. The boat itself was saved, and in it they drifted down to Copper Center, where they replenished their provisions. They started to pack across to Cook's Inlet, their first landing place, a distance of about 450 miles. Each carried a pair of blankets, his food, and a sweater to sleep in, and they made the trip in thirty days.

Having thus covered by trip and boat over three thousand miles in his prospecting adventures, Mr. Hartman decided to rest. He remained at the Inlet, working at making hydraulic pipes, until he earned the money to carry him back to Seattle. Then for a few weeks he was employed by electric light company, and was then approached by a prospector desirous of his companionship in another trip to the far North. He could not resist the lure of adventure, and after landing at Skagway they crossed White Pass Summit with a dog team, encountering some of the greatest hardships of a frigid winter, though they made the trip of forty-five miles without other incident than the suffering caused by a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees below zero. At La Bennett Mr. Hartman arranged to take a one-horse sled load of hardware to Dawson City, a distance of 600 miles. I covered this journey alone in twenty days, once in extreme danger, when the horse broke through the ice, the animal and himself being saved by what seemed mere chance. I continued on and landed his merchandise at Dawson City and while there he did teaming and freighting and also carpenter work. At times he prospected, but was never able to change his luck, and out of seven claims never realized a penny. In the fall of 1903 Mr. Hartman returned to Seattle after having spent five and a half years in the far North and having endured what to most people living in a temperate climate seem almost unbelievable hardships and difficulties and sufferings. Again and again he was plunged into icy water, endured the pangs of hunger and extreme fatigue and had to fight swarms of mosquitoes whose attacks frequently caused the blood to ooze from his face and neck. While in the North he paid from fifty cents to a dollar for every letter received from friends at home, and these letters were delivered only months after having been posted.

On reaching Seattle in 1903 Mr. Hartman spent three weeks in a logging camp, and then resumed his journey home arriving in Tunnelton in November of that year. For a time it was difficult to readjust himself to the slow routine of the old neighborhood. In the meantime he attended an embalming school at Pittsburgh, where he received a diploma, and on returning to Tunnelton engaged in the undertaking and furniture business March 1, 1904. He has continued in this line ever since, and in addition is a coal operator being associated with his brother, A. W. Hartman, in the Hartman Brothers Coal Company. He is developing another property near Grafton, known as the Reynolds Coal Company, of which he is the president.

In the spring following his return from the Klondike Mr. Hartman married Miss Mary J. Cummings, daughter of George and Jane (Lloyd) Cummings. Her mother was a daughter of John Lloyd, a Welshman. Mrs. Hartman, who was born in Preston County in 1882, is the mother of a son, Ralph Maxwell, born May 31, 1909. Mr. Hartman votes as a republican, is affiliated with the Junior Order United American Mechanics, Daughters of America, Knights of Pythias, Pythian Sisters, the Dokeys, and is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason and Shriner.

Regent J. M. Kahan

ROGER B. MCKAHAN has shown his initiative and executive ability in the building up of one of the largest and best automotive establishments in West Virginia, and in general equipment and service facilities this modern establishment, at Moundsville, county seat of Marshall County, is maintained on the highest plane. Here Mr. McKahan has the agency for the ever popular Ford automobiles, and in his building and its equipment is now represented an investment of fully $100,000. The building was erected in 1915, by H. W. Perkins, who later sold the property to H. W. McDowell, from whom Mr. McKahan purchased the same on the 9th of February, 1920. The present owner has expended $32,000 in enlarging and remodeling the building, which is now 70 by 120 feet in dimensions, a portion of the structure being two stories in height and in bringing the facilities and appointments of the office, sales and storage rooms up to the best modern standard, besides installing the most approved machinery and other accessories in the repair department. In the operation of the enterprise Mr. McKahan retains a corps of thirteen assistants. Here are handled not only the Ford automobiles but also Fordson tractors, trucks, etc., and at all times is to be found a full supply of accessories and parts, so that the service is of the best in all of the departments. The original contract into which Mr. McKahan entered with the Ford Company provided for his handling ninety-six of the Ford cars annually, and the splendid success which has attended his vital enterprise is shown in the statement that in the month of May alone, in 1921, he sold 110 cars. His average on annual sales has now become three times the volume represented in his original contract.

Mr. McKahan was born April 22, 1890, was reared and educated in Waynesburg, Pennsylvania, receiving his collegiate degree from Waynesburg College in 1911. He went to Pittsburgh and was later engaged with H. J. Heinz Company, the great pickle manufacturers. He won advancement through effective service and the experience which he gained in connection with a nation-wide industrial enterprise proved of greater value to him than could any salary, and he held responsible positions that gave him a very appreciable income in this connection. He later entered the Johns Hopkins University at Baltimore, Maryland.

When the nation became involved in the World War Mr. McKahan was among the first to enlist, and from the position of private he won promotion through the various grades and was commissioned a first lieutenant. He continued in active service two years, and during the major part of this period he was on duty with American Expeditionary Forces in France. Upon entering the United States Army his ability soon led to his being detailed to service as purchasing agent for army supplies in France. He had previously studied the French language, and he soon perfected himself in the colloquial usage of the same, and as a purchaser of government supplies he paid out several millions of dollars and made an enviable record. He received his honorable discharge after the signing of the historic armistice had brought the great war to a close.

A number of years ago Mr. McKahan decided to await only a proper opportunity to establish himself independently in business as an agent for the Ford products, and after evering his association with the Heinz Company and making extended investigations, he selected Moundsville, West Virginia, as the most eligible point in which to establish himself in business. He was determined to own and equip an automobile establishment second to none in facilities and service, and his achievement at Moundsville has proved its capacity for winning results, besides making him a most valuable acquisition to the local business community. His enterprise and his success have prompted others to emulate his example, with the result that so many other automobile plants have been established at Moundsville that no other city of its population in the state has superior buildings or more enthusiastic salesmen in this particular line.

Mr. McKahan married August 28, 1917, Miss Mazie R. Smith of Port Norris, New Jersey, daughter of B. F. and Elizabeth (Souder) Smith. He is a member of Park Lodge No. 676, Free and Accepted Masons, West Virginia Consistory No. 1, of Wheeling, West Virginia, Osiris Temple Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of Wheeling, also a member of Moundsville Chapter No. 86, Royal Arch Masons, and the Moundsville Chamber of Commerce.

J. ALLEN BUCKLEW, a veteran Union soldier and retired railroad man at Terra Alta, has spent his life in Preston County, and has contributed his share to the honorable record of the Bucklew family in this section of West Virginia, where they have lived and performed their work since pioneer times.

His great-grandfather was the founder of the family here before the close of the eighteenth century. J. Allen Bucklew, his father and his grandfather were all natives of the county. The grandfather, William Bucklew, was born in the Whetsel settlement of this county, where he lived to old age. He married a Miss Elzy, and they are buried on the old home farm. Their children were Jacob; Annie, who died unmarried; Rebecca who married Baldwin Fairfax; Dellah, who married Andrew Hawley; and John E.

John E. Bucklew with three of his sons served in the Union Army during the Civil war. John E. Bucklew was born in 1818, near the old Fairfax Ford of Cheat River, in the locality of Caddell, and all his life was passed in Preston County. He had no education because of the lack of school facilities in his day, but was a man of great vigor and lived usefully and honorably. He came out of the war much broken in health, and though he kept his home on his farm the rest of his years he could do little of its practical work. It required the help of two canes to enable him to get about, and he suffered more or less the many years he survived. He died near Terra Alta June 6, 1892. He married Abigail Sipolt, who died April 28, 1898. She was the daughter of Christopher and Mary (Martin) Sipolt. The children of John E. Bucklew were: Eugene, a resident of Terra Alta; J. Allen; Christopher C., who died during the Civil war; Mary Ann, whose first husband was John Knotts, a soldier, and her second was Washington Shaffer, and she died in Jackson County, Kansas; and Ruth, who married Isaac Whiting and died in Preston County.

J. Allen Bucklew was born January 16, 1843, on Beech Hill, near Albright, but grew up on the Sipolt farm in the same vicinity. The family subsequently moved to Pint Run, where he remained until he entered the army. He had only a common and private school education, but has always passed as a man of substantial knowledge and judgment.

Mr. Bucklew and his father and his brother Eugene were all in the same company and regiment, Company O, Sixth West Virginia Infantry, under Captain Joseph M. Godwin and Colonel Wilkinson. J. Allen enlisted in September, 1861, while his father, John E., joined in February, 1862. Eugene served three years lacking two months, and was mustered out in June, 1865. The other son, Christopher C. was in Company A of the Seventh West Virginia Infantry. He was wounded at the battle of Weldon Railroad, taken prisoner, and while at Belle Isle was starved to death in that prison. The Sixth West Virginia was broken up into squads and detachments for guard duty along the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad from Martinsburg to Wheeling and Parkersburg. The regiment was never assembled until its fifteen companies were ordered to Wheeling to be mustered out on June 15, 1865. The squad with which J. Allen served was captured while guarding the Oakland Railroad bridge, but the Federals were pursuing the party so closely that the prisoners were released after being paroled. The little party remained out of the service and in camp for some days and were then exchanged at Wheeling and returned to duty. Bushwhacking formed a part of the service of the regiment, and in this J. Allen had some part, covering Tucker, Hardy and neighboring counties.

The war over, J. Allen Bucklew returned home and entered the service of the Baltimore & Ohio Company at Oakland on the section as a track man. For twenty-four years he was watchman at Rodamers, guarding the tunnel and other interests there. He then became assistant foreman in the camp of the company and later resumed section work. He continued in the service until he retired as a pensioner of the company in 1905, after forty years of usefulness. He enjoys the privilege of an annual pass for himself and wife.

In 1906 Mr. Bucklew established his home in Terra Alta. He was elected constable in 1906, and served eight years in that office and as town police, after which he resigned to retire permanently.

At Oakland, Maryland, February 19, 1863, Mr. Bucklew married Louisa Chambers, daughter of David and Mary Ann (Bosley) Chambers. Mrs. Bucklew was born and reared near Oakland and died November 27, 1904, more than forty years after her marriage. A brief record of her children is: Mary A., who married Allen Shaffer, of Somerset, Pennsylvania, and died January 1, 1893; Ida May, wife of Sam DeWitt and a resident of Manheim, West Virginia; John D., an employe of the M. & K. branch of the Baltimore & Ohio Railway; Albert, also in the Baltimore & Ohio service at Keyser, married Kate Riley; Maude, wife of John Hoben, of Grafton; Margaret, who died in Baltimore as Mrs. Roland Shields; and Eugene, who died at Trinidad, Colorado, while a soldier in the Regular Army, on February 19, 1908.

J. Allen Bucklew in August, 1905, married Mrs. Pernelia Henline, widow of John Henline and daughter of Chris Guthrie and Almira (Smith) Guthrie. Mrs. Bucklew was born in Preston County, February 28, 1850.

J. Allen Bucklew is a republican, and he voted while in the army for Abraham Lincoln for president, but his first ballot was cast when he was only eighteen years of age and in favor of Western Virginia remaining in the Union. For more than fifty years he has been active in the work of the United Brethren Church. He joined the Grand Army of the Republic late in life and is a member of Preston Post at Terra Alta.

JOHN W. KELLEY, of Terra Alta, now retired, was one of the youngest soldiers recruited for service in the Union Army during the Civil war, and the half century or more since the war he has usefully employed in the work and business for which his training and qualifications best fitted him. For a number of years he was in public service in Preston County.

Mr. Kelley was born in Preston County, in Pleasant District, July 14, 1847. He is a great-grandson of a native of Ireland, who on coming to this country settled in Old Virginia. While there he enlisted with the volunteers in the War of 1812. In one battle he was struck by a bullet in the forehead, which passed backward, lodging just under the skin on the top of his head. The bullet remained plainly visible, but he declined to have it removed, saying that he wished to carry a British bullet to his grave, and he did. This old soldier ancestor came to Western Virginia after the war, establishing his home in the northern part of Preston County, then Monongalia County, and he was laid to rest on the soil of the farm where he settled.

Edwin Kelley, father of John W. Kelley, was born in Pleasant District and was a prosperous farmer there. He died in 1857, at the age of forty-six years. He married Ann Falkenstein, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Falkenstein, came from Germany soon after their marriage. Mrs. Ann Kelley survived her husband until 1901. Her children were Harrison, Smith, Lucy, James A., Dovie Jane, who became the wife of Sylvester Stockman, John W., Ellis, Margaret, who married Harrison Shaw, and Marshall. One other son, James A., was a Union soldier and lost his life when struck by a falling limb.

John W. Kelley was reared near Cranesville and had only the limited educational advantages of the country schools there. He never attended a free school. Of this period of his life he recalls one old log cabin schoolhouse with paper window lights, slab benches, an iron stove known as the ten plate stove, and there were no such modern facilities as maps, charts or globes, though a tough hickory stick stood in the corner close to the hand of the master, and many times he saw boys punished with this implement to the extent that the blood came. Mr. Kelley studied the old speller, the first reader, and some arithmetic, but no geography or grammar. The schoolmasters of that time could usually read, write and cipher, but were not more advanced than their best pupils.

John W. Kelley was only thirteen years of age when the Civil war broke out. He was unable to get into the service until September, 1864, when he became a volunteer recruit of Company F, Seventeenth West Virginia Infantry, joining at Wheeling and serving under Captain Morris Snyder and Colonel Davis. During the remaining months of the war his command was in the southwestern part of West Virginia scouting and skirmishing, and his regiment was at Bu Town, Braxton County, when the news of Lee's surrender arrived. A few days later the regiment moved on to Clarkburg and then to Wheeling to be discharged, July 9, 1865. Mr. Kelley received his discharge while in the hospital, as he was unable to work during the remainder of that summer. During the next eight or nine years he remained on the home farm, spending his winters in the coopership industry and the rest of the year in the fields. The first year of his married life he spent at Cranesville, and then moved to a farm in the Craborchard community, where he steadily followed agriculture for many years. Mr. Kelley left the farm to become superintendent of the County Home, serving eight years, and leaving that office in April, 1920. Since then he has been retired at Terra Alta.

In February, 1874, Mr. Kelley married Margaret Record, daughter of Lewis Record. She was born in Preston County and died in 1913. She was the mother of four children: V. Fletcher, of Terra Alta, married Lena Benson, and the children are Darwin, Dade and Carlet; B. Harrison, Masontown, married Jessie Carico, and their family consists of Mary, James, Helen and William; Dessie is the wife of George Hahn, of Morgantown; Howard, the youngest child died unmarried at the age of twenty-three.

In Preston County in July, 1917, John W. Kelley married Mary Conner, who was born in Preston County in 1867, one of the nine children, eight surviving, of Benjamin and Mary Ann (Feather) Conner.

Mr. Kelley grew up under conditions that naturally inclined him to support the republican party. As a soldier in the field he accepted the privilege of voting for Abraham Lincoln in 1864, though he was only past seventeen years of age, and, curiously enough, when the next general election came around in 1868 he was not old enough to be accorded the privilege of the ballot. He has been a staunch Methodist for over fifty years, and is one of the Official Board of the Terra Alta church. Mr. Kelley is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and with the D. O. K. K., and for his faithful membership of a quarter of a century wears a veteran's Jew of that order.

WILLIAM FORREST DAILEY, M. D. Since 1894 the talents and of Doctor Dailey have been subject to the call of duty in the medical profession. Except for brief periods all his practice has been in the Terra Alta community, and he has been a resident of Preston County since 1899.

Doctor Dailey was born in Forest County, Pennsylvania June 17, 1868. His father is the venerable James Dailey, a retired lumberman now living at Buckhannon, West Virginia, where for some years he served as justice of the peace. James Dailey was born in Jefferson County, New York, June, 1836, and when about twenty-four years of age entered the lumber business, which thereafter was his active vocation. He was a manufacturer of lumber in Pennsylvania and in West Virginia, his plants in the latter state being at Rowleburg and Newburg. During the Civil war he served with the New York Zouaves in the Fifth Army Corps and was a participant in thirteen battles. One of these was Gettysburg, where he was stationed at the post of danger on Little Round top. He was also taken prisoner, and for ten months endured the indescribable tortures of Andersonville. Aside from the honorable part he took in preserving the Union he has never been interested in the practical side of politics, merely voting the republican ticket. James Dailey married Elizabeth Williams, who was born and reared in Clarion County, Pennsylvania. They have been married now for more than fifty-five years. Their children are: Doctor Dailey, of Terra Alta; Mrs. Olive Hammond, who died in 1919 at Moundsville; James Thomas, an attorney at Kinwood; Mrs. Martha J. Francis, of Connellsville, Pennsylvania; and Jerome Dailey, present prosecuting attorney at Buckhannon.

William F. Dailey spent most of his boyhood in Jefferson County, Pennsylvania, where he attended public schools, the academy at Corsica, and after coming to West Virginia was a student in the Wesleyan University at Buckhannon. He graduated in medicine from the University of Louisville 1894, and at once located at Terra Alta. In 1896 he interrupted his practice to do post-graduate work in Johns Hopkins University at Baltimore. In 1898 he responded to the call of patriotic duty and entered the military service for the Spanish-American war. In June, 1898, he was appointed assistant surgeon in the Second West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, spent a brief time in camp at Charleston, then at Camp Meade at Middletown, Pennsylvania, and went into winter quarters at Greenville, South Carolina. While there orders were received to prepare for transport to the zone of hostilities, but this order was rescinded, and realizing that he would not get into active service Doctor Dailey then resigned. Before returning home he went to New York and spent three months in the Post-Graduate School of Medicine, from which he received a diploma. He undertook to establish himself in practice at Moundsville, but after a month came ill and this caused him to return to the mountain country and now for over twenty years he has steadily practiced in Terra Alta, enjoying a large private clientele and for twenty years has also been a Baltimore & Ohio Railway surgeon. He is a member of the Railway Surgeons' Association, the County, State, Tri-State and American Medical Associations.

L. S. Churuck

Other than professional interests have claimed a portion of his abilities. He is vice-president of the First National Bank of Terra Alta and a stockholder and director in the Lewisburg Wholesale Grocery Company. He cast his first residential vote as a republican, and has never deviated from that allegiance. In 1903 he was nominated without opposition as candidate for the House of Delegates, was elected, and in the session that began the following year helped elect Speaker Strickland and served on some important committees, including public health. He attended strictly to his duties in the Legislature, but declined to serve a second term. Doctor Dailey is a York Rite Mason, a member of the Lodge and Independent Order of Odd Fellows, a past chancellor of the Knights of Pythias in Terra Alta and is deeply interested in fraternal work. He was reared in the reberlyan faith.

In Preston County in October, 1900, he married Augusta Addie Adair, daughter of Joseph and Ella (Gill) Adair, of Ellicott City, Maryland. Mrs. Dailey was born in the old Adair house in Terra Alta in 1878 and was educated in the public schools and county normals. Doctor and Mrs. Dailey had two children: their daughter, Eleanor Elizabeth, was born April 25, 1910, and died May 2, 1916. Their surviving son, William Lorenz Adair, born April 15, 1903, is now a student in the University of West Virginia at Morgantown.

ENOCH S. GIBSON, whose home since 1912 has been in the vicinity of Webster in the Court House district of Taylor County, is a native of West Virginia, comes of an old and substantial family, and has given the sturdy efforts of his manhood to the tasks and responsibilities of farming and citizenship.

His grandfather was Smith Gibson, who came from old Virginia in company with his mother and his brother Enoch, the latter locating near Buckhannon. Smith Gibson established his home in Lewis County, married there Malinda Hall, and they lived out their lives on a farm not far from Weston and were buried on the home place. A brief record of their children is: Lucy, who married Fortunatus White and lived in Lewis County; William, mentioned below; Joseph J., who was in Minnesota before the Civil war, and afterward returned to West Virginia and made his permanent home at Freemansburg; Enoch S., who when a young man went to California, and died in Round Valley, that state; Addie, who married Abram Bond, and died near Lost Creek, Harrison County; Martha, who died in Lewis County, wife of George Gaston; Mary, who married Captain Van Lightburn and finished her life in Arkansas; and Charles K., who resided in Lewis County.

William Gibson, father of Enoch S., was born in Lewis County in 1829, and had the limited education available to the average youth of that time. He was reared on a farm and devoted his adult life to agricultural interests. He finally removed to California, and died in Round Valley, Mendocino County, in 1913. His wife, who died in 1878, was Elvira Lawrence, her father, Alexander Lawrence, having moved from Eastern Virginia. William Gibson and wife had the following children: Florence, whose first husband was Henry Sherwood, and she is now the widow of William Sadler and lives at Belpre, Ohio; Enoch S.; Locella, who married William C. Sherwood, of Doddridge County; Edwin, of Oakland, California; and Martha A., a resident of Weston and wife of William Kemper.

Enoch S. Gibson was born in Harrison County March 22, 1854, but spent most of his early years in Lewis and Doddridge counties. He represents a family of farmers, people who in every generation have done their share in the improvement of the country and the production of agricultural wealth, and have seldom permitted themselves to be known as candidates for political office, and few of them became soldiers. Three of Mr. Gibson's maternal uncles were in the Civil war, Union soldiers, George L., William and John Lawrence, the first going out with an Ohio regiment, while the other two went to the army from West Virginia.

Enoch S. Gibson secured a country school education, and as a youth divided his time between the farm and public works. After his marriage he located on a farm in Doddridge County, and in 1912 moved to his present home near Webster in Taylor County. Outside the work that has constituted his main business in life, he has served as a trustee of schools and has been active in church. He is a republican in national and state politics, but supports the best man in local elections.

In Harrison County November 8, 1882, Mr. Gibson married Miss Alice Davisson, who was born in that county in August, 1858, daughter of William and Eliza (Allman) Davisson, the former a native of Harrison County, where he spent his life as a farmer. The Davisson children were: George; Sarah, who married Marion Stonaker; Mary, Mrs. John McWhorter; Edgar; Mrs. Samantha Edmonds; Parker; Reason; Catherine, who married Alexander Stewart; and Mrs. Alice Gibson.

Wayne E., the oldest of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Gibson, was liberally educated in Salem College, the Wesleyan College at Buckhannon and in summer normals, has devoted seven years to highly successful work as a teacher in Taylor County, and during vacations has written insurance and taken part in the labors of the home farm. The second child, Edwin G., is connected with the Hop Gas Company at Salem, West Virginia, and is the father of two children, Ruby and Paul. Miss Ila K., a teacher in Taylor County, was educated in Wesleyan College at Buckhannon and completed a course in the Fairmont State Normal School in 1922. Gretta, wife of B. Harrison Wolverton, of Doddridge County, is the mother of Catherine, John, Mary, Harold and Eugene. Mrs. Delpha Curran, at home with her parents, has a son, James. Ralph is a miner in Taylor County. Osie, the youngest, graduated in 1922 from the Lost Creek High School.

LAWRENCE S. SCHWENCK. Twenty years a member of the West Virginia bar, Mr. Schwenck has kept his interests and work strictly defined by his profession, without important diversions or excursions into politics, and he ranks as one of the leaders of the Marion County bar and also the bar of the state.

Mr. Schwenck, whose home is at Mannington, was born April 7, 1877, at Bucyrus, Crawford County, Ohio. His father, Samuel S. Schwenck, was born in the same county, November 22, 1851, son of Hieronimus Schwenck, who came to the United States at the age of seventeen with his parents who located in Crawford County, Ohio. Samuel S. Schwenck in 1886 removed to St. Mary's, Auglaize County, Ohio, where he is still living. He married Lovina Fralic, who was born in Crawford County, December 6, 1857, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Hardin) Fralic, the former of German ancestry and the latter of Scotch-Irish ancestry.

Lawrence S. Schwenck acquired his early education in the common schools near St. Marys, also in the high school of that city, and was a teacher in Auglaize County until he entered the Ohio Northern University at Ada where he was graduated A. B. with the class of 1899. Subsequently for the credit his career had reflected upon the university he was given the Master of Arts degree in 1905. On leaving college Mr. Schwenck taught school for three years in Pennsylvania. In 1902 he entered the law department of West Virginia University, and received credit for two years work. While still a student he was admitted to the bar of West Virginia in 1903. In that year he began practice at Mannington, and his success has earned him a standing among the ablest lawyers of the county. As noted above he has kept studiously aloof from the allurements of politics. He is a democrat, and on one occasion in 1908 without his consent and practically without his knowledge until the day following the convention, he was nominated as democratic candidate for the state senate, his successful opponent being the present Circuit Judge, Winfield S. Meredith. Mr. Schwenck was appointed and since 1915 has served as Divorce Commissioner of the Circuit Court of Marion County, and is the only commissioner for those special duties Marion County has had. Mr. Schwenck has an extensive private practice, involving his appearance in all the courts of West Virginia and in the Federal Courts as well.

He is a member of the County, State and American Bar associations, is a charter member and president of the Mannington Kiwanis Club, and is a prominent layman in the Methodist Church. From 1905 to 1911 he was assistant superintendent and since 1911 has been superintendent of the Methodist Sunday School at Mannington.

August 5, 1903, Mr. Schwenck married Miss Lella Sloan, daughter of Francis M. and Phoebe (Billheimer) Sloan of Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania. Her father for many years was a prominent Pennsylvania Railway official. In the maternal line Mrs. Schwenck is a descendant of Capt. Philip Null, an officer of the Pennsylvania line in the Revolutionary war. Mrs. Schwenck is a member of West Augusta Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Schwenck is a graduate of the Pennsylvania State Normal School at California, Pennsylvania.

MARCELLUS N. TAYLOR. The geographical limits in which Marcellus N. Taylor has spent his life are those of Portland District in Preston County. Here he has found his duties, has discharged his responsibilities, and has earned an honored place in the citizenship.

He was born about six miles west of the little city of Terra Alta May 10, 1870. His grandfather, William Taylor, married Sarah Whetsell, of the same Whetsells that occupied and made famous the Whetsell settlement of Preston County. One of their large family of children was William W. Taylor, who was born in Portland District May 14, 1834, and died there in 1906. His active years were devoted to the practical side of farming and an intelligent use of his opportunities as a citizen and voter. He married Julia Garner, who was born in the Albright locality of Preston County in 1847, daughter of William R. Garner, a farmer. William W. Taylor and wife had three children: Martha, wife of Buckner Bucklew; Mary J., wife of Grant Whitehair, of Preston County; and Marcellus N.

Marcellus N. Taylor grew up at the old homestead and remained there until long past his majority. He had a rural school education, and farming was the vocation to which he was trained and the only one he followed until he came to Terra Alta. Here for several years he was an active factor in the woolen mills, both in its practical operation and as a stockholder and treasurer of the company. He was associated with that industry until about a year before the plant burned. For five years following he was in the retail meat business, and about that time came his first election to the post of justice of the peace of the district. For a time he shared the duties of the office with work at the carpenter's trade, but for the past two years has resumed his business as a meat dealer. Mr. Taylor was elected justice of the peace of Portland District in 1914 to succeed S. N. Taylor. Two years later he was re-elected, and he is now serving in his third term. He had handled with firmness and good judgment a large volume of business in his court, most of it arising from the enforcement of the prohibition law. For several terms Mr. Taylor was a member of the Terra Alta Town Council, finally declining another term of that duty. While on the council the problem of paving the town was acted upon and also a water system installed by the company to which a franchise was granted. Mr. Taylor served as overseer the poor for Portland District ten years, and gave careful attention to those needing public care and authorized financial allowances to such persons.

Mr. Taylor may be said to have been born a republican and he cast his first presidential vote for Harrison in 1896 and has never missed voting at a presidential election. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias.

In Preston County March 8, 1894, he married Miss Lizz Whitehair, daughter of Edmond and Alcinda (Freeland) Whitehair. Her father is in the marble business at Phillips West Virginia, as manager of the Tygart Valley Marble Company. He responded to the last call for troops to defend the Union in the Civil war, going in when very young. He and his first wife had three children: Walter, who was killed in an explosion a number of years ago at North Branch while in the railroad service; Mrs. Taylor; and Sammie. By his second wife, Susan Sanders, Edmond Whitehair has a daughter, Mrs. Missouri Smith.

Mrs. Taylor was educated in the public schools and was married at the age of twenty-one. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have three children, William Clarence, Charles Ray and Franklin Darrell. Charles is a clerk in the Terra Alta hardware store. William Clarence, who lives at Oakland Maryland, married Ruth De Berry, and their children are Mildred, Wayne, Clyde, Lawrence, Howard and Lillian.

CHARLES T. KELLY, postmaster of Terra Alta, has the broad capability of practical business knowledge and thorough training in business affairs. He is a native son of Preston County, and is undoubtedly one of the county's best known citizens.

He was born at Valley Point July 25, 1873, son of Smith E. and Mary E. (Browning) Kelly, also natives of the same county. His maternal grandfather, James Browning, was grandfather of ex-senator J. D. Browning, elsewhere mentioned in this publication. The paternal grandfather of the postmaster was Edward Kelly, who was born in the Pim Swamp settlement of Preston County and spent his life in the vicinity of Cranesville, where he was buried. He married Miss Falkenstein. Their children were: Ellis and John W., both of Terra Alta; Smith E.; Jane, wife of Buc Stockman and a resident of Terra Alta; and Margaret, wife of S. H. Shaw, of Terra Alta.

Smith E. Kelly was born April 3, 1839, and spent all his active career as a farmer, moving to Terra Alta just a few months before his death, which occurred in 1894. He enlisted in the Union Army at the time of the Civil war, but could not meet the physical qualifications of a soldier and was discharged. He took a genuine interest in the welfare of his community, was a member of the Official Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, superintendent of the Sunday School, was affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and always an enthusiastic republican. His widow, who was born in November, 1840, is now in her eighty-second year. Their children were: James Albin, of Grafton; Stephen Fuller, of Terra Alta; Edward Howard, of Buckhannon; Frank, who married Miss Laura Cuppet and died as a young man at Bruceton Mills; Charles Thatcher; Grace, wife of John Sellers of Oakland, Maryland; Lettie, Mrs. S. H. Jackson, of Oakland; and Loyce, wife of M. O. Miller, of Terra Alta.

Charles T. Kelly acquired a common school education, and he reached manhood with a practical knowledge that did not reach beyond his experience as a farm boy. On leaving the farm and coming to Terra Alta he entered the service of the firm of Offutt & Lakin, leading merchants of the village. He was with them sixteen years, and had been promoted to the responsibilities of buyer and manager when he resigned. He resigned to become farm superintendent and superintendent of construction of the new buildings of the Tuberculosis Sanitarium of the State at Terra Alta. This service required three years of his time, and at the end he returned to the Offutt-Lakin Company and was in that employment four years more. He then accepted a second call to the state government, as storekeeper under the State Board of Control. He had supervision of all the provisions of every institution in the state, and this was an office requiring a great deal of travel. After five months he resigned and accepted the appointment of postmaster of Terra Alta, which was made September 20, 1921. He succeeded Mrs. B. F. Scott, who had been acting postmistress. Mr. Kelly is a member of the company that owns and publishes the Preston Republican, the only paper of Terra Alta, republican in politics and of weekly issue.

In politics he needed no coaching from his father to attract him to become an enthusiastic supporter of the republican party and principles. He cast his first presidential vote for William McKinley, and in every national election since then has continued to give his support to the republican candidate. He has been county committeeman of his party, and has exerted himself to see that the party program was properly supported. He was one of the local citizens who urged the election of Terra Alta as the site for the State Tuberculosis sanitarium, and was delegated as a representative to accompany and chaperon the State Board, who came to inspect his property. When the location was finally fixed he handled the matter of the petition to make up the deficiency of twenty-five hundred dollars in the purchase price agreed upon between the site owner and the commission, due to the fact that the owner raised his price to that extent after the location had been made. This money was immediately pledged and preparations began for the construction of the first building. Mr. Kelly at different times was a member of the Town Council, and was on the board when bids were let for street paving and the paving work begun. He was reared a Methodist, and has been closely associated with the work of that church since boyhood. Fraternally he is a Mason, Odd Fellow and Knight of Pythias, has filled the chairs in the Masonic and Odd Fellows Lodges and Mrs. Kelly is a member of the Eastern Star.

December 10, 1901, he married Miss Nina Fry, a native of Terra Alta and daughter of Dr. Robert R. and Catherine (Sturges) Fry. Her father was long prominent as a practicing member of the medical fraternity at Terra Alta, where he died in 1916, at the age of seventy-two. He is survived by his widow and his two children, Mrs. Kelly and Laverna, wife of G. M. Ridenour of Terra Alta. Mrs. Kelly completed her education in Washington City. Since her marriage she has been deeply interested in all the business and civic affairs in which her husband has taken part. She is head of the local missionary work of the Methodist Church, and both of them were loyal workers at the time of the war, assisting in the various drives, while Mrs. Kelly did much knitting and other work for the local Red Cross Chapter. She is a member of the Eastern Star.

CHESTER L. GOLDSMITH, M. D. took up his work as a physician and surgeon in West Virginia ten years ago, and all of his practice has been done in Preston County.

Doctor Goldsmith was born at Everett, Massachusetts, December 4, 1880, and he inherits the sturdy Americanism of ancestors that located in Massachusetts at the time of the Mayflower. His parents, Thomas and Eva (Mason) Goldsmith, both represented old family lines in that state. His father was a seafaring man and spent his last years at Worcester.

Chester L. Goldsmith attended the public schools of Massachusetts, the Massachusetts School of Pharmacy, did preparatory work for medical college in Milton Academy, and in 1911 graduated from the old Maryland Medical College, the second last class before amalgamation with the Baltimore Medical School. Since then he has taken considerable post-graduate work. Doctor Goldsmith opened his net office as a physician at Hazelton in Preston County, and three years later removed to Terra Alta. He is a member of the County, State and American Medical Associations.

Doctor Goldsmith married in Massachusetts Miss Ethel Currier, whose ancestors also run back to the days of the Mayflower, she being the seventh descendant of John and Priscilla Alden. Doctor and Mrs. Goldsmith are Methodists and Mrs. Goldsmith is much interested in church work at Terra Alta. Doctor Goldsmith is a Scottish Rite Mason and a noble of Osiris Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.

CHARLES F. DODGE, of Terra Alta, has had a busy and effective career in Preston County, covering forty years or more as teacher, farmer, business man and, latterly, in the service of Uncle Sam at the Terra Alta Post Office.

The Dodge family was established in Portland District of Preston County about 1846 by his grandfather, Amos Dodge. He was probably born in New York State and as a young married man left Block Island, New York, and moved out to Ohio overland. He remained in the Ohio Western Reserve for a number of years, until forced out by malarial conditions there, and with team and wagon returned East and located permanently in Preston County, West Virginia. He lived until death in Portland District and resumed farming as his vocation. His old homestead, on which he and his wife and other members of the family are buried, is now the property of T. B. Taylor. Amos Dodge married Rachel De Long. Their children were: Marvin, a Union soldier, who died in Preston County; Austin; William; Hiram; Allen; Eliza, who became the wife of James Childs; and Jane, who married John Lewis. All these children settled about their parents and all left descendants there. Austin was another soldier in the Union Army. Austin and William became republicans, while Hiram and Allen retained the family allegiance with the democratic party.

Hiram Dodge, father of Charles F. Dodge, was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, in 1830, and was about ten years of age when the family settled in Preston County. Though his early advantages were confined to the subscription schools, he subsequently taught school, though his main vocation throughout his years was farming. He died at the homestead near old Daugherty. His wife was a Dunkard, and he joined with her in that religious faith and became a factor in the progressive wing of the church. Her maiden name was Sevilla Ridenour. Her father, John Ridenour, came to Preston County from Germany and always conducted his affairs in the German language, and when he died it was necessary to secure someone familiar with the German tongue to settle up his estate. Sevilla Dodge died July 23, 1918, when about eighty-four years of age. The children of this old couple were: Doctor W. B., of Stuarts Draft, Virginia; John A., a farmer near Terra Alta; Mary A., wife of George W. Wiles, of Preston County; Eliza E., who married T. P. Albright, of Cumberland, Maryland; Charles Franklin, whose record follows; Emma J., wife of W. J. Rader, of Stuarts Draft, Virginia; Jennie, who married D. A. King, of Accident, Maryland, and died at Eglen in Preston County; M. Howard, an implement dealer at Terra Alta, who married Emma Shaw, daughter of A. Staley Shaw; and Scott T., who lives in California.

Charles Franklin Dodge was born at old Daugherty in Preston County March 8, 1863, and he kept his home and interests in that community until recent years. He attended the public schools of the district, took a normal course and at the age of seventeen taught his first term. Thereafter teaching was his regular vocation every winter for twenty years. It supplemented his efforts as a farmer, and when he finally gave up the farm and the schoolroom he removed to Terra Alta and for three years was in the implement business. He then entered the Government service as a mail carrier, and when the new postmaster took charge in 1921 he was assigned to clerical duties in the office.

Mr. Dodge for a number of years owned the Dunnington Hotel at Terra Alta, which he improved and enlarged, finally disposing of it. He still owns his farm, and for several years it has been worked by his son, Bruce A. Dodge. Mr. Dodge is a democrat, and some years ago he made a most creditable race as a candidate for the House of Delegates, running far ahead of his ticket. He is a Methodist, and formerly was a trustee and member of the Building Committee of the Cedar Valley Church. He is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias.

In Portland District May 1, 1890, Mr. Dodge married Miss Clara A. Beatty, daughter of George R. and Sarah (Trowbridge) Beatty, farmers in that locality and now deceased. Mrs. Dodge has a sister, Martha S., wife of Sheridan A. Chidester. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Dodge. Their only son, Bruce A., is a prosperous young farmer at the home place, married Reba Teets, and they have two children, Clarence and Marie. Miss Bessie is still in the home circle. Georgie E. is the wife of L. S. Wilson, of Kingwood, and their children are Mervyn, Argyle Deane, Sara Etta, Martha and Marjorie.

D. E. SHILDTs, who is giving most efficient executive service as captain at the West Virginia Penitentiary, at Moundsville, Marshall County, was born in Harrison County, Ohio, October 4, 1880, a son of David and Amanda (Barnes) Shildts. He was reared and educated in the Old Buckeye State and came to West Virginia in 1903, as an electrician in the employ of the Bell Telephone Company, his service with the company here continuing four years, at Wheeling and Moundsville. In 1907 he engaged in the feed and flour business at Moundsville, with a well equipped mill, and he successfully continued this enterprise ten years, at the expiration of which he sold the business, just prior to entering his present official post at the penitentiary. Since 1920 he has been the owner of a meat market on Jefferson Avenue, the same being in charge of a responsible employee. He is also a director of the City & County Bank at Moundsville.

In October, 1918, backed by strong influence, he was appointed captain at the state penitentiary, at the time when the present warden, J. Z. Terrell, began his administration at the institution. Captain Shildts has shown marked ability in directing the service of the forty-five guards on duty at the prison and is an efficient and valued official. He is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

At Moundsville was solemnized the marriage of Captain Shildts to Miss Lillie Gorby whose father, Samuel S. Gorby, is now living retired, at Moundsville. He was formerly associated with Captain Shildts in the flour and feed business at Moundsville. Captain and Mrs. Shildts have no children. Mr. Shildts is interested in oil and coal development and production in West Virginia.

THOMAS JEFFERSON WYSONG is a member of a family that has taken an active part in the affairs of the southern part of the state for several generations. His home has been in Logan County for over two decades, and the greater part of that time has been devoted to official service. He is the present clerk of the County Court.

Mr. Wysong was born at Hamlin, county seat of Lincoln County, West Virginia, June 17, 1873, son of John and Rebecca (Spurlock) Wysong. Both the Wysong and Spurlock families were pioneers of Lincoln County, going there from old Virginia. The grandfather of Thomas J. Wysong was Creed Wysong, a prosperous farmer. John Wysong and wife spent their lives in Lincoln County, where he died in 1912, at the age of seventy-three, and she in 1904, aged fifty-three. John Wysong was a merchant at Hamlin. He was a Confederate soldier in the Civil war, participating in many battles, and was wounded at the battle of Spotsylvania Court House, where his brother Calvin, a member of the same regiment, was killed. John Wysong for four years was deputy sheriff of Lincoln County and also justice of the peace, and was a loyal democrat. He and his wife had five children, and the four now living are: Albert, who received an appointment in the Government service at Washington during Cleveland's administration and has lived at the capital ever since; he is now connected with the Highland Baggage and Express Company; Thomas J.; Ward, who owns a farm near Hamlin; and Emma, wife of Russell Duke, of Huntington.

Thomas J. Wysong acquired his early education at Hamlin, and at the age of sixteen was given a second grade certificate, the highest possible certificate that could be granted to a person of his age. However, he taught only one term of school, that school being on the Guyan River, and shortly afterward he was appointed deputy county clerk of Lincoln County under F. M. Johnson, and acted in that capacity for six years. At the beginning of the Spanish-American war he enlisted in the First West Virginia Volunteers as a member of the regimental band. He was trained for service at Columbia, Georgia, at Chickamauga and at Knoxville, Tennessee. After leaving the army he was bookkeeper for the firms of Sloane and Midkiff on Guyan River, Coleman and Chambers, and Crane and Company.

In the meantime, in 1900, he removed to Logan County and in 1908 became deputy county assessor under Don Chafin. Later he was deputy sheriff in charge of the book at the office during the term of Sheriff J. W. Chambers and held a similar position under Sheriff Chafin from 1911 to 1916, and under Sheriff F. P. Hurst from 1916 to 1920. In the latter year he was elected county clerk, and is now in his fifteenth consecutive year of service in the Court House at Logan.

Mr. Wysong married in 1906 Harriet Dingess, daughter of Henderson Dingess, and a native of Logan County. Their five children are named Thomas Earl, Sally, John, James and Emma. Mr. Wysong is a past grand of Island Lodge No. 160, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

JACOB DAVID SMITH, prosecuting attorney of Lincoln County, is one of the ablest lawyers practicing at the bar of Hamlin, and a man whose fearlessness and resourcefulness have won him prestige and resulted in the conviction of a number of criminals and the enforcement of law and order in a marked degree. He was born in Lawrence County, Ohio, April 28, 1870, a son of Jacob and Barbara Jane (Lewis) Smith, natives of Ohio and Virginia, respectively. The ancestors of Mr. Smith are traced back in the annals of Ohio, Pennsylvania and Virginia, and a distinguished member on his mother's side was the historian Lewis. Jacob Smith was a farmer, an earnest Christian and active in the work of the Baptist Church.

Prosecutor Smith's educational training was commenced in the common schools of Ohio and West Virginia, and continued later on in the summer normal school held at Hamlin, where he fitted himself for teaching. For eighteen years he was an educator, during which period he studied law. He completed his legal studies in the State University at Morgantown in 1900, and passed his examinations before the state board and was licensed to practice law. In addition to teaching and studying law he also served as deputy county clerk of Lincoln County during the year 1905, and he had full charge of the office. In 1908 he was appointed assistant prosecuting attorney, serving as such until 1912. In the fall of that year he was the candidate for prosecuting attorney, but was defeated, and entered upon a general practice of his profession. In 1920 he was again a candidate, and was elected prosecuting attorney by a very large majority. From 1915 to 1919 he was a clerk in the State Legislature, attending every session, and had the honor of being the clerk in charge of the enrollment of every bill passed, and took them to the governor for his signature.

On December 25, 1904, Mr. Smith married at East Bank, Kanawha County, West Virginia, Miss Rose Alexander, a teacher in the school of that county, and a daughter of Houston and Sarah (Mitchell) Alexander, natives of West Virginia and Ohio, respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Smith became the parents of the following children: Virginia May, Houston A., Rose Marie and Jacob David, Jr. Mr. Smith is a sincere member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a Scottish-Rite Mason, and belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America.

Lincoln County has the reputation of being the cleanest county in West Virginia, and this admirable state of affairs has been brought about by the aggressiveness and fearlessness of Mr. Smith and the sheriff, Dan Vias, both of whom are recognized to be the best men in their several offices this region has ever had. Mr. Smith is one of the most conscientious of men in his profession, and stands very high with the public generally, and particularly with the best element. He is unwavering in his determination to make all respect the law and live up to the requirements of decent people.

ARTHUR W. McLEAN is one of the active factors in the commercial development of Lincoln County, and a man whose efforts, always successful, have not only given him a fortune and high standing, but have also brought about many desirable changes in the several localities in which he has labored, and brought into affluence more than one area who has been associated with him. It is such men who are the real leaders, for through them come the advances in business life which mark the difference between mere existence and a proper manner of living. At present Mr. McLean is devoting much of his time and attention to the management of the West Hamlin Mercantile Company and the Lincoln Feed & Produce Company, of which he is one of the owners.

Born at Wilkesboro, North Carolina, November 12, 1866, Arthur W. McLean is a son of Isaac and Harriet (Perkins) McLean, both of whom were born in North Carolina. Isaac McLean was a farmer and took a very active part in church and school work, and served for years as a trustee of his school district. The paternal great-grandfather was Dunsen McLean, and he and his son, David McLean, the grandfather of Arthur W. McLean, were very early settlers of Wilkes County, North Carolina, and closely connected with much of its pioneer history.

Growing up in his native city, Mr. McLean attended its public schools and a private school conducted by Rev. R. W. Barber, which institution, for boys only, was located two miles outside of Wilkesboro. It was a very high-class school, and Mr. McLean remained a student of it until he was eighteen years of age. At that time he went just across the state line into Virginia and worked in a saw-mill, his duties being firing the engine that furnished the power, and he remained on this job for six months, and then went to Cranberry, North Carolina, to run the steam drill in the iron mine. Leaving the mine after a year, he obtained employment on the construction of a tunnel at Alban, near Birmingham, Alabama. This tunnel begins near Leeds, and he worked on it for nine months, but then left for Point Pleasant, West Virginia, to help build the Baltimore & Ohio bridge across the Kanawha River. After four months on this construction job he began steamboning on the Kanawha River, towing coal barges, and this occupied him for two years. He then began railroading, and for eight years was a brakeman for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. During all of this time Mr. McLean was gaining an experience of men and affairs which was to be very valuable to him later on in life, but it was not until he entered the mercantile field that he found the work for which he was eminently fitted by nature and inclination. It was upon leaving the Chesapeake & Ohio that he formed connections with Charles Love, of Barboursville, West Virginia, which he maintained for fourteen months, in that time acquiring a knowledge of merchandise that enabled him to take a position as traveling salesman for Blake, Bell & Company of Huntington, West Virginia, and he remained with this concern for a year, leaving them to occupy a similar position with the Newberry Clay Shoe Company. After three years on the road as this company's representative he went into the hotel business at Logan, West Virginia, where he opened and placed upon a paying foundation the popular Burskirk Hotel, but subsequently sold it. In the meanwhile he organized the Logan Laundry and Bottling Works, of which he was president for eighteen months, and retained his interest in it for some time after he sold his hotel, but eventually he disposed of it also. In 1907 he came to West Hamlin and organized the West Hamlin Mercantile Company, which has been developed into the leading establishment of its kind in Lincoln County.

In 1893 Mr. McLean married at Barboursville, West Virginia, Miss Nellie Blake, and they had three children: Birdie, Mary and Virginia. Mrs. McLean died in 1911. In 1917 Mr. McLean married Mrs. Nettie Davis, of Barboursville, and she died in 1919, of influenza. In November, 1920, Mr. McLean married Miss Matilda Craig, of Yates, West Virginia, a daughter of Joseph and Lucy Craig. For a number of years Mr. McLean has been a zealous member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He belongs to the Junior Order of American Mechanics. His interest in West Hamlin is a strong one, and he has displayed his faith in the future of his home by supporting its best development in every way. As a high-class merchant he is giving his fellow citizens a service, and placing within their reach timely stocks of the best goods at prices uniformly as low as is consistent with market quotations. While he has not care to go into politics, he gives a hearty support to those measures and candidates he believes best suited to the needs of the community, and in every way proves his good citizenship.

JAMES ALBERT HARLESS, assessor of Lincoln County, is one of the reliable and public-spirited citizens whose capabilities are finding adequate expression in the discharge of the onerous duties of his present office. His popularity is remarkable, and is evidenced by the fact that he was elected to his office on the republican ticket in a democratic stronghold. For some years he was connected with the business life of Hubball. He is known all over the country, and no one man enjoys more of the public's confidence than he.

A native son of Lincoln County, Mr. Harless was born at Branchland, November 15, 1883, and has always continued loyal to this region. His ancestors were of good, old Virginian stock, of Scotch origin, and members of the family served in the American Revolution. He is a son of J. M. and Emma (Eplin) Harless, both natives of West Virginia, born in Lincoln County. The mother died when James Albert Harless was two years old, but the father survives and is today one of the leading men of Lincoln County. He is still engaged in mercantile business at Branchland. Although too young himself to participate in the great war between the two sections of the country, J. M. Harless had an elder brother in the service under Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson, the sympathies of the Harless family being with the Confederacy.

The educational training of James Albert Harless was limited to that afforded by the common schools of his native county, and after completing his attendance at them he never had any further instruction, except that gained in the great school of experience, of which he still considers himself a student. Going into the mercantile field, he and his brother for eight years conducted a store at Branchland, and then Mr. Harless, selling, was left free for other operations. He went to Hubball and established himself in a similar business, but at the termination of two years sold his store to A. J. Harland so as to give his time and attention to his campaign for the office of county assessor. Elected to this office in November, 1920, he assumed the duties of his office in January, 1921, and is making a wonderful record for thoroughness and fair dealing.

In 1913 Mr. Harless married at Trenton, Ohio, Miss Katie Rew. Her father is conducting extensive timber operations in the South. Mr. and Mrs. Harless have one daughter, Oplemagine. Mr. Harless is a Baptist, and his wife belongs to the Christian Church. He belongs to the Knights of Pythias, in which he is a dokie, the highest rank in that order, and is also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Fraternal Order of Eagles and the Modern Woodmen of America, and is deservedly popular in all of these organizations. Mr. Harless' career affords proof of the statement so often made that the best officials are those who have had a successful business experience. It stands to reason that one who can manage his own affairs profitably and efficiently will give to the taxpayers an equally judicious conduct of public business, and the people of Lincoln County feel satisfied in their choice of James Albert Harless to regulate matters in the office of county assessor, for they not only have confidence in his ability, but also in his integrity and realize that he is a man who will show no favors, but make his levies impartially, giving exact justice to all, no matter what influence may be brought to bear upon him.

In April, 1922, Mr. Harless established a general mercantile business at Branchland, Lincoln County, West Virginia, where he now resides.

GEORGE WASHINGTON NELSON. The "good roads" movement is gaining impetus with each day and is here to stay. The increase in the use of automobiles has been a potent factor in awakening the people all over the country to the necessity and importance of improving the roads, and there is scarcely a community which has not felt the effects of this urge. One of the first requisites for permanent improvement is the securing of the services of an expert engineer, and Lincoln County has taken a wise step in the right direction in selecting for this important work George Washington Nelson, a very substantial man who thoroughly understands his calling, and who as county engineer in charge of the roads of this region is doing a remarkable work.

George Washington Nelson was born at Chatham, Virginia, July 29, 1875, a son of George W. and Mary (Scolley) Nelson, natives of Virginia and Jefferson County, West Virginia, the former coming of English origin and the latter being of Scotch descent. Both families were established in Virginia during its Colonial epoch, and their members were connected with its development. When war was declared between the North and the South George W. Nelson cast his lot with the Confederacy, and while serving as a captain in the Hanover Artillery had the misfortune to be captured by the Union forces and confined at Fort Pulaski and later at Johnston Island and Fort Delaware until the close of the war. A man of high educational attainments, he was a professor in the Episcopal School at Alexandria, Virginia, later becoming a sub-professor in the theological seminary at Alexandria, and, finally entering the ministry, became a rector of the Episcopal Church at Warrenton, Virginia, where he remained for twenty-three years, or until his death.

George Washington Nelson attended the public schools of Virginia, the Cleveland High School at Markham, Virginia, the Military Academy at Warrenton, Virginia, and then for two years was a student at the Virginia Polytechnic School, which he left in 1895. He then went on a United States coast and geostatic survey for three years, leaving this in 1898 to enlist for service during the Spanish-American war. Following his honorable discharge from the army Mr. Nelson was on a preliminary survey and location for the Southern Railroad for two years, on 160 miles of road between Bergin and Jellico, Kentucky. He then went as a student with the Westinghouse Company in the shops to learn the electrical end of engineering, and was with this corporation from 1901 to 1903. Following his completion of this course Mr. Nelson was for a year assistant engineer on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, leaving it to become locating engineer for the Raleigh & Western Railroad. For a year he was draftsman for the Seaboard Air Line Railroad, and for another year was transit man for the Southern Railroad. The subsequent year he was with the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic Railroad as assistant engineer on construction. For another year he was with the Cape Fear Lumber Company's railroad as locating engineer. From 1909 to 1912 he was engineer for the Blue Creek Coal & Land Company, the Elk River Coal & Lumber Company and the New River Colliery Company; from 1913 to 1914 he was with the Boone County Coal Corporation; from 1914 to 1916 he was a member of the firm of Ewing & Nelson, engineers, but in the latter year went with the White Ash Coal Company at Alco, West Virginia, as superintendent for a year, leaving it in 1917 to become engineer and superintendent of construction for the C. Crane Company. During the two years he was with this concern he built four miles of railroad and located twenty-two miles for the road. In 1919 he came to Lincoln County as assistant engineer on the construction of roads in the county, and held that position for a year, and then was engaged in locating the road between Mullens and Amegan, Wyoming County. In February, 1921, he was made county engineer of Lincoln County, and is still holding that office. He is unmarried. Mr. Nelson has been a communicant of the Episcopal Church from his youth. Fraternally he belongs to the Knights of Pythias and the American Association of Engineers. A quiet, hard-working man, Mr. Nelson goes about his work with characteristic efficiency, always knowing just what he wants to accomplish and the best way to do it. His record for accomplishment in his calling is unblemished, and under his capable supervision the roads of Lincoln County will soon be placed in excellent condition.

REV. WILLIAM DELBERT REED has not only gained prestige as one of the able and honored clergymen of the Methodist Episcopal Church, but has shown also much constructive power in connection with practical business affairs. He is actively identified with the coal industry as an operator and has also been successful as a dealer in real estate. He is now associate pastor of the Diamond Street Methodist Episcopal Church in the City of Fairmont, Marion County.

Mr. Reed is a native of West Virginia and is a representative of two of the old and honored families of the state. His paternal grandfather, Benjamin Reed, was born in Barbour County, West Virginia, as the state is now constituted, and was of English parentage, his parents having been very early settlers in that county. Ananias Cast maternal grandfather of the subject of this review, was born in what is now Upshur County, West Virginia, his parents, of Irish lineage, having become pioneers of the county.

Levi D. Reed, father of him whose name initiates this sketch, was born in Barbour County in 1853, and his death occurred in 1916. He was for many years numbered among the successful exponents of farm enterprise in Harrison County, and since his death his widow has continued to reside on the old home farm near Janelew, that county. She was born in Upshur County.

On the farm of his father near Janelew, Harrison County, William Delbert Reed was born, May 7, 1876. After having profited fully by the advantages of the public schools he was for three years a student in the West Virginia Wesleyan College at Buckhannon. In 1897 he was ordained a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he has since continued an honored member of its West Virginia Conference. He held pastoral charges in turn at Moundsville, Grafton and Fairmont, and for six years he was president of the Oakland District of the West Virginia Conference. In 1915 he was pastor of the Diamond Street Methodist Church at Fairmont, and he is today an associate pastor of this church, with his zeal in all departments of church work shown in effective service and gracious stewardship. In 1912 he was a delegate to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Minneapolis, Minnesota, and in 1916 he was again a delegate, the conference being held on that occasion at Saratoga Springs, New York. In 1921 he was a member of the Ecumenical Conference of Methodism, held in the City of London, England.

In 1916 Mr. Reed virtually retired from the active work of the ministry as a vocation, and at that time he initiated his association with the coal industry at Fairmont, where he became secretary and treasurer of the South Pittsburgh Coal Company, the Fairmont & Masontown Coal Company, and the North Fairmont Coal Company. He is still continuing his executive service with each of these corporations and has his office headquarters in the American Building at Fairmont. Mr. Reed is affiliated with Acacia Lodge No. 157, A. F. and A. M.; Grafton Chapter No. 12, R. A. M.; Crusade Commandery No. 6, Knights Templars; Osiris Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Wheeling; the Knights of Pythias; the Independent Order of Odd Fellows; and the Modern Woodmen of America. He is a loyal and valued member of the Fairmont Chamber of Commerce.

In 1897 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Reed and Miss Attie Reed who was born near Clarksburg, this state, a daughter of William B. and Olive (Cottrill) Reed. Mr. and Mrs. Reed became the parents of four children: Foster Dale, William Cranston (died at the age of six months), William Arbutnot and Ruth Beatrice. Foster D. Reed, who completed a course in the Pennington Military Academy in the State of New Jersey, is now associated with his father in business. He married Miss Claudia Layman, of Fairmont, and they have one child, Patricia Ann.

GARFIELD L. PAULEY. Within recent years the interest of the public has been awakened and stimulated in the matter of improving the country schools, so that they are today, all over the country, in much better condition than ever before, and the efforts of educators and citizens are directed toward a further raising of their standard. One of the men of Lincoln County who is attaining some very gratifying results in this important connection is Garfield L. Pauley, county superintendent of schools and an educator of experience and popularity.

Garfield L. Pauley was born in Lincoln County, Septem-er 6, 1851, and comes of old and honored families of the South, his mother's people being prominent in Kentucky and his father's in Virginia. The McClures are of Irish descent, and the Pauleys of Dutch origin, and both lines have been established in this country for many generations. Mr. Pauley is a son of Lafayette W. and Martha F. (McClure) Pauley, both of whom were born in West Virginia. Lafayette W. Pauley was a farmer and lumberman. He remained loyal to the Union when war was declared between the two sections of the country, and enlisted in Company I, Second West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, in which he served as a second lieutenant under Capt. Charles Smith, was wounded at the second battle of Bull Run, but his injury was but a light one, a shell wound in the shoulder, from which he fully recovered, and after he was honorably discharged, at the close of the war, he returned home and resumed his farm work. He was a great worker in the Baptist Church, in which he was a deacon, and a leader in the prohibition movement in West Virginia, much of his time during his last years being devoted to this cause.

Garfield L. Pauley attended the common schools of Lincoln County, and when he was sixteen years of age he went to work in a general store at Sioota Post Office. After about a year there as a clerk he went into the timber and sawmill business, and continued to work in it until he was twenty-six years old, but during all of this time he continued his studies, for it was his ambition from childhood to fit himself for the profession of teaching. Passing the necessary examinations, he secured his teacher's certificate and entered the educational field, continuing in it for eleven years, or until his election in 1918 to the office of county superintendent of schools for Lincoln County. During the time he was teaching he was elected a justice of the peace, but resigned that office before the close of his first year in office.

On July 11, 1902, Mr. Pauley married at Snowden, West Virginia, Miss Alice Harless, a daughter of James H. and Mary E. (Mann) Harless, both natives of Virginia, who moved to West Virginia. Mr. Harless was a farmer, timberman and also conducted a general store at Snowden. Mr. and Mrs. Pauley have eight children, all of whom are at home, namely: Earl, Opal, Zoma, Lyman, Brookie, Arno, Joe and Dell. Mr. Pauley belongs to the Missionary Baptist Church. Fraternally he maintains membership with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Improved Order of Red Men. Not only is he rendering a great service through his office, but he is also exerting an influence for good in his community through his strong personality and his rigid stand for those principles and things which make for good citizenship and true Christianity, and few men in this region stand any higher in popular esteem.

EVERETT J. ELKINS, county clerk of Lincoln County, is a member of the old Elkins family of Virginia and West Virginia, of English descent, which in early times played so important a part in the history of the Old Dominion, and from which representatives have gone forth to all parts of the Union. Everett J. Elkins was born in Lincoln County, West Virginia, January 29, 1887, a son of Alamaner and Lucinda (Cooper) Elkins, both of whom were natives of Lincoln County. Alamaner Elkins was a merchant at Bernie, Lincoln County, and is one of the leading men of his locality, active in all public affairs, and from 1904 to 1908 served the county as assessor. He is one of the leading members of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in the county.

Growing up in his native county, Everett J. Elkins attended the common schools and the summer normal school held at Hamlin, and after completing his school days took the position of deputy county clerk, holding it until he was elected to the office of county clerk in November, 1920, when he assumed charge of its duties. During the late war he was one of the most zealous of war workers, and was exempted from service because of the position he held.

In 1910 Mr. Elkins married Miss Myrtle Bolt at Hamlin. Mrs. Elkins was born in Kentucky, a daughter of Sylvester and Mattie (Lawson) Bolt, both of whom were born in Kentucky and came to Hamlin in 1905. Mr. Bolt is a carpenter and builder. Mr. and Mrs. Elkins have two children, Eloise and Everett J. Mr. Elkins does not hold membership in any religious organization. He belongs to the Knights of Pythias. A careful man of orderly habits, he takes a pride in his work, and the records of the county are being kept in admirable shape under his supervision. While he has always faithfully discharged his duties, he has never forgotten his responsibilities as a citizen, and does all that lies in his power to further the cause of education, promote the industrial welfare of his city and county, and bring about improvements which he feels will be of permanent value. Such men as he are a tangible asset to any community, and should be prized accordingly.

JOSEPH C. MCCONNELL is giving a most effective administration as mayor of the City of Princeton, judicial center of Mercer County. His birth occurred on a farm in Mercer County, Pennsylvania, on the 30th of March, 1876. His parents, Joseph and Sarah (Welker) McConnell, were born and reared in Lawrence County, Pennsylvania, and shortly after their marriage removed to Mercer County, that state, where they passed the remainder of their lives on their excellent homestead farm, the father having died in 1895, at the age of fifty-two years, and the mother having been sixty-three years of age when she passed to the life eternal in 1903. All of the twelve children attained to years of maturity, the subject of this sketch having been the eighth in order of birth, and of the number ten are still living. Four of the sons became successful contractors in the coal fields of West Virginia, and these four had previously been teachers in the public schools. One son is a clergyman of the Presbyterian Church, of which the parents had been earnest members. The son, Norman, is now a contractor in Tazewell County, Virginia; Harry resides on a farm near the old home in Mercer County, Pennsylvania; George is a contractor and resides at Princeton, West Virginia, the four brothers, including Joseph C., of this review, having come to this state in 1895 and having been partners in their original contracting operations in the coal fields, all of the number having previously learned the trade of brickmason in their native county. The father served many years as justice of the peace in Springfield Township, Mercer County, Pennsylvania, and was otherwise a prominent figure in community affairs. One of his brothers was killed in battle while serving as a Union soldier in the Civil war, and another brother likewise was in the service of the Union, he having been captured and having been held a prisoner both at Andersonville and Libby prisons, notorious in the history of the war. The lineage of the McConnell family traces back to Scotch-Irish origin, and the Welker family is of the old Pennsylvania Dutch stock.

Joseph C. McConnell supplemented the discipline of the public schools by attending Volant College, and in his early experience as a teacher in the district schools he received $28 a month for his services. He devoted four years to teaching, a work which he greatly enjoyed, but low salaries then paid in this profession caused him to abandon the same. He learned the trade of brickmason, and joined his brother Norman at Clarksburg, West Virginia. Thereafter the four brothers engaged in contracting at Huntington, this state, and one year later removed to Williamson, where they continued operations five years. In August, 1909, Joseph C. McConnell came to Princeton, Mercer County, to complete a small contract and with no intention of remaining here. The city was then a mere village, as this was prior to the building of the railroad roundhouse, which greatly spurred the civic and industrial advancement of the town. He was led to establish here his permanent residence, and has been closely and influentially associated with the civic and material development and upbuilding of the thriving city of the present day. His civic loyalty and progressiveness led to his being importuned by leading citizens to become a candidate for mayor of the city in 1920, in November of which year he was elected by a majority that emphatically showed his secure place in popular confidence and esteem. He had been a member of the city council in 1919, but had resigned after making a vigorous fight for better city government. His election to the office of mayor shows the popular estimate placed upon his course in this connection, and he is making every effort to bring about a clean and adequate administration of all departments of the city government. As a contractor and builder Mayor McConnell's operations have extended throughout the coal fields of West Virginia, and for the past seven years his brother George has been his associate in this extensive business which is now conducted under the title of The McConnell Construction Company, with Princeton's mayor as president of this important industrial corporation. As a builder he has been associated with the construction of all manner of buildings, from mine houses to bank and school buildings of the most modern type. In national politics the mayor is a democrat, and in a fraternal way he is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and the Royal Order of Moose.

In 1907 Mr. McConnell wedded Miss Macie Rodgers, daughter of Richard Rodgers, of New Castle, Pennsylvania, and they are zealous members of the Presbyterian Church, in which he is a deacon, as had also been his father.

CHARLES W. HALL is president and general manager of the Princeton Foundry & Supply Company, which conducts one of the substantial and important industrial enterprises at Princeton, Mercer County. This company, with a modern plant of the best equipment, specializes in machine, boiler and foundry work, and in the manufacturing of the "Perfection" Cone Stove Sand-drier and Hall's Improved Shaker Grates for stationary engines, of both of which remarkably effective and valuable devices Mr. Hall was the inventor and both of which have proved of great practical value in connection with the coal-mining industry of West Virginia and other states. Mr. Hall's experience in the West Virginia coal fields began in 1888, and he has been actively identified with the development of the coal industry in the state.

Mr. Hall was born at Christiansburg, Montgomery County, Virginia, April 9, 1867, and is a son of John Newton Johnson Hall and Margaret (Pannell) Hall, the former of whom was born at Pinecastle, Craig County, Virginia, and the latter in Montgomery County, that state. The father was a pioneer in the mining of anthracite coal in Virginia, where his operations were conducted on the rather small scale that then marked the industry in that state. He was a loyal soldier of the Confederacy in the Civil war, took part in numerous engagements, was wounded at the battle of Manassas, and in the latter part of the war was held a prisoner of the Federal Government for a few months at Elmira, New York. He was a staunch democrat, and he and his wife were zealous members of the Baptist Church, in which he served as a deacon. The original American representatives of the Hall family came from Scotland, and members settled in Massachusetts, Virginia, and in other parts of the South prior to the War of the Revolution. The family was thus founded in Craig County, Virginia, in the Colonial period. John N. J. Hall was fifty-three years of age at the time of his death, in 1896, and his widow passed away in 1917, at the age of seventy years. Of the seven children Charles W., of this review, is the eldest. Another son, Edward D., is a machinist in the employ of the Norfolk & Western Railroad Company at Eckman, West Virginia.

Charles W. Hall gained his early education in the schools of his native place, and thereafter passed one year as a student in the Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Blacksburg. At the age of nineteen years he entered upon an apprenticeship in the foundry of J. P. Witherow & Company of New Castle, Pennsylvania, and he continued seven years in the employ of this company. He then came to West Virginia and became a machinist in the employ of the Norfolk & Western Railroad Company at Bluefield, where he was thus stationed at the time when the company's roundhouse was constructed at that point. After a period of four years Mr. Hall re-entered the employ of J. P. Witherow & Company, with which he was in service at Graham, Virginia, while the company was building its furnaces at that place. He next entered the employ of the Carter Coal Company at Tom's Creek, Virginia, where he remained seven years as master mechanic, the title of the company having in the meanwhile been changed to the Virginia Iron & Coal Company. For twelve years thereafter Mr. Hall was master mechanic and chief electrician with the American Coal Company at McComas, Mercer County, West Virginia, and upon severing this connection he became the executive head of the Pocahontas Foundry & Machine Company at Kingst. The plant of this company was later destroyed by fire, and in 1920 Mr. Hall became associated with the organization, the Princeton Foundry & Supply Company, which forthwith initiated the construction of the present modern plant, as he has continued as president and general manager of this progressive corporation. In the manufacturing department the company gives major attention to the production of two inventions of Mr. Hall, as noted in an earlier paragraph of this sketch. He has marked inventive ability, and has recently perfected a device that will prove a valuable attachment for the lighting systems of automobiles. Mr. Hall is a democrat, and in the Masonic fraternity is affiliated with the Blue Lodge at Coburn, Virginia, and the Chapter of Royal Arch Masons at Bramwell, West Virginia. His wife is a member of the Baptist Church.

October 2, 1889, recorded the marriage of Mr. Hall and Miss Barbara Kirk, daughter of John Kirk, of Mercer County, and of this union there are five sons and three daughters. Two of the sons were in the nation's service during the World War period. John W., who received his preliminary training at Fort Worth, Texas, became a gun instructor at Mount Clemens, Michigan. Charles W., who entered the United States navy on the 6th of April, 1917, became an electrician on the battleship Florida, and was the convoy service in the transportation of American troops to the stage of war. He received his honorable discharge after a service of eighteen months.

HOUGHTON A. ROBSON, of Huntington, senior member of the firm Robson & Nelson, real estate, coal and oil land has been associated with many of the large deals and transactions in properties involving the important natural resources of West Virginia.

He was born at Cotton Hill in Fayette County, West Virginia, February 1, 1856. His grandfather was a native of England, and on coming to America settled in Culpeper County, Virginia, where he was a planter and slave holder. He married Ann Reed, a native of Culpeper County. The old homestead is still owned by their descendants. Thomas S. Robson, father of Houghton A., was born in Culpeper County in 1819, grew up there, was married at Harrisonburg and immediately afterward settled at Cotton Hill in Fayette County, West Virginia. For many years he was county surveyor of Fayette County. During the Civil war he had charge of the county records, and by order of the court had these records conveyed to Southwest Virginia, in Montgomery County, where his deputies guarded them throughout the war. He himself entered the active service at the beginning as a quartermaster in the Confederate Army, and at the close of the war he returned the records safely to their home county. He never received a penny for the faithful discharge of this trust, and eleven commissioners said that he should have taken the records north instead of south, though he was ordered by the court. For many years, until his death, he was commissioner of School Land for Fayette County. He died at Cotton Hill December 1, 1888. He was a democrat and a member of the Baptist Church. Thomas S. Robson married Mary Elizabeth Abbo who was born in Harrisonburg, Virginia, in 1831, and died at Charleston, West Virginia, in 1913. Their children were James S., a farm owner at Charleston, and in the modern growth of that city part of his farm land has been built over; Annie L., of Charleston, widow of James G. Park who was a merchant at Cotton Hill; Houghton A.; Edwin and William, who died in infancy; and Cora R., wife of J. A. Rosenhelm, in the transfer business at Huntington.

Houghton A. Robson spent part of the Civil War period in Montgomery County, Virginia, and while there he had the privilege of attending school three months, and this with another brief period in Fayette County gave him his only formal school instruction. He was busy on his own account in gaining knowledge by the process of doing, and his associates have always recognized in him a man of splendid judgment and well informed on all the issues of the day. The family at the close of the Civil war had nothing, and Mr. Robson had to contribute his share to the upkeep of the household. At the age of twelve he was doing such work as was suited to his strength and years. About that time his father took a contract to carry the mail from Fayetteville to Lewisburg, and the son performed this duty for two years, getting a dollar a day for himself and mule, paying his board out of this and also fifty cents a week for errandage. Shortly after his service as a mail carrier he spent three weeks in Huntington working with a pick and shovel in the streets. Then, though young and weighing only eighty pounds, he gained a position as a brakeman with the recently constructed Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, serving nine months. He then went back to the home farm and assisted in its work, and also did some surveying until the death of his father in 1888. His father in the meantime had been agent for some large tracts of land owned by Eastern people, and Houghton A. Robson succeeded to this responsibility as well as to the work of commissioner of school lands of Fayette County. It was a business requiring good judgment and tact and a growing knowledge of land values, and the work really laid the foundation of his subsequent business career.

In 1900 Mr. Robson removed to Charleston and began the buying and selling of real estate, coal and oil lands, in partnership with J. M. Payne, an attorney, he bought a tract of 1,000 acres of coal land on Boomers Branch in Fayette County, paying $35,000, though only $5,000 in cash. Mr. Robson immediately took an option on 1,000 adjoining acres at a contract price of $25,000. He also paid $1,000 on this transaction. The first 1,000 acres were leased to the Masters Coal Company. In his second purchase he was associated with Dr. Lewis Prichard, and this was soon followed by his taking an option on 6,200 acres adjoining. By that time he and his associate had expended $3,500 on options. The 7,200 acres were subsequently sold at a fair profit to the Kanawha & Hocking railroad company. Mr. Robson continued in the real estate business as a partner of Doctor Prichard until the death of the latter on July 20, 1919. In the meantime, in 1918, he had removed to Huntington, and since 1911 has been associated with Fred C. Prichard, son of Doctor Prichard, under the firm name of Robson & Prichard. Mr. Robson is also associated with his son-in-law, C. P. Nelson, a firm of Robson & Nelson. They have seldom acted as brokers, but as principals in the buying and selling of real estate, coal and oil lands, and their transactions comprise a large volume of this class of business in the state. Mr. Robson is a director in the Huntington Banking & Trust Company, in the Charleston National Bank, the Montgomery National Bank, is president of the West Virginia Insurance Agency, president of the Battle Ridge Land Company of Charleston, and president of the Elk Ridge Colliery Company. His offices are in the Robson-Prichard Building, owned jointly by him and Fred C. Prichard. This was the first large office structure erected at Huntington. It is ten stories high and was built in 1910. The ground floor furnishes space for the Huntington Banking & Trust Company, and the remaining nine floors are used for office purposes. Mr. Robson also has an office in the Charleston National Bank Building at the capital city. He is a democrat in politics, and one of the very active and liberal members of the Baptist Church.

In 1884 he married Miss Jennie C. Shoemaker, daughter of James K. P. and Mary Elizabeth (Carns) Shoemaker, the latter deceased and the former a retired real estate broker and oil operator living at Homestead, Pennsylvania. The only child of Mr. and Mrs. Robson is Mary E., wife of C. Paul Nelson.

C. PAUL NELSON is a member of the firm of Robson & Nelson, real estate, coal and oil lands, at Huntington. Mr. Nelson is a civil engineer by profession, and had a wide and successful experience in that work for a number of years, both in West Virginia and elsewhere.

He was born at Brestsville in Prince William County, Virginia, December 21, 1876. This is an old and honored family name in Prince William County, where his grandfather, Thomas Nelson, at one time owned a large plantation and worked it with slave labor. Edwin Nelson, father of C. Paul Nelson, was born in Prince William County July 5, 1831, and remained a resident of that county all his life. He was a Confederate soldier, enlisting in the Prince William County Cavalry and serving until the final surrender. From the close of the war, by repeated re-elections and without any opposition to his candidacy, he served as clerk of the courts of his county until his death on February 12, 1911. He died at Manassas. He was a staunch democrat and an active member of the Primitive Baptist Church. He married Bettie Weedon, who was born in Prince William County October 14, 1837, and who died at Manassas February 22, 1911. Of their five children C. Paul is the youngest. Elizabeth Weedon, the oldest, is the wife of Austin O. Weedon, an attorney and banker at Warrenton, Oregon. John H. Nelson is an attorney at Washington, D. C. James E. also lives at Washington and is in the service of the Government. Effie Lee is the wife of Albert Speiden, a resident of Manassas, Virginia, while he is a member of the firm Speiden & Speiden, architects, at Washington.

C. Paul Nelson attended the public schools of his native county, also went to school at Baltimore, and graduated in 1898 from the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, Virginia. For one year he taught school in his home county, for nine months was connected with the Lewis Nixon Shipyard Company at Elizabeth, New Jersey, and in October, 1899, first came to West Virginia, at Marlinton in Pocahontas County, as a civil engineer in the service of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company. He was on this road's staff of civil engineers until 1901, when he went west and practiced as a civil engineer at El Reno, Oklahoma, a year, and other engineering work employed him over considerable areas of Texas and Arkansas. Returning to West Virginia in 1904, he located at Charleston and resumed his service as an engineer with the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, remaining until 1907. Some of his duties in this position took him into Kentucky. In 1908 Mr. Nelson organized the Nelson Transfer Company of Charleston, and served as its president until 1911. In that year he became associated with H. A. Robson, whose record is given elsewhere, in the buying and selling of real estate, coal and oil lands. Mr. Nelson's headquarters were at Washington, D. C., until 1916, in which year the office of the firm was established at Huntington and is in the Robson-Prichard Building. Besides his extensive connections as a member of this firm Mr. Nelson is also a director of the Huntington Banking and Trust Company.

He is a democrat, a member of the Baptist Church, and is affiliated with Huntington Lodge No. 53, A. F. and A. M., Huntington Chapter No. 6, R. A. M., Huntington Commandery No. 9, K. T., West Virginia Consistory No. 1, of the Scottish Rite at Wheeling, and Beni-Kedem Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston. He is a member of the Guyandotte Club and the Guyan Country Club, both at Huntington.

April 26, 1906, at Charleston, Mr. Nelson married Miss Mary Elizabeth Robson, daughter of H. A. Robson. She finished her education in the Lewisburg Seminary of this state. The four children born to their marriage are: Betty Jane, born April 5, 1907; Edwin Robson, born May 15, 1908; Mary Elizabeth, born June 17, 1909; James Houghton, born October 12, 1910.

THOMAS HENRY HUDDY is one of the progressive business men of Williamson, Mingo County, where he is general manager of the Bailey and the Sudduth Fuel companies of Kentucky.

Mr. Huddy was born at Redruth, Cornwall, England, on the 2d of February, 1871, and is a son of John and Mary (Glasson) Huddy, both likewise natives of Cornwall, where they remained until coming to the United States. The father was identified with the Cornish mining industry during virtually his entire active career in his native land, and his father was a wholesale fish merchant. John Huddy died in 1905, at a venerable age, his wife having passed away when her son Thomas H., of this review, was thirteen years old. Her mother was born the same day as was Queen Victoria, and she survived this revered English sovereign. Of the children of John Huddy two sons and two daughters are living at the time of this writing, in 1921.

Thomas H. Huddy acquired a rudimentary education in a kindergarten in his native land, and was about five years of age when he accompanied his mother and his two sisters to the United States and joined the father, who had come about two years previously and who was residing at Nelsonville, Ohio. Thomas H. attended the public schools at Nelsonville until he was a lad of twelve years, when he began service as a trapper boy in the mines of the Hocking Valley at that place. His vitality and effective service led to his rapid advancement, and by the time he had attained to his legal majority he had gained broad experience in connection with mining enterprise in the Hocking Valley, where he had been employed in various mines. At the age of seventeen years he came under the benignant influence of a Sunday school teacher, who inspired him with ambition for better things. His desire was to become a mine superintendent, and his ambition has been fully realized in later years. At the age of nineteen years he began to attend night school, and he has supplemented his early education further by reading and other self-discipline. At the age of twenty-two years Mr. Huddy left the parental home and became helper to a mine electrician. In nine months he was in charge of all machinery and repairs at the San Run Mine, and in 1895 he assumed the position of directing engineer with the Jeffrey Company, builders of mining machinery, at Columbus, Ohio. In this connection he had occasions to visit mining districts in all parts of the United States in the installing of electrical machinery. He was thus engaged seven years, and in the latter part of this period he acted also as advisory engineer of the sales department of the business. In 1902 Mr. Huddy became superintendent of six mines in Central Pennsylvania fields, in Cambria County. He thus continued three and one-half years, and then entered the employ of the Ellsworth Colliers, a large corporation at Ellsworth, that state. The next year he accepted the position of superintendent with the George M. Jones Company of Ohio, and about two and one-half years thereafter he severed this connection to join the Pittsburgh & Buffalo Company at Cannonsburg, Pennsylvania, in the capacity of superintendent. Each of these changes represented an advancement, and about six months after taking the position at Cannonsburg he was offered a still better post, that of superintendent with the Bloomer Coal & Coke Company at Bloomer, West Virginia. He accepted this proffer, and as the business of the concern expanded he was promoted general superintendent of the fifteen large mines of the company. June 12, 1920, Mr. Huddy resigned this responsible position to become general manager of the corporations designated in the opening paragraph of this sketch, and in each of these he is an equal stockholder with the other interested principals. While a resident of Boomer, Fayette County, this state, Mr. Huddy served as a member of the Board of Education. In national and state politics he is a republican, but in local affairs is independent of partisan lines. He is a director of the Montgomery National Bank at Montgomery, Fayette County. He and his wife hold membership in the Methodist Church, he is a member of the Kiwanis Club at Williamsport, his home city, and is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity.

November 9, 1895, recorded the marriage of Mr. Huddy and Miss Belle Wallace, a native of Nelsonville, Ohio, her parents having been born in England. Mr. and Mrs. Huddy have one child, Ruth, born July 22, 1903.

WADE HAMPTON BRONSON is one of the older residents of Williamsport, becoming acquainted with that village as a boy before the advent of the first railroad. His ambition to study law was frequently thwarted by lack of funds, and only after overcoming a number of difficulties was he admitted to the bar. Since then he has been steadily making his way to the front rank of lawyers in this section of the state, and is the senior member of the prominent firm Bronson & Stratton at Williamsport.

Mr. Bronson was born at Warfield, Kentucky, November 13, 1880. His father, J. L. F. Bronson, was born in 1837 South Carolina, and was a soldier in the Confederate army. After the war he settled in Kentucky, and he died in 1885 when his son Wade was six years of age. The mother whose maiden name was Lou Salyers, was born in Louisville, Kentucky, in 1853, her parents having come from Virginia. Besides Wade Hampton there were two other sons and one daughter.

Wade Hampton Bronson acquired his early education at the public schools of Warfield, Kentucky, and was about fifteen years of age when he came to Williamsport with his mother in 1895. In 1898 he entered the Concord Normal School at Athens, West Virginia, and remained a student there two years, and then earned a salary as an employee of his brother, then clerk of the Circuit Court of the district including Mingo County. In 1901 he entered the law school of the University of Virginia, and remained there one year. He then resumed work in the office of his brother, but carried on his legal studies at the same time, and in March 1903, after examination, was qualified and admitted to the bar of West Virginia. In the fall of that year he returned to the University of Virginia, and soon proved his capacity to keep up with his studies in the senior class. Having gained the equivalent of a university law course, and having already been admitted to the bar, he did not deem it necessary to remain to obtain the law degree. He therefore returned to Williamsport and became a partner in the law office of Attorney John B. Wilkinson. The latter was elected to the bench in 1904, and Mr. Bronson then formed a partnership with Mr. S. D. Stokes, under the name of Stokes & Bronson. In 1914 this firm was dissolved by mutual consent. Mr. Bronson was then alone until 1916, when he was elected prosecuting attorney of Mingo County. He was re-elected, but resigned after having served four years and three months. On retiring from office he formed his present partnership with Mr. Stratton, under the name of Bronson & Stratton.

Mr. Bronson is secretary, treasurer and a director of the North Matewan Land Company, is secretary and director of the Williamsport Ice & Coal Storage Company, local counsel for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, Western Union Telegraph Company, Sycamore Coal Company, Chatotay Coal Company and other coal companies. During the World War he was government appeal agent of the Local Draft Board, was a "Four-Minute" speaker and leader in several of the drives. He is a member in the local amateur bar associations, a democrat in politics, is affiliated with O'Brien Lodge No. 101, A. F. and A. M., at Williamsport, is a member of the Kiwanis Club and the Presbyterian Church.

On June 23, 1909, Mr. Bronson married Edith Embleton of Montgomery, West Virginia. She was born in Mason County, this state, of English ancestry. Their five children are: Margaret, born April 7, 1910; Wade, Jr., born September 6, 1911; Elizabeth, born November 23, 1913; Robert and John, born January 3, 1917.

JAMES ABNEY HOGG. Ever since the first white settlements were planted in the Kanawha and Ohio valleys, under the protection of military force and against the open hostility of the Indians, members of the Hogg family have played their part here, as soldiers, as home-makers as engineers and in many other avenues of service. Obviously it would not be possible here to give an account of the family in all interesting detail. The member named above was born at the original seat of the family in Mason County, but his business interests brought him some years ago to the great mining district of Logan. He is the present mayor of that city.

Mr. Hogg's ancestry begins with Capt. Peter Hogg, spelled with one "g" at that time, a native of Scotland, who came to America and settled in Augusta County, Virginia. He was an officer of the crown in the Dunmore war on the western side of the Allegheny Mountains, and was an intimate friend of George Washington and fought in the Revolution. His son Peter came West to occupy a land grant of 8,000 acres given by King George. This land was located at the mouth of the Great Kanawha River, in what is now Mason County, West Virginia. His son, Thomas G. Hogg, was born in 1800, was a land surveyor, and was a prominent pioneer in this western region. Many members of the Hogg family have been civil engineers. The mayor of Logan was named for his grandfather, James Abney Hogg, who was born in Mason County, was a thrifty farmer, and he married Lucy Ball, daughter of Capt. James Ball, who settled in Mason County about 1785. Among the sons of James Abney Hogg one was the late Charles E. Hogg, one of West Virginia's greatest lawyers and legal authors. He studied law while teaching school, and while in practice handled some of the most important cases in the State and Federal courts. Lawyers knew him as author of several important works, found in nearly all law libraries, and he also imparted his abilities and character upon the legal profession by his work as teacher of law and as Dean of the College of Law of West Virginia, a post he took in 1906.

The father of Mayor Hogg was Thomas G. Hogg, who was born at Clifton in Mason County, July 26, 1856, and is now living at Huntington. He married Matilda Robinson, who was born in Mingo County, Ohio, February 14, 1857, and died February 12, 1919. Thomas G. Hogg followed the profession of civil engineer and also was a farmer and teacher, and for twenty-seven years was active in the work of the schools of Mason County. All the family had been democrats. James Abney Hogg of Logan is the second in a family of six children. His sister Daisy is the wife of Cleo Fox, foreman in the Chesapeake & Ohio shops at Huntington. Ray is a public accountant at Oklahoma City. Edna lives with her father at Huntington. John has to his credit a service of sixteen years in the United States Marine Corps, in which he holds the rank of lieutenant, and was in service in Mexico and later in the World war and is now located at San Diego, California. The youngest of the family is Harry.

James Abney Hogg of Logan was born at Point Pleasant in Mason County, February 9, 1879, and graduated from the Point Pleasant High School in 1904. For thirteen years he taught school in Mason County, and taught the same school which had been conducted by his father. While teaching he studied law, but has never been admitted to the bar. While not teaching he also employed his time in the profession of civil engineering, and he surveyed lands and mines along the Tug Fork of Sandy River in West Virginia. His chief professional work for a number of years has been as a public accountant, and he did work in that line at Huntington. In 1916 he came to Teach Creek, Logan County, representing the E. R. Johnson coal mining interests. At one time he was accountant or the Jones interests at Charleston.

Mr. Hogg has been a resident of Logan since 1919, and here continues his practice as an auditor and public accountant. He was elected mayor of Logan in 1921, and is now in his second term of a very successful municipal administration.

In 1907 he married Merlia Waybright, daughter of Columbus Waybright, of Ripley, West Virginia. Their two daughters are Elizabeth Harding and Evelyn Waybright. Mr. Hogg is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is a member of the Masonic Lodge at Point Pleasant, Logan Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and the Elks Lodge at Charleston.

BERNARD SHELL. A modern coal mining district like Logan County requires an enormous aggregate of machinery and appliances used in the mines, in the surface equipment and for the handling and transportation of coal. For equipping this in order such a plant as that of the Guyan Machine Shops at Logan is one of the indispensable auxiliaries. This plant was established in 1913 by W. H. Oliver and Bernard Shell, and in 1914 the business was incorporated with Mr. Oliver as president, and Bernard Shell, a machinist and mechanical engineer of long and varied experience, as vice president and general manager.

Mr. Shell was born at Eggleston, Giles County, Virginia, March 30, 1882, son of A. V. and Sallie Caroline (Barton) Shell, who were also natives of Giles County. His father, now sixty-five years of age, had his home at Graham, Virginia, for thirty-five years. He is a skilled mechanic, and for a number of years was boss blacksmith in the Norfolk & Western Railroad shops at Bluefield, West Virginia, held a similar position at Switchback for the Pocahontas Consolidated Fuel Company, was then in charge of the shops of the New River and Pocahontas Consolidated Fuel Company at Berwind, West Virginia, taking charge there after his son Bernard moved to Logan, and in 1917 A. V. Shell came to Logan and is now general utility man in the Guyan Machine Shops. He is a Presbyterian and democrat, and his wife is a Methodist. They have two sons and four daughters, the other sons being Sidney Herbert, a resident of Graham, Virginia.

Bernard Shell acquired his early education in the Graham public schools, and as a boy began learning the same trade as his father. He served, beginning at the age of fourteen, an apprenticeship in the Norfolk & Western Shops at Bluefield under his father, and on completing that apprenticeship began another as machinist at Switchback under James Jones. He completed this period of training in two and a half years, and then as a journeyman worked in many shops through Canada, the United States and Mexico. In 1908 he was appointed master mechanic of the Raleigh Coal and Coke Company at Raleigh, West Virginia, two years later took a similar position with the New River and Pocahontas Consolidated Fuel Company at Berwind, and left there in 1913 to join Mr. Oliver in establishing the Guyan Machine shop at Logan. These shops have had two consecutive fires, but each time the plant was built bigger and better. The business started on a small scale, has steadily grown and increased its facilities apace with the development of the coal fields and the Town of Logan. In the plant are all facilities for handling every class of repair to the mechanical and electrical machinery used in mining, including armature winding. It is a business that gives employment to a large force of expert mechanics.

Mr. Shell in 1913 married Bessie Berenice Bayless, daughter of H. A. Bayless, of Berwind. Their three children are: Bernard Bayless, Bettie Ann and Robert Louis. Mrs. Shell is a member of the Baptist Church. Mr. Shell is affiliated with Logan Lodge of Masons, the Royal Arch Chapter at Logan, Wheeling Consistory of the Scottish Rite and Benikodem Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston. He is also an Elk and in politics is a liberal democrat.

JOHN CLAYPOOL. The Claypools have played a vigorous part in the development of Logan County, for more than fourscore years. Three generations of the family have been represented here. They have cleared away the woods, improved farms, worked up the timber resources, have been business men and influential factors in their home districts. One of the present generation is John Claypool, member of the real estate and insurance firm of Claypool & McGuire at Logan.

His grandfather was named John Claypool, was a native of Tazewell County, Virginia, and with his family moved to Huff's Creek in what is now Logan County in 1840. At that time he paid $500 for 500 acres of land. It was covered with heavy timber, and almost his first task was to clear away a portion of the wood so as to have room to cultivate a small crop. In time he made a farm and steadily grew in prosperity. The land which he acquired as a pioneer is today easily worth a million dollars. It has two coal operations on it, one by the Logan Elkhorn Corporation and the other by the Faulkner Coal Company. When the Claypools were enjoying their pioneer home in Logan County their nearest rail transportation was at Marmet or old Brownstown. They hauled salt and other supplies from there. John Claypool died at the age of eighty-two, in 1878. He was the father of three sons and one daughter, and the last survivor of these children was William Claypool.

William Claypool, who represents the second generation of the family, was born near Tazewell Court House, Virginia, February 28, 1832, and was about eight years of age when he came to Logan County. He was a man of strong and virile qualities, which made him conspicuously useful in spite of the fact that they were never polished by education. All told, he attended school only three weeks, and he could barely read or write. However, he had an intuitive knowledge of mathematics and could instantly compute interest and the cost of cattle, in which he dealt on a growingly increasing scale. He was a shrewd, keen trader, prospered in his business affairs, and had overflowing physical energy. He stood six feet tall. His enterprise was not confined to his own affairs. He built the Claypool Methodist Church, donated land on which the Claypool School is located and served as a trustee of the church. He and the other Claypools were absolutely opposed to secession, and William always voted as a republican. Though he had prospered without an education, he did not for that reason believe that his own children should go without advantages. He did a great deal to maintain a good school in his home community, boarding the teacher of the district free of charge and also furnishing a mule for the teacher to ride to school, and by this liberality he secured for his own and his neighbor's children a better instructor than had many similar districts. William Claypool died at the old homestead at Mallory in 1901. He married Amanda Buchanan, who was born at Matewan, in what is now Mingo County, daughter of John Buchanan, who was a Confederate soldier. After the death of her husband Amanda Claypool married H. C. Avis, of Logan, president of the Guyan Supply Company. The four children of William Claypool and wife were: John; Mary, wife of C. Abdo; G. R., who is secretary, treasurer and general manager of the Guyan Supply Company; and R. H., who was connected with the Guyan Supply Company, was a commercial traveler, and died of influenza in 1918.

John Claypool, the Logan real estate man, was born on the site of the present town of Mallory, on Huff's Creek, March 22, 1876. He was one of the children who benefited by the advantages of the Claypool School, later attended the Oceana High School in Wyoming County, and at the age of twenty, one leaving school, he went to work for Adkins & Garred on Huff's Creek. He remained with them as book-keeper, also as timber and lumber inspector, for five years, and he inherited some of his father's keen ability of a calculator and learned to estimate the value of trees as quickly as his father computed the value of a steer. On leaving that firm Mr. Claypool opened a store at Man, at the mouth of Huff's Creek. His stock of goods had to be hauled from Dingess in Mingo County, thirty miles across the mountains, since at that time no railroad had come down into the valley. He remained in business there three years, and then for a time was in the timber and sawmill business on Huff's Creek. He manufactured large quantities of lumber and sent rafts of timber down the Guyan River and also to Catlettsburg, Ashland and other points on the Ohio River.

Mr. Claypool since 1909 has been a resident of Logan, and since then has done an extensive business in the buying and selling of real estate and the handling of insurance. He has operated in the real estate market of several towns, and has handled many tracts of coal lands. In 1903 he married Lettie Spratt, daughter of A. D. Spratt, of Gilbert. She died in 1918, the mother of five children, Marie, Ruby, Amanda, Frank D. and John E. In 1919 Mr. Claypool married Mrs. Daisy Miller, a daughter of W. H. Buchanan, of Pearisburg, Virginia. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and fraternally he is affiliated with the local lodge of Masons, Athens Chapter, R. A. M., Huntington Commandery, K. T., and Huntington Consistory, thirty-second degree, at Huntington, West Virginia, and he is also a member of the Elks, Knights of Pythias and Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In politics he is a republican.

GEORGE R. CLAYPOOL is secretary, treasurer and manager of the Guyan Supply Company at Logan. He possesses ideal qualifications for a business man and worker in section of country that is of comparatively recent development. Physically powerful, he was an adept in the rough work of the timber and lumber camps for several years, and has been a man of force in whatever he has undertaken.

Mr. Claypool was born at what is now Mallory in Logan County, September 24, 1882, a son of William and Amanda (Buchanan) Claypool. William Claypool, who died in 1901 at the age of fifty-nine, was eight years of age when his father, John Claypool, moved from Greenbrier County to Logan County, establishing his home on a farm. John Claypool later served as a commissioned officer in the Confederate army. William Claypool was a farmer. Before railroads penetrated this district the Claypool home was the place of entertainment always sought out by the travelers running through this region, and its generous hospitality was shared by ministers of the gospel, commercial travelers and all classes of men whose business took them into the neighborhood. After the death of William Claypool his widow married H. C. Avis, and they now live at Logan. William Claypool and wife had three sons and one daughter: John, of Logan, formerly a merchant and now in the real estate business; George R.; Roscoe, who was a traveling salesman and died at Huntington in 1918, at the age of thirty-one; and Mary, wife of Charles Abdo, of Logan.

George R. Claypool attended school at Mallory and the Oceana High School in Wyoming County. Leaving school at the age of eighteen, he became a clerk in the store of his brother John at the mouth of Huff's Creek. He remained there five years, laying the foundation of his business experience. He then opened a store of his own at Cyclone also on Huff's Creek. This store was established before the railroad came down into Logan County. He hauled all his goods from Dingess on the Norfolk & Western Railroad, a distance of thirty miles. After six years as a merchant Mr. Claypool took up the timber business. He engaged his own labor and also his capital in this enterprise, cutting off tract of timber and working it up in his own sawmill. He rafted a great deal of lumber down the river. While his splendid physique and perfect health made him well fitted for the lumber industry, Mr. Claypool has been equally successful as a merchant.

After two years in the timber business and three years on the farm he came to Logan, and for a time was a sales man in the store of William Ghiz. He then organized the Guyan Supply Company, wholesale dealers in groceries, flour and feed, and the business of this firm is now distributed all over the adjoining coal fields.

Mr. Claypool for eight years was a member of the Board of Education in the Triadelphia District of Logan County. After moving his home to Logan he became a member of the city council, and in August, 1921, when the commission form of government was adopted, he became one of the city commissioners. He is a director of the First National Bank and has supplied capital and his personal influence to the development of several coal properties.

In 1904 he married Miss Vinia Altizer, daughter of P. G. Altizer. She died in 1910, leaving three daughters Orpha, Opal and Gladys. In 1914 Mr. Claypool married Minnie Patterson, daughter of John Patterson, of Barboursville. Mr. Claypool is a member of the board of stewards and board of trustees of the Methodist Church at Logan. He is a Royal Lodge Mason, is a past grand of Logan Lodge of Odd Fellows, and is a republican.

J. CARY ALDERSON. The oldest bank in the length and breadth of the Guyan Valley is known as the Guyan Valley Bank of Logan. It has performed all the service expected of an institution of this character for over twenty years, and its resources as well have steadily improved. The chief personal factor in its prosperity has been J. Cary Alderson, who organized it, became its first cashier, and since 1912 has served as its president.

In his capacity as a banker and business man of Logan County Mr. Alderson has contributed additional dignity to a name that has been one of historical distinctions in West Virginia for more than a century and a half. He is a descendant in the sixth generation of an old Yorkshire Eng-sh family. The Aldersons for several generations were prominent ministers. His Yorkshire ancestor was Rev. John Alderson, a minister. A second generation was also represented by a John Alderson, who in time also took up the profession of the ministry. He was born in 1699. As youth he formed a romantic attachment which was not avored by his father, and his father as a means of breaking up the match gave the son £200 to enjoy a period of travel. In the course of his journeys he reached Liverpool, and by that time had expended all his capital. He was induced to accept passage on a ship then starting for America, and the first record of him in this country finds him in New Jersey in 1719. He became a Baptist preacher, preaching in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, and finally moving to Virginia, where he bought a farm adjoining one owned by the grandfather of Abraham Lincoln. On his farm here John Alderson built a Baptist Church. His last days were spent at Fincastle, Virginia, where he died in 1780. He married Jane Curtis, of New Jersey, and they were the parents of seven sons and one daughter.

W. V. McNamee

The third generation of the family was also represented by a Rev. John Alderson, who was born in New Jersey in 1738, and was the pioneer of the family in West Virginia. He had all the enterprise and the fondness for adventure that characterize the pioneer, and he turned this disposition to the advantage of the Baptist Church, of which he was one of the most honored pioneer missionaries. He explored the Greenbrier and Kanawha valleys during 1760-75, and in one trip went as far as the Ohio River. He was probably the first preacher in the Kanawha Valley. During 1774-75 he laid out the first road to Jarretts Ford on Wolf Creek, now in Monroe County. Soon afterward he removed his family to the Greenbrier River, at what is now the town of Alderson, and here he set out the first orchard and built the first church west of the Alleghany Mountains. The community became known as Alderson's Ferry and neighborhood. He carried the gospel to many isolated communities in the mountain district. The church he and his followers built on the Greenbrier River recently celebrated its 150th anniversary. The present church is the third edifice to stand on the same foundation. At the anniversary service mentioned the father of Cary Alderson read a paper of eminences. Rev. John Alderson frequently preached to the Indians, and it is literally true that in going about on his duties as a minister he carried a Bible in one hand and a gun in the other. He died at what is now Alderson in 1821. He married in 1759 Mary Carroll, a relative of Charles Carroll of Carrollton. Of his three sons one was George Alderson, who became distinguished in the pioneer affairs of the Kanawha Valley and whose son, James O., was at one time pastor of the Greenbrier Church. The second son, Joseph, was the father of Lewis A. Alderson, who was a pioneer in the Baptist ministry in Kansas, and founded Ottawa University in that state.

John Alderson, the fourth to bear that name in as many generations, was born at Alderson in Monroe County and was a business man. Among his various enterprises he was associated with the pioneer salt manufacturing industry of the state. This John Alderson was the grandfather of the Logan banker.

George Alderson, father of Cary Alderson, was born at Alderson November 13, 1833, a date which old timers always recalled as the night the stars fell. He married Virginia Stevens, who was born in Monroe County in 1842, daughter of a Yankee schoolmaster. George Alderson and wife have been married fifty-four years, and both of them are still living. He has been an official in the old Greenbrier Baptist Church. At the time of the Civil war he entered the Confederate Army and served with the rank of captain on the staff of General William C. Wickham. He has always been a loyal democrat, has represented his county in the State Legislature, and for forty years he was a justice of the peace, until he declined to serve longer. For many years he was master of Alderson Lodge of Masons, and was a director of the First National Bank of Alderson. George Alderson and wife had a family of five sons and one daughter, and of these only J. Cary survives. Of these deceased Bernard C., who died at the age of forty, was a graduate of West Virginia University, was a teacher and founded the Alderson Baptist College of Alderson. William W. Alderson graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in Baltimore, practiced in Alderson and later in Texas, to which state he removed for his health and where he died at the age of thirty. George Alderson was a farmer on the old homestead, a member of the State Legislature. Cabell died in childhood. The only daughter, Virginia, died at the age of thirty-five and was the wife of C. B. Rowe, of Alderson.

John Cary Alderson was born at Alderson in Monroe County September 29, 1868. He gained a liberal education before beginning his business career, attended schools in his native county, and in 1883 entered Hampden-Sidney College in Virginia, where he graduated A. B. in 1887. He took his law course in the University of Virginia, graduating LL. B. in 1890. Prior to graduating from law school he was for a time assistant professor of Latin and Greek in the preparatory department of Hampden-Sidney College. Later he taught a private preparatory school of his own at Greenbrier, five miles from Lewisburg, West Virginia. After graduating from law school in 1890 his choice of a place for his professional career was Aracoma, now the town of Logan and county seat of Logan County. He is one of the oldest residents of this community, and in thirty years has not only witnessed but has been an influential factor in the development of the town and surrounding country. For five years he was associated in the practice of law with H. K. Shumate, and after that was alone in practice until 1900, when he organized the Guyan Valley Bank and became its cashier. For six years he was deputy clerk of the County Court under his father-in-law, S. S. Altizer.

While in law practice Mr. Alderson gave his special attention to civil and chancery cases. Outside of his business as a banker he has been interested in the development of the coal fields of this section, and has been president and otherwise officially identified with several coal land and coal operating companies.

On May 16, 1893, Mr. Alderson married Julia Altizer, daughter of S. S. Altizer. Her father, who was a candidate for Congress in 1906, died in Cabell County, West Virginia, in 1907. Mr. Alderson has been a deacon of the Baptist Church for many years, is a past master of the Lodge of Masons, a member of Logan Chapter, R. A. M., and the Knight Templar Commandery at Charleston. In politics he is a democrat, and was chairman of the democratic county committee for eight years.

WILLIAM V. McNEMAR. Logan County claims an excellent contingent of able and successful lawyers, and among the number is he whose name initiates this review and who is established in practice at Logan, the county seat.

Mr. McNemar is a scion of Scotch and Irish ancestry, his paternal grandfather, Col. Joseph McNemar, having commanded a Virginia regiment in the Confederate service in the Civil war, his home having been in what is now Grant County, West Virginia, where he served as sheriff and was otherwise influential in community affairs. He married a young woman who had been abducted from the coast of Ireland and brought to this country, where she became the wife of Colonel McNemar.

William V. McNemar was born at Lahmansville, Grant County, this state, on the 4th of March, 1886, and is a son of Samuel B. and Lizzie (Harris) McNemar, the former of whom was born in that county and the latter in the State of Illinois. Samuel B. McNemar became a successful teacher in the schools of Grant County, there gained precedence as a progressive farmer, and, while influential in community affairs, he invariably refused to become a candidate for public office. He died in 1912 and his widow still maintains her home in Grant County. Samuel B. McNemar was a member of the Southern Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mrs. McNemar is a Baptist.

To the schools of his native county William V. McNemar is indebted for his preliminary education, which was advanced by his attending a preparatory school at Keyser, Mineral County. Thereafter he attended the University of West Virginia until ill health compelled his retirement, but in 1910 he graduated from the State Normal School at Shepherdstown. In the State University he graduated in 1913, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and from the law department of that institution he received in 1915 the degree of Bachelor of Laws, with virtually concurrent admission to the bar of his native state. His professional novitiate was served at Parsons, Tucker County, where he remained one year, and for the ensuing three years he was engaged in practice in the City of Charleston. He then removed to Logan and entered into a law partnership with Charles S. Minter, with whom he has since been associated in successful and representative practice in this thriving little city. In the World war period Mr. McNemar was not called into military service, but he was vital and zealous in the furthering of all patriotic activities in the City of Charleston, where he was residing at the time. He is identified with the Logan County Bar Association, the West Virginia Bar Association and the American Bar Association. In the Masonic fraternity he has received the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite, is affiliated also with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and he and his wife hold membership in the Presbyterian Church.

At Oakland, Maryland, in the year 1913, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. McNemar and Miss Helen Babb, daughter of John L. and Margaret M. (Mathes) Babb, both natives of Grant County, West Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. McNemar have two children: Margaret E. and Anna D.

CHARLES ZELLER. The following account of the career of Charles Zeller will explain the grounds for the confidence and esteem in which he is held at Terra Alta, where for forty-five years he has been a resident, a sound American citizen, and a busy worker at his trade of shoemaker.

Charles Zeller was born at Daetzingen, Oberamt Boe Blingen, about nine miles northeast of the City of Stuttgart in Wuerttemberg, September 22, 1847, a son of Bernhard and Margaret Zeller. His father, who was a carpenter by trade, died young, leaving his widow and only child, whose name at christening was Carl August.

Charles Zeller was required to attend the Government school until he was fourteen, and then began his apprenticeship as a student of shoemaking. The arrangement provided for the payment to his master of fifty gulden, amounting to about one hundred and fifty marks. After learning his trade he went to Stuttgart, worked as a journeyman three and a half years, wages being about a gulden a week, and then returned home and after three weeks joined another young man and they pursued a real journeyman's existence to different portions of Southern Germany, including a portion of Bavaria and going on into Austria, where they worked for a time in a small country town. He also worked in Radolfzell in Baden, then went to Switzerland, and for three years was employed at Zurich.

In 1871 Mr. Zeller sailed out of Bremen Harbor on a steamship which eighteen days later landed him at Baltimore. From there he went to Frostburg, Maryland, spending the winter, and in the spring located at Cumberland, where he remained working at his trade, for five years. The only English words he knew when he landed were good morning. He bought a German-English dictionary, but it proved of little benefit. He mastered the new language largely by actual practice among his new American friends. For the first few years he made progress slowly, since his associations were largely with German speaking people, but after coming to Terra Alta, where his business and social relations were largely with Americans, he picked up the language rapidly.

Mr. Zeller came to Terra Alta in 1877, and from that year to the present has been the old and reliable, steady working and faithful shoemaker of the village and city. His business has undergone a marked change during his residence. For years he made boots and shoes for a large territory around the town, but his work is now altogether repairing. For many years he was the only shoemaker in the town, hence his acquaintance extended to all the old families and his efficient workmanship was an important factor in his popularity. Mr. Zeller has carefully laid away in his shop three hickory hammer handles, each showing deep indentations worn by his fingers as they gripped the handles, this wearing progress continuing until new handles had to be substituted.

Mr. Zeller took out his first citizenship papers in Cumberland and finished the naturalization process at Kingwood. In 1880 he cast his first presidential vote for President Grant, and has voted with the republican party ever since. He served as a councilman of Terra Alta under Mayor Crawford.

At Cumberland Charles Zeller married Miss Rosa Reichle daughter of Valentine Reichert, of Baden, Germany, who Mrs. Zeller was born. Mr. and Mrs. Zeller have had six children: Frank, a jeweler and merchant at Terra Alta; Maggie, wife of Ira Parsons, of Terra Alta; Theresa, at home Alexander, a telegraph operator in the service of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company at Terra Alta; Mary, who died in childhood, and Carl and Anna, still members of the household.

JEREMIAH RINGER. The duties of life as presented successively to him through a period of over forty years Jeremiah Ringer has discharged to the extent of his ability and in such manner as to merit the esteem and respect in which he is held. He recently sold his farming interests, which constituted his active career, and is now living retired at Terra Alta.

He was born in Portland District of Preston County December 17, 1858. His grandfather, Philip Ringer, probably a native of Preston County, was one of several brothers who in their day were accounted among the best citizens and leading farmers in the community of Centenary Church. Philip Ringer is buried on the farm he owned at Centenary. He was a Methodist, a democrat, and took an unassuming part in local affairs.

John Ringer, father of Jeremiah, was born near the Centenary Church in Pleasants District March 2, 1823. He lived there and followed farming until about the opening of the Civil war, when he moved to the Crab Orchard community of Preston County and remained there the rest of his year. During the Civil war he drilled as a militiaman, but was never called to front line duty. His holdings eventually became extensive and occupied him as one of the leading farmers in the county. His specialty as a farmer was raising hay, grain and stock. He represented the family tradition and characteristics of quiet and unpretentious citizenship without seeking the notoriety of politics. He was active in the Alburgh Evangelical Church, was a republican and voted for the party candidate at every opportunity. John Ringer married November 5, 1846, Susan Bishop, daughter of Henry Bishop and representative of one of the old families of Preston County. Their children were: William Henry and Harrison both of whom took up farming as their vocation and lived in the Crab Orchard District and were survived by children: Elsie, a farmer on Muddy Creek near Lenox; George A., a retired farmer at Kingwood; Jeremiah; Amanda J., whose first husband was M. L. Feather and her second Clark May of Terra Alta; Rhuey Belle, who died near Terra Alta, the wife of Robert A. Seal; and Joseph R., a farmer at Lenox, along the Brandonville Pike.

Jeremiah Ringer acquired his early education in the Lidel Run schoolhouse in the community where he was born and reared. His advantages were superior to those of his father chiefly in the matter of more abundant and better text books. From such books he studied reading, spelling, geography, grammar and writing. Jeremiah Ringer was exceptionally faithful to his parents as long as they lived, was the mainstay of his father on the farm, and even after his marriage, at the age of twenty-five, he remained and took charge of the homestead. In the past eighteen years his home has been at or near Terra Alta, and he sold his farm there in September, 1921, and is now living in comfort in the village.

February 7, 1884, at Lenox in Preston County, Mr. Ringer married Miss Dorothy Isabel Chidester, who was born October 3, 1862, daughter of Harrison Chidester and sister of Mrs. Daniel C. Feather, under whose name more detailed mention of the family is made. Mr. and Mrs. Ringer have one daughter, Nora May, wife of Earl Freeland of Terra Alta. Mr. and Mrs. Freeland have two children, Leslie Earl and Lucile L.

Jeremiah Ringer votes as a republican in national affairs and in local politics gives his ballot to the man he considers best qualified. He and Mrs. Ringer are members of the utheran Church, he joining that church after being reared a Methodist. He is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias lodge.

CASSIUS E. CLOVIS, cashier and director of the Bank of Hundred in Wetzel County, has been actively identified with that institution for over ten years. It is one of the most prosperous banks in the entire county. Mr. Clovis is a thorough business man and banker, and has made use of his years and opportunities for a varied and effective service as a teacher and in various lines of business.

He was born at Wadestown in Monongalia County, July 23, 1875. The name Clovis was associated with the pioneer history of Monongalia County. His great-grandfather, Matthias Clovis, was born, reared and married in Germany, and then brought his family to the United States and settled on a farm in Monongalia County, where he lived out his life. Jacob Clovis, grandfather of the Hundred banker, was born in Monongalia County in 1817, and owned a farm and also operated a flour mill known as Brown's Mill in that county. He died near Wadestown in 1893. His wife was Miss Chalfant, a native of Monongalia County, where she was born in 1818 and died in June, 1893.

Elijah C. Clovis, father of Cassius E., is still living near Wadestown and has been a resident of Monongalia County over seventy years. He was born at Brown's Mill November 3, 1848. His active career of half a century has been devoted to farming, and he still owns his farm three miles northwest of Wadestown. He is a republican, a leading member of the Methodist Episcopal Church in this community and has served as class leader and superintendent of the Sunday school. Elijah C. Clovis married Catherine Lemley, who was born in Monongalia County September 19, 1848. This old couple are the parents of six children: Clark L., a farmer near Wadestown; Cassius E.; Nora E., wife of George H. Posttuler, a farmer at Colerain, Ohio; Benjamin F., a farmer near Wadestown; Forna J., at home; and Charles H., a physician and Roentgenologist who has charge of the X-Ray and Radium work in the Ohio Valley Hospital at Wheeling. He served during the World war as a second lieutenant.

Cassius E. Clovis was reared on his father's farm near Wadestown, attended the rural schools there, was also a student in the Fairmont State Normal School, and in 1899 graduated from the Wheeling Business College. He began teaching at the age of twenty-one, and altogether spent five years in the rural schools of Monongalia County. When he left business college he remained at Wheeling for two years as bookkeeper for the Center Foundry & Machine Company of that city. He then taught another year in Monongalia County, following which for a short time he was employed in the County Court clerk's office at Morgantown and, going back to Wheeling, was for six years bookkeeper and assistant secretary for the Fort Henry Club. He then concluded his teaching with another term in Monongalia County, finally leaving the school room in 1909.

The Bank of Hundred in Wetzel County was established as state bank in 1903. In 1910 Mr. Clovis became bookkeeper for the bank, was promoted to assistant cashier in 1911, and since 1915 has been cashier and a member of the Board of Directors. The solid prosperity of this bank is reflected in a few items from a recent statement. It has capital stock of twenty-five thousand dollars, surplus and profits of forty thousand dollars, and the deposits aggregate six hundred thousand dollars. The active officials of the bank are: Sanford J. Talkington, of Hundred, president; John Mapel, of Burton, vice president; C. E. Clovis, cashier; the directors are S. J. Talkington, John Mapel, C. E. Clovis, William F. Stokdale, J. E. Shull, all of Hundred, R. S. Clovis, of Jollytown, Pennsylvania, Simon Moore, of Metz, West Virginia, Aaron Furbee of Glover Gap, West Virginia, and Joseph Sellers, of Deep Valley, Pennsylvania.

During the war Mr. Clovis went to the limit of his means and influence for the Government, and was chairman of all the loan campaigns in the Church District of Wetzel County. He is a member of the Town Council and town treasurer of Hundred, is a republican, is a steward of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and is affiliated with Hundred Lodge No. 4, Knights of Pythias. He and his family live in a home with all the modern conveniences on Hamilton Avenue. In January, 1909, at Fairmont, Mr. Clovis married Miss Elizabeth A. Rixey, daughter of Charles W. and Rose (Allen) Rixey, of Wheeling, where Mrs. Clovis was born. To their marriage have come four children: Catharine, born December 1, 1910; Virginia, born May 27, 1912; George W., born February 23, 1915; and Mabel, born June 24, 1917.

JAMES G. TOOTHMAN, who for the past ten years has been associated in an official capacity with the Bank of Hundred, came into this business with a thoroughly successful record as a teacher and school administrator.

Mr. Toothman was born at Anthem in Wetzel County December 7, 1882. His great-grandfather, Christopher Toothman, was a native of Germany and established his home at Hagerstown, Maryland, in 1760, fifteen years before the beginning of the Revolutionary war. It was one of his sons who moved over into what is now West Virginia and established the family in Marion County. Davis Toothman, grandfather of James G. Toothman, was born in Marion County and spent practically all his life there. He was a farmer, and died at Brink at the age of eighty-four. His wife was Sarah Snodgrass, who was born in Marion County in 1822 and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Hayes, in Wetzel County in 1912. Jesse S. Toothman, representing the next generation of the family, was born in Marion County, July 21, 1847, and was a youthful soldier in the Civil war. He enlisted in 1863 in the 14th West Virginia Infantry and served until the close of hostilities. He participated in the battle of Cedar Creek and was also in Hunter's raid. After the war he became a farmer, but after his marriage moved to Wetzel County, and during his active career was a farmer and carpenter in the county. He has lived retired since 1911 and is a resident of Hundred. He is a republican and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Jesse S. Toothman married Susanna M. Snider, who was born in Marion County October 22, 1849, and died at her home near Anthem in May, 1913. Their children were: Marcellus A., a farmer in Wetzel County; Christopher J., a coal mine operator living at Fairmont; Ella J., twin sister of Christopher, wife of William J. Devine, who has charge of the meter department of the Carnegie Natural Gas Company at Hundred; Bertie, born in 1876 and died in 1910, was the wife of Ulysses G. Thomas, a farmer living near Hundred; Jessie C. is the wife of Dr. George W. Anderson, a physician at Littleton, West Virginia; the sixth child was James G., and the youngest died in infancy.

James G. Toothman spent his early life on his father's farm in Wetzel County, attended the country schools, was a student for one year in the Wesleyan Seminary at Buckhannon, and for two years was a special student of civil engineering in West Virginia University at Morgantown. He left the University in 1904. At the age of sixteen he taught his first term of rural school, and altogether was a teacher in the rural schools of Wetzel and Marion counties four years. In 1904 he became principal of a graded school in Marion County and for three years was principal of schools at Hundred, thus forming his first connections with that community where his interests are now permanently identified. Following that for a year he was principal of the eighth grade in the Mannington School and for one year was an employee of the Carnegie Natural Gas Company, with headquarters at Hundred. Mr. Toothman in 1911 became teller in the Bank of Hundred, and since 1913 has been assistant cashier of that prosperous institution, one of the strongest banks in Wetzel County.

Mr. Toothman is a republican, has served as mayor of Hundred, is a member of the Christian Church and a past grand of Hundred Lodge No. 200, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and is a past chancellor of Hundred Lodge No. 84, Knights of Pythias. During the war he gave much of his time to promoting the Liberty Loan and Savings Stamps sales.

Mr. Toothman owns a modern home at the corner of Cleveland Street and Hamilton Avenue. He married at Oakland, Maryland, in 1905, Miss Ollie Kennedy, a daughter of Nathaniel and Vina (Reid) Kennedy, residents of Hundred, where her father is a carpenter. Mr. and Mrs. Toothman had three children: James E., born October 2, 1905, a sophomore in the Hundred High School; Robert, born August 2, 1909, died in July, 1910; and Virginia, born February 6, 1914.

WILLIAM F. FARLEY, M. D., of Holden, Logan County, has been engaged in the successful practice of his profession in this county for nearly thirty years, and has special prestige as a physician and surgeon in important service in connection with coal-mining industry in this section of the state. The doctor is one of the honored, influential and progressive citizens of the county, and in 1922 is serving his second term as president of the County Court.

Doctor Farley was born at a point near the mouth of Pond Creek, in Pike County, Kentucky, on the 19th of February, 1866, and is a son of Thomas and Nancy (Pilson) Farley, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Kentucky. Thomas Farley as a member of the Third Virginia Regiment served as a gallant soldier of the Confederacy in the Civil war, he having been in the command of Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson at the time when that intrepid officer met his death in battle, and he served also in the command of General Lee, with whose forces he was at Appomattox at the time of the final surrender. Thomas Farley became a substantial farmer in what is now Logan County, West Virginia, and here he served as justice of the peace and also as county assessor.

Doctor Farley gained his early education in the schools of Pike County, Kentucky, and Logan County, West Virginia. After leaving the high school at Pikeville, Kentucky, he was for ten years a successful teacher in the public schools of Logan County, West Virginia, and in the meanwhile he determined to prepare himself for the medical profession. In 1893 he graduated in the medical department of the University of Louisville, Kentucky, and after thus receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine he was for ten years established in the successful practice of his profession at Logan, judicial center of Logan County. Upon the organization of the United States Coal & Oil Company in 1903 Doctor Farley became its official physician and surgeon at Holden, and under its reorganization as the Island Creek Coal Company he has continued in charge of the medical and surgical service of all of its mines and incidental operations, besides having executive management of the excellently equipped and thoroughly modern hospital which the company established at Holden, the building having been erected and its equipment installed under the personal supervision of Doctor Farley. This hospital, which was erected in 1907, has accommodations for fifty patients. In the war period, when work at the coal mines was brought up to the maximum production, Doctor Farley found exigent demands upon his time and attention in this connection, but he found opportunity also to give effective service as a member of the Logan County Medical Examining Board in connection with the drafting of soldiers, and also to give vital aid in the advancing of the various patriotic enterprises and movements in the county. The doctor has taken two effective post-graduate courses in the medical department of his alma mater, the University of Kentucky, and a similar course at Miami Medical College, Cincinnati, Ohio. He is an active and valued member of the Logan County Medical Society, and is identified also with the West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He has completed the circle of both the York and Scottish Rites of the Masonic fraternity, in the former of which his maximum affiliation is with the Commandery of Knights Templars at Logan, and in the latter of which he has received the thirty-second degree, besides which he is a member of the Mystic Shrine, Knights of Pythias, Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Improved Order of Red Men. His religious faith is that of the Baptist Church, and his wife holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

In 1904 Doctor Farley wedded Miss Matewood Moore, daughter of F. R. and Belle (O'Brien) Moore, of Louisa, Kentucky, and the three children of this union are Mildred, Thomas Frederick and Elizabeth. The elder daughter is, in 1922, a student in Chatham Institute at Chatham, Virginia, and the two younger children are attending the public schools at Holden. The doctor is unwavering in his allegiance to the democratic party and, as previously noted, is president of the County Court. He is a grandson of John Farley and a descendant of one of the three Farley brothers who came from their native Ireland and became early settlers in the Kanawha Valley, in what is now West Virginia. Doctor Farley has five brothers who likewise are physicians, and are individually mentioned on other pages of this work.

He never fully recovered his health from the hardships of his prison experience. Francis A. While in college he was a member of the Phi Chi college fraternity. Dr. Fortney did post-graduate work, specializing in diseases of children and of the stomach, at the New York Post Graduate School in 1916 and in 1919. After graduation he located at Hundred in Wetzel County in 1905, and in addition to his extensive medical and surgical practice in that community he has served as city health officer, is a member in good standing of the Wetzel County, State and American Medical Associations, and was liberal with his professional abilities, time and money in support of all patriotic measures during the war. Dr. Fortney is a republican and is affiliated with Hundred Lodge No. 84, Knights of Pythias.

Mrs. Fortney, whom he married at Washington, D. C., in 1905, was before her marriage Dr. Mary J. Fansler, daughter of William L. and Ruth M. (Morrison) Fansler. Her father was a farmer and cattleman of Preston County, and served as constable of Union District a number of years.

Mrs. Fortney is a graduate physician from the Keokuk Medical College at Keokuk, Iowa.

SANFORD J. TALKINGTON is a native West Virginian and has been a resident of Wetzel County over thirty-five years. During that time he has become a recognized leader in the diversified agricultural enterprises of the country around Hundred, and from the farm his interests have extended to the town, where he is president of the prosperous Bank of Hundred.

Mr. Talkington was born in Marion County, West Virginia, August 24, 1855. His father, Alexander Talkington, was born in Pennsylvania in 1804, moved to Marion County when a young man, married there and set up a pioneer blacksmith shop. His skill at this trade made him a very useful member of the community, and he lived there until his death in 1858, at the comparatively early age of fifty-one. He was a democrat in politics and a member of the Baptist Church. Alexander Talkington married Mary Johnston, who was born in Pennsylvania in 1814, and survived her husband forty years. She died at the home of her son in Hundred in 1898. Sanford was the twelfth and youngest child of his parents. Lucinda, the oldest, became the wife of George L. Furbree, a farmer, and both died at Manington, a large part of the modern city of that name being built on the old Furbree farm. Hannah became the wife of Jackson Eflaw, a minister of the Baptist Church, and both are now deceased, she passing away in Monongalia County. Elizabeth died as a young woman. William died in Preston County. Margaret, who died in Greene County, Pennsylvania, at the age of seventy-five, was the wife of Shelby Cumberland, a farmer still living in Monongalia County. Elvira lives at Centerville, Appanoose County, Iowa, widow of Aaron Cross, who was a farmer and died in Oregon. Albert is a farmer in Monongalia County.

Sanford J. Talkington was three years old when his father died, and in 1866 his mother moved to Monongalia County, and he remained with her and had an increasing share of the labor of her farm until he was twenty-four. He finished his education in the country schools of Monongalia County and for six years combined farming with teaching. When Mr. Talkington came to Wetzel County in 1885 he located on the farm which he owns and occupies today, a mile and a half east of Hundred. His farm comprises a hundred twenty-seven acres and has been made the scene of some very successful diversified farming. He has a modern home and thoroughly up-to-date outbuildings, his place being on the State Road, between Hundred and New Freeport, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Talkington was one of the founders of the Bank of Hundred in 1903, and except for two years has been president of the institution from the beginning. It is a bank that has grown and prospered, and its capital stock is now worth more than double the par value. Mr. Talkington was deputy assessor of Wetzel County from 1908 to 1916, and at all times has been deeply interested in community affairs, and during the World War bore his share of the burden both financially and in active leadership in promoting the cause of the Government. He is a democrat, and a trustee of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In 1884, in Monongalia County, where she was born, he married Miss Margaretta Maple, daughter of John and Catherine (Throckmorton) Maple, now deceased. Her father was a farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Talkington became the parents of seven children: Nora, who died at the age of four months; Miss Sadie, a teacher in the public schools of Hundred, who finished her education in the Fairmont State Normal School; Ida, twin sister of Sadie, housekeeper for her parents; Bertha L., wife of James A. Sanney, owner of a farm adjoining the Talkington homestead; Clarence, who graduated from the Clarksburg Business College and is a traveling salesman, with home at Cameron, West Virginia; Emma, who died in infancy; and Miss May, a teacher in the schools at Hundred and a member of the class of 1922 at the State Normal School of Fairmont.

JAMES E. DOYLE, former sheriff of Marshall County, is now engaged in the real estate and insurance business at McMechen, this county, where he is vice-president of the McMechen Bank. He was born at what is now the village of Benwood, this county, October 3, 1856, a son of William and Rebecca (Piatt) Doyle. The father was formerly identified with river navigation in this section and later was employed in steel mills. He was venerable in years at the time of his death, which occurred at McMechen. He was twelve years of age when the family came to Marshall County, Winchester, Virginia, and his father, Peter Doyle, was one of the first school teachers in the county, his school having been held in an old brick church and among his pupils having been members of the McMechen family. He died of smallpox when his son William was about nineteen years old. Mrs. William Doyle was born and reared in Ohio County, this state, and was fifty-seven years of age at the time of her death. Of the two children James E., of this sketch, is the elder, and the younger, Albert W., died at the age of forty years.

James E. Doyle attended school until he was fourteen years old and then found employment in the mills of the Wheeling Steel & Iron Company, with which he continued his alliance from 1871 until 1896, in which latter year he was elected sheriff of Marshall County on the republican ticket. From 1910 to 1914 he served as United States marshal for the Northern District of West Virginia, in which office he likewise made an admirable record. Mr. Doyle attended every republican State Convention in West Virginia from 1884 to 1896, and in political and official lines he has gained a remarkably wide acquaintanceship with leading citizens of the state. He continued his service as sheriff until 1900, and was mayor of McMechen in 1903-4, the main issue on which he was elected to this office being the enforcement of law in the city. He gave a vigorous and effective administration of municipal affairs, brought about the early closing of saloons and a general cleanup of adverse conditions which existed.

Mr. Doyle has been a prominent exponent of the real estate business at McMechen for several years past, and among his operations was the opening of an attractive addition to the city and the improving of several blocks now in the center of the town. He was one of the organizers of the local bank and has been a director of the same from the beginning, besides which he has been its vice president since 1909. The bank bases its operations upon a capital of $60,000 and its deposits average about $500,000. The institution has paid regular five per cent cash dividends, besides stock dividends. Mr. Doyle is actively affiliated with the Masonic fraternity.

At the age of twenty-one years Mr. Doyle wedded Elizabeth Quigley, who was born in Ohio County, this state, a daughter of Andrew Quigley, a brick manufacturer in that county, where he served for many years as justice of the peace. Of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle the eldest, William E., a bachelor, and a machinist by trade, died at the age of forty-one years; Earl and Jesse are employed in the steel mills; Rosella is the wife of Alvin J. Kittelwell, of McMechen, who is in the employ of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company; Carrie is the wife of Charles B. Dailey, who is in the employ of the same railroad company; James E., Jr., who remains at the parental home, is employed in a local foundry, he having served in the Quartermaster's Department of the United States Army in the period of American participation in the World war; and Luella is the youngest member of the parental home circle.

THOMAS R. PARK has attained venerable years, and half of his lifetime has been spent in Parkersburg. He is especially widely known for his long service in the oil barrel cooage business with the Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Park was born April 2, 1837, one mile from Creston, then in Wood now in Wirt County, West Virginia. His mother was born in 1800. His father, Joseph Park, was born in 1791, and by trade was a blacksmith. He was a youthful volunteer for service in the War of 1812, joining Captain Willoughby Morgan's Company and was in every engagement of that command up to and including the battle of Blackrock. He was taken prisoner there, and remained a prisoner of war at Quebec until peace was declared.

Thomas R. Park was a man grown when western Virginia was made into the State of West Virginia, and he acquired his education in the subscription and old field schools. For several years he taught school as a profession, and at an early period in the history of the petroleum industry he became identified with the coopeage business in the manufacture of oil barrels. In 1878 he removed to Parkersburg, and thereafter for over a quarter of a century was superintendent in charge of the oil barrel and stave business at Parkersburg for the Standard Oil Company.

A quiet and efficient business man, Mr. Park has rather avoided the responsibilities of public office, but he has the distinction of being one of the few surviving delegates to the Constitutional Convention of 1871-72. He was elected to represent Jackson County. He also served one term as justice of the peace. He is a democrat, and he cast his first presidential vote for Stephen A. Douglas in 1860 and has never missed a general election, casting his vote in 1920 for Mr. Cox. He was initiated, passed and raised in Ashton Lodge No. 12 of the Masonic Order at Ravenswood, West Virginia, and has filled all the offices in the Blue Lodge and has also taken eighteen degrees in the Scottish Rite. He has been a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, since 1859.

March 25, 1858, at Burning Springs, West Virginia, Mr. Park married Miss Lucretia C. Petty, daughter of William and Margaret (Ball) Petty. The Petty and Ball families are both of Old Virginia stock. Mr. and Mrs. Park have six children: William Van Allen, who married Vera Stuart; Margaret Anna; Alice Elma; Joseph Roger, who married Ora C. Poland; Elizabeth May, wife of E. A. Ingersoll; and Minnie Myrtle.

JOSEPH ROGER PARK, known everywhere among his business and social companions in Parkersburg as Joe Park, has lived in that city more than forty years, and his active manhood has been devoted to business with success and honor.

He is a son of Thomas R. Park, prominently known in Parkersburg, and one of the surviving members of the State Constitutional Convention of 1871. Joseph R. Park was born on a farm in Jackson County, West Virginia, November 4, 1864. The first twelve years of his life his home was at Ravenswood, and for two years at Burning Springs. He attended school there, and in the fall of 1878 came to Parkersburg, where his father became superintendent of the local coopeage interests of the Standard Oil Company. Here he completed his public school education and subsequently attended night school.

Mr. Park at the age of sixteen became an employe of the Standard Oil Company. He left that service to become shipping clerk in a wholesale grocery house, and for fourteen years was identified with the wholesale grocery business. Since then he has conducted a profitable enterprise as a merchandise broker, and is also first vice president of the Wood County Bank. For ten years he was a director of the Traders Building Association.

Mr. Park served a time as a member of the Parkersburg Board of Education, is a staunch democrat, and a member of the Order of Stewards of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In Masonry he is a Knight Templar and thirty-second degree Scottish Rite and a member of the Mystic Shrine. In 1903 he married Ora Cornelia Poland, daughter of John T. Poland, of Parkersburg. Their two children are Lucretia Virginia, born April 3, 1909, and Joseph Roger, Jr., born September 7, 1913.

EDWIN BRICK THOMPSON, M. D., who is in charge of mine practice for the Cleveland Cliff Iron Company and the Wood Coal Company at Ethel, Logan County, was born at Lore City, Guernsey County, Ohio, on the 20th of October, 1890, and is a son of John A. and Mary A. (Todd) Thompson, both likewise natives of Guernsey County and representative of pioneer families of the Buckeye State. The father became one of the substantial farmers and influential citizens of his native county, where he died in July, 1918, at the age of sixty-nine years, and where his widow still resides on the old homestead farm. Mr. Thompson achieved distinctive success in the breeding and raising of high-grade sheep, cattle and horses, and his authoritative knowledge of values led to his being frequently selected as judge at stock shows and similar exhibitions at county fairs. He was one of the founders and became president of the Byesville First National Bank, was a member of the Presbyterian Church from his early youth and served as a elder in the same, his widow likewise having long been devoted member. William, eldest of their five sons, is vice president of the First National Bank at Byesville; Elmo is one of the principals in the Thompson Hardware Company at Grandville, Ohio; James, a graduate of Wooster University, is agricultural agent of Guernsey County and is associated with his brother Frank in the management of the old home farm on which they were born.

The preliminary education of Doctor Thompson was gained in the district school near the home farm, and in 1910 he graduated from the high school at Cambridge in his native county. He completed his technical course in the Medical College of Virginia at Richmond. He graduated a member of the class of 1917, and after receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine he gave several months of service at St. Vincent's Hospital, Norfolk, Virginia, where he gained valuable clinical experience. On the 1st of November, 1917, he came to Logan County, West Virginia, after having passed examination before the State Board of Medical Examiners, and he is making here a most excellent record in his profession. He is a member of the Logan County Medical Society, is affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and is a member of the Presbyterian Church. April 25, 1917, recorded the marriage of Doctor Thompson and Miss Nellie Cronley, daughter of James Cronley, of Frostberg, Maryland, and she is a popular factor in the social life of the home community. She served three years as a nurse at Mercy Hospital, Baltimore, Maryland.

NAAMAN JACKSON, president of the First National Bank of Logan, which he helped organize, is a lawyer by profession and also made a very successful record as an educator. He is a citizen of well balanced character and ambitions, and has found his best satisfactions in work somehow associated with the welfare and vital interests of his fellow men rather than in money seeking.

Mr. Jackson was born at Trace in Boyd County, Kentucky, November 13, 1873. His grandfather, Richard Jackson, was a native of Russell County, Virginia, and was an early settler in Lawrence County, Kentucky. Richard Clayton Jackson, father of the Logan banker, was born in Lawrence County, Kentucky, grew up in Boyd County, in 1900 moved to Greenup County, and is now living at the Town of Greenup. He is sixty-nine years of age. He married Anne Elizabeth Campbell, who died in 1915. She was a daughter of Nimrod Campbell, formerly of Metz, Marion County, West Virginia. Richard C. Jackson is a member of the Methodist Church and a republican.

Naaman Jackson is the oldest in a family of four children. His brother John W. was formerly a teacher and is now a resident of Barboursville, West Virginia. Lora Deane has devoted most of her active life to teaching, studied in the Universities of Kentucky and West Virginia, and is now a teacher in the Lincoln High School at Charleston, West Virginia. Inez Ota, who also had some experience as a teacher, is the widow of Charles A. Vinson and lives at Greenup, Kentucky, with her father.

Naaman Jackson acquired his early education in Lawrence and Boyd counties, Kentucky, and set the example for the younger children in the teaching profession. After teaching five terms of school he entered, in 1896, the National Normal University of Lebanon, Ohio, taught after he left that school, and during 1900-01 completed his legal education in the Huntington Law School at Huntington, Tennessee. After coming to West Virginia he taught in different rural districts, and also taught a private normal school of his own at Effie in Wayne County, where he had many pupils as old or older than himself. He was principal of the Oak Hill School in Fayette County and of the school at Mount Hope. Mr. Jackson has been admitted to the bar in Greenup and Carter counties, Kentucky, and in Logan, Cabell, and Fayette counties, West Virginia. He began practice in 1903 at Aracoma, the little community which subsequently was renamed Logan and is the county seat of Logan County. Mr. Jackson retains a strong liking for the practice of law, though after helping organize the First National Bank of Logan in 1906 he accepted the post of cashier, and has been continuously in the service of that institution. In February, 1921, he was elected its president.

In 1906, the same year that he became a banker, he married Julia Yantus Dingess, of Chapmanville, West Virginia, daughter of Allen Dingess. Mrs. Jackson is a member of the Baptist Church. Fraternally Mr. Jackson is affiliated with Aracoma Lodge No. 99, A. F. and A. M., which he served as master two years, is a member of Logan Chapter, R. A. M., Huntington Commandery, K. T., and Beni-Kedem Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston. He is a republican in politics.

DON CHAFIN. Logan County's best known citizen is Don Chafin, business man and public official. His abilities have given him an unusual sphere of usefulness from early boyhood. He has taught school, been a merchant, is interested in banking and coal operations, has twice filled the office of sheriff, and represents a family that has supplied a number of courageous and capable officials to the county.

Don Chafin was born on Maribone Creek, near the present site of Kermit, in what was then Logan County but now Mingo County June 26, 1887, son of Francis Marion and Esther (Brewer) Chafin. His mother is now living near Logan, on Island Creek, in a home built by her son Don. Francis M. Chafin, who died in 1903, at the age of fifty-four, was the son of a lieutenant in a Virginia regiment in the Confederate Army. Francis M. Chafin served as sheriff of Logan County from 1894 to 1898, before Mingo County was separated. His brother John was county and circuit clerk for eighteen years, until his death, and another brother, James Chafin, was county clerk of Mingo County from 1896 until his death in 1900. A cousin of Don Chafin was the late Judge J. B. Wilkinson, who for twelve years was prosecuting attorney of Logan County and for twelve years circuit judge, resigning from the bench and dying in 1900. The Chafins came to Logan County from Tazewell County, Virginia.

Don Chafin was the sixth in a family of eleven children. There were four sons. William has been blind for the past four years and lives with his brother Don. John B. at the time of his death was a railroad engineer of the Norfolk and Western Railroad. James A. died when thirteen years of age.

Don Chafin acquired his early education in the Town of Logan while his father was sheriff, and later at the Dingess School in Mingo County, and also did work in Marshall College and took a commercial course in the Mountain State Business College at Parkersburg. He taught his first term at Dingess at the age of fifteen. In the intervals of school teaching he clerked for the firm of Hurst and Persinger for eight years. He was employed in the commissary and business offices of the Pearl Coal Company of Fairmont, and in 1904 joined the business firm of F. P. Hurst at Island Creek for two years. Then for a few months he was associated in business with Alex. Mounts, his brother-in-law.

Mr. Chafin was only twenty-one years of age when he was elected assessor of Logan County, in 1908. In 1912 he was elected for his first term as sheriff. At the close of that term, in 1916, he was appointed county clerk, and in 1920 was again made a candidate for sheriff and elected, beginning his official term January 1, 1921. The efficiency he has exemplified in the conduct of his office is too well known to require comment.

In 1905 Mr. Chafin married Mary Mounts, who was born on Gilbert Creek in Mingo County, daughter of Moses Mounts. Mr. and Mrs. Chafin have six children: James A., Marion Rathburn, Lillie Hazel, Mary Frances, Charlotte Jane and William Al.

Mr. Chafin is affiliated with the Elks Lodge. He was one of the organizers of the Aldredge Coal Company, operating near Logan, also of the Chafin-Jones-Heatherman Coal Company, whose operations are at Peach Creek. He is a director and one of the large stockholders in the Bank of Logan, which was established late in 1920, with a capital of $100,- 000, and already has deposits aggregating $1,000,000. He is also a heavy stockholder in the Guyan Valley Bank.

FRANKLIN EARNEST FLOWERS, M. D. A physician and surgeon who has rendered a splendid service in the community of Mannington for a dozen years past, Dr. Flowers is the son of an old and well known physician in the same county.

His father was the late Dr. A. J. Flowers, who was born in Marshall County, West Virginia, March 9, 1856. For some years he was a minister of the gospel, later studied and took his degree in medicine at West Penn Medical College, and for many years was a capable practitioner in the Mannington district of Marion County. He died January 5, 1916. Dr. A. J. Flowers married Sarah Earnest, who was born in Marshall County, April 23, 1865, daughter of Henry Earnest and Rebecca Ott. Henry Earnest was a Union soldier in the Civil war.

Franklin E. Flowers was born while his parents lived in Armstrong County, Pennsylvania, on August 7, 1884. He acquired a public school education, attended the West Virginia preparatory medical school, and then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Baltimore, Maryland, where he was graduated M. D. in 1907. On the same date the University of West Virginia conferred upon him the honorary degree of M. D. Before beginning practice Dr. Flowers had the experience of an interne in the Haskins Hospital at Wheeling for about eighteen months, and after eighteen months of practice in Monongalia County located at Mannington. JAMES PHILIP CLIFFORD. It requires the help of no friendly pen to bring to public notice the good citizenship and high professional standing of such a man as James Philip Clifford, a representative member of the Clarksburg bar, for his fellow citizens have known him all his life and, commanding their respect and confidence as neighbors and friends, he has steadily made his way and has honorably earned his large measure of professional success.

Mr. Clifford was born at Clarksburg, West Virginia, October 5, 1889, and is a son of James Philip and Calore Virginia (Stout) Clifford, and a grandson of James and Sarah (Ruddy) Clifford. The grandparents were natives of County Mayo, Ireland, but the greater part of their lives were spent in Harrison County, West Virginia. In this county their son, James Philip Clifford, was born in 1858, and died at Roswell, New Mexico, in 1898. For many years he had been successfully engaged in the practice of law at Clarksburg, being a graduate of Rock Hill College, in the State of Maryland, and of the University of Virginia, earning his degree of Bachelor of Arts in the former institution and of Bachelor of Law in the latter. He was prominent and influential in republican politics, and served four years in the office of county prosecuting attorney.

James Philip Clifford married Miss Calore Virginia Stout, who died in Tucson, Arizona, in 1912. She was a member of one of the large and highly respected old families of Harrison County. Mr. and Mrs. Clifford became the parents of four children: Lucy Clare, now Mrs. M. O. Bond; James Philip, of Clarksburg; Charles Patterson, of Wheeling, West Virginia; and Mary Ruddy Clifford, residing with her sister, Mrs. Bond. Mr. Clifford was a faithful Catholic.

James Philip Clifford not only bears his father's honored name but has followed in his professional footsteps. After attending Broadus Institute at Clarksburg, he entered Rock Hill College, as did his father, from which he was graduated with the degree of A. B., then entered Harvard University, where he won his degree of LL. B. in 1912, was admitted to the West Virginia bar and in the same year began the practice of his profession at Clarksburg and has rapidly forged his way to the front.

In 1913 Mr. Clifford married Miss Georgie B. Edmiston, of Buckhannon, West Virginia, who is a granddaughter of Hon. Mathew Edmiston, who for several years was a Supreme Court judge in West Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Clifford have two daughters: Mary Virginia and Catherine Calore.

Active as a citizen, Mr. Clifford is ever watchful concerning the best interests of Clarksburg and is influential in many directions, but in an unofficial capacity, for he has never consented to serve in a public one. He is identified with several law associations and is a member of the order of Knights of Columbus.

ANTHONY T. MORRIS (Dedicated to the Memory of my Father and Mother—Pressley D. Morris). For many years a member of the Wetzel County bar, Anthony T. Morris was also a successful farmer and stockman, and was a dutiful soldier of the Union during the Civil War. He and his good wife reared a large family of children, and these sons and daughters honor their parents even more for their character than for the material achievements of their lives.

He was born in Wetzel County December 11, 1846, son of Micah A. and Elizabeth (Smith) Morris. He was only fourteen when the Civil War broke out, but on August 11, 1864, at the age of eighteen, he enlisted as a private in Company P of the 6th West Virginia Infantry and served until honorably discharged June 10, 1865. Anthony Morris after the war took up farming and stock raising and developed extensive interests in that line. In the meantime he also became associated with public affairs in the county, and this led to the study of law, and in 1882 he was admitted to the bar, and from that year enjoyed an extensive practice in all the local courts until his death which occurred August 26, 1906. He was elected Justice of the Peace of Center District in 1876 and was re-elected in 1880, but resigned two years later. He was an active member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

March 22, 1865, Anthony T. Morris married Tabitha E. DuLancy. Of their children the oldest was Franklin M., born January 4, 1866, and died May 4, 1876. The second Sylvania, born May 9, 1868, died July 23, 1873. Amanda A., the oldest now living was born July 22, 1870, and is the wife of William C. Mayhall, a hotel proprietor of New Martinsville. Florence E., born January 20, 1873, died March 2, 1873. The oldest living son is Pressley D. Morris, now Judge of the Second Judicial District and whose successful career as a lawyer and jurist is noted elsewhere. Mary E. was born October 7, 1876, and died December 8, 1904. Clark J., born January 21, 1879, is in the oil business at Bristow, Oklahoma. Eliza J., born September 22, 1881, is the wife of Dallas Clark, a merchant of Wetzel County. Riley J., born April 3, 1884, is a farmer at Maud in Wetzel County. Cynthia, born October 10, 1888, is the wife of Wilbur Brown, a merchant at Pine Grove in Wetzel County, and who was a sergeant of Infantry during the World War, being in France six months. Romeo, born November 6, 1895, is an oil field worker at Bristow, Oklahoma.

Another son, Newman A. Morris, born December 11, 1891, is one of the honored soldier dead of Wetzel County. He went to Camp Lee at Petersburg, Virginia, with his West Virginia comrades on September 19, 1917, was assigned to duty with the 314th Field Artillery and on December 20, 1917, was transferred to Company C, Eighth Machine Gun Battalion at Camp Green, South Carolina, where he was in training until March, 1918, when he went overseas. He was put on front line duty June 1, 1918, and was in the major offensives of the Aisne, Champagne-Marne, Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel, Meuse-Argonne, and on July 15, 1918, at Chateau Thierry was wounded, sustaining a compound fracture of the leg and was taken to a base hospital and died in the American Red Cross Hospital No. 2 at Paris September 27, 1918. He was buried at Saresnes, France, a suburb of Paris, but his body was returned to the United States August 25, 1921, and is now at rest beside his father and mother at Limestone cemetery in Wetzel County. The mother died January 9, 1919, within three months after receiving news of her son's death.

The following letter was sent to the mother of Newman Morris by Mrs. William Barclay Parsons, nurse at Americas Red Cross Hospital No. 2.

(Tabitha Morris, Maud, W. Va.)

Dear Mrs. Morris:

I cannot possibly express to you my sorrow and my sympathy for you in the death of your dear and splendid son Newman.

Truly "greater love hath no man than this that he lay down his life for his friends." For two or three weeks we had been deeply concerned about your son, and you may feel perfectly sure that everything known in surgical science was done for him. Everyone loved him, and nurses and doctor and orderlies were only too glad to do anything which they could for him. The infection from the wound was too strong and though his strength was wonderful, it was not adequate to resist.

A week ago they amputated his leg; it was the one chance to save him. He was most anxious to keep this from you and he and I talked about it and agreed that when he got home you would be so glad to see him that you would not mind about the leg, but that if I should write about it before hand you would feel so badly for him that it would worry you too much. His thought was of you always. He told me after the amputation that he could bear such a thing better than many of the men because he was so placed in life that he would not have to go out and work but could be useful at home and be taken care of. He had the bravest heart and never complained; he would always answer when I asked him how he felt, "I'm getting on alright, just a little pain in my leg."

A few days before he died they moved him into a room by himself. A big vase of flowers was on a table near him, placed so that he could look at them, and he was as comfortable as was possible. He kept up his courage and had hope that he would recover up to the last, although he knew he was fighting for his life. He became delirious and unconscious several hours before the end so he was spared that suffering.

He spoke again to me during his last days about not writing to you that he had lost his leg, and I assured him that I would not and he said again that it would be easier for you if he told you himself. The doctors found that the infection was so general all through his body that recovery was absolutely impossible.

I send you a little blue flower from those which lay on his coffin; the others were chrysanthemums and some white roses and lilies. The American flag covered the coffin and he lies in the cemetery at Saresnes, just outside Paris, besides many of his comrades who also gave their lives for the greatest cause men have ever fought and died for.

Dear Mrs. Morris believe that you have the deepest and most sincere sympathy of all of us who knew your brave son.

Faithfully yours,

Mrs. Wm. Barclay Parsons.

For six years before his elevation to the bench he was Commissioner of Chancery for Wetzel County. On the bench or as a private citizen Judge Morris has had a career associated with important usefulness throughout Wetzel County. He is kindly, a social lawyer, and with a thorough talent for leadership. During the World War he was chairman of the Legal Advisory Board for the County, made speeches in behalf of the various issues throughout the county, and his natural inclination for patriotic activity was supplemented by the deep interest he has because of the service of his brother and other members of his family.

GEORGE W. BISHOP, general manager of the Williamson Supply Company, one of the leading business concerns in the city of Williamson, Mingo County, was born at Powell, Delaware County, Ohio, March 30, 1838, and is a son of James and Julia (Britton) Bishop, both likewise natives of the Buckeye State and both of English ancestry, the original American representative of the Bishop family having come from England and settled in Virginia. James Bishop has been one of the representative farmers of Delaware County, Ohio, and is a substantial citizen who has always taken loyal interest in community affairs, he having served as a member of the school board and having held other positions of local trust.

In the public schools of his native county George W. Bishop continued his studies until he had profited by the advantages of the Powell High School, and thereafter he was for three years a student in Bliss College at Columbus, Ohio, where he took both academic and business courses. He then, at the age of eighteen years, found employment in the transportation department of the Norfolk & Western Railroad, in its terminal offices at Columbus, Ohio, where he remained six months. He was then transferred to Bluefield, West Virginia, where for six months he was chief clerk in the office of the trainmaster. He then, in 1906, accepted a position with the Superior Supply Company at Bluefield, with which concern he remained eight years and with which he eventually won advancement to the position of assistant general manager. In 1921, at the organization of the Williamson Supply Company, Mr. Bishop became treasurer and general manager of the new corporation, and his long experience in this line of enterprise, combined with his exceptional initiative and executive ability, is proving potent in the developing of the substantial and important business for the company. He is president of the local organization of the National Association of Credit Men, is vice president of the Chamber of Commerce, is one of the progressive and valued members of the Kiwanis Club at Williamson, and he and his wife hold membership in the Presbyterian Church.

At Bristol, Tennessee, in 1907, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Bishop and Miss Hazel Shumate, a daughter of John and Nancy Margaret (Roberts) Shumate, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Kentucky. Mr. and Mrs. Bishop have one son, George W., Jr.

SPOTSWOOD H. GOODLOE. Prominent among those who have contributed to the business growth and development of Mingo County is Spotswood H. Goodloe of Williamson. As a business man, in scope of comprehension, in breadth of action and energy of administration, he ranks with the leaders of his day and community. During a career that is just attaining its fullest fruition he has been identified with a number of enterprises, all of which have been benefited by his natural ability, irresistible energy and versatility of thought and action.

Mr. Goodloe was born February 1, 1830, at Greenfield, Virginia, a son of A. M. and Jennie R. (Page) Goodloe, natives of Virginia. He belongs to an old Virginia family and is of Scotch and English descent. A. M. Goodloe in early life was engaged in railroad contracting, and built a part of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, but later turned his attention to farming, in which he spent his last years. During the war between the states he fought in the ranks of the Confederate army and established a splendid record for bravery and faithful performance of duty. A great friend of education, he interested himself actively in spreading the influence of the public school system, and all worthy religious and charitable movements likewise received his support. In civic affairs he was constructive, and in every way he was a valuable man in the life of his community.

Spotswood H. Goodloe attended the graded and high schools at Big Stone Gap, Virginia, and upon the completion of his studies, when he was sixteen years of age, secured employment in the general store of an uncle, T. B. Goodloe, at Afton, Virginia. He remained with his uncle for two years and then went to Red Jacket, West Virginia, to work for the old Logan Coal Company, now known as the Red Jacket Consolidated Coal Company. He remained with this concern for about six years at the different points where operations were being carried on, and for two and one-half years was clerk and assistant store manager at Red Jacket and later at Thacker. He next joined the Roanoke Coal and Coke Company, as purchasing agent, a position which he filled for about five years, and in 1903 joined the Vulcan Coal Company as purchasing agent, remaining with that concern until 1909. In that year he came to Williamson, West Virginia, to look after some interests which he had at this point. During the years he had been with the Vulcan Coal Company he had embarked in the men's furnishing goods and clothing business at Williamson, placing his brother in charge, and on locating at Williamson he added to his interests by establishing himself in the real estate business, acquiring coal properties and selling them. He was thus engaged until 1916, when he entered the coal business and organized the Wilhelmina Coal Company and the East Williamson Land Company. About this time he with his brother, H. A. Goodloe, of Williamson, West Virginia, sold a large tract of land, about 5,000 acres, in Kentucky, a transaction that proved very profitable. In 1919 he was the organizer of the Pond Creek By-Product Coal Company, which was later sold to the Norfolk & Western Railway Company, and in 1920 he organized the Knox Creek Coal Company, which he still controls with its accompanying 1,800 acres of coal lands. Mr. Goodloe was also the organizer in 1918 of the Kirkland Coal Company in Mingo County. In December, 1921, he effected the consolidation of the Wilhelmina Coal Company and the East Williamson Land Company, which took the new name of Wilhelmina Collieries Company. In 1920 he purchased the West Virginia By-Products Company, and in the same year sold the same company to some Williamson business men. He also organized the Leckieville Land Company, a holding company.

At the present time Mr. Goodloe is president of the West Virginia By-Products Company, the Knox Creek Coal Company, the Kirkland Coal Company, and is secretary and treasurer of the Wilhelmina Collieries Company. His record as a business man has been one which reflects the greatest credit upon his integrity and business ideals, for the huge interests that he controls have all been fostered and developed in a strictly legitimate way and have attained their prosperity under his capable and entirely above-board direction. Mr. Goodloe is a Presbyterian in his religious faith and a supporter of worthy church movements. Likewise he takes an active part in the civic life of his community, and his name has been identified with a number of progressive and constructive enterprises. As a fraternalist he is a Scottish Rite Mason and a Knight Templar, and as a clubman belongs to the Kiwanis and Old Colony clubs.

In 1914, at Roanoke, Virginia, Mr. Goodloe was united in marriage with Miss Willie Charlotte Goodykoontz, daughter of William and Lucinda (Woolwine) Goodykoontz, natives of Virginia and prominent agricultural people, and sister of Hon William Goodykoontz, member of Congress from this district. Mr. and Mrs. Goodloe are the parents of one son, William Spotswood, who was born in 1920.

He was born in Paw Paw District, this county, March 24, 1879, and is a son of Alfred S. and Sarah E. (Cunningham) Prichard, both likewise natives of Marion County, the father having been born in March, 1849, and having died in December, 1915. Alfred S. Prichard devoted his attention to farm industry until his removal to Fairmont, where he continued to be engaged in business pursuits until the close of his life. Carter, the oldest in a family of seven children was born and reared on a farm, acquired a common school education, supplemented by the advantages of Salem College, later the State Normal School at Fairmont, and too both the literary and law courses in West Virginia University at Morgantown. Mr. Carter was admitted to the bar in 1906, and immediately began practice at Clarksburg. He is senior member of the law firm of Carter and Sheets. Mr. Carter is a York and Scottish Rite Mason and a member of the Mystic Shrine, and also belongs to the Elks.

On October 19, 1910, he married Blanch Opal Hardesty, daughter of Robert R. Hardesty, of Shinnston in Harrison County.

JAMES CLIFFORD McMANAWAY, who is engaged in the practice of law at Clarksburg, with offices in the Goff Building, is one of the representative lawyers of the younger generation in his native city and county, which he likewise honored by his loyal service with the American Expeditionary Forces in France during the World war period.

Mr. McManaway was born at Clarksburg, county seat of Harrison County, September 24, 1889, and is a son of John J. and Bee (Clifford) McManaway, both likewise natives of Clarksburg. The parents of John J. McManaway were John and Julia (Poix) McManaway, who were born in Ireland and who early established their residence in West Virginia, where they passed the remainder of their lives. John J. McManaway became influential in political affairs in his native county, as a stalwart democrat. He served as deputy county sheriff and circuit court clerk, and was but thirty-four years of age at the time of his death.

James C. McManaway gained his early education in the schools of his native city, and in 1909 he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from Rock Hill College, at Ellicott City, Maryland. In 1912 he received the degree of Bachelor of Laws from Harvard University, and was admitted to the bar of his native state in November of that year. He engaged in the practice of his profession at Clarksburg, and his law practice here has been interrupted only by the period of his military service in the World war.

In 1916, Mr. McManaway enlisted in Company A, First Regiment, West Virginia National Guard, and in June of that year he was made first lieutenant of his company; he became captain of Company K, First West Virginia Infantry, in March, 1917. With his regiment he entered the Federal service on the 27th day of March, 1917, in command of Company K of the First West Virginia Infantry. When that regiment became part of the Thirty-eighth Division, U. S. A., he was made personnel officer of the division, at Camp Shelby, Mississippi.

In February, 1918, Captain McManaway crossed over to France, as a casual officer assigned to the Army General

J. M. Manaway

Staff College at Langres, from which he graduated; he served as observer with various French, British and American units in action and was then attached to the Ninetieth Division A. E. F. as Asst. G. 2.; served through the St. Mihiel campaign and was promoted major at the close of that action. CECIL OMAR POST, M. D., has gained by his professional ability and sterling personal characteristics a place as one of the representative physicians and surgeons of his native county and is established in successful practice in the City of Clarksburg, the county seat. He was born on a farm in Harrison County, September 10, 1888, and is a son of Michael Olandus Post and Sarah (Norman) Post, both likewise natives of Harrison County, and representatives of old and honored families of this section of the state. Michael R. Post is a son of John Burnside Post, who was a son of Jacob Post, the latter having been a son of Isaac Post. When it is stated that each of these representatives of the family as born and reared in Harrison County it becomes evident that the family was here founded in the early pioneer era, the lineage being traced back through numerous American generations to German origin.

Doctor Post found his childhood and early youth compassed by the benignant influences of the home farm, and his parents reared their children earnestly in the faith of the United Brethren Church, of which they are zealous members. The father is a republican in politics and is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He gave to his children the best possible educational advantages, and after Doctor Post had completed the curriculum of the public schools he was enabled to continue his studies in the West Virginia State Normal School at Fairmont. In 1908 he was graduated from Salem College, and for two years thereafter he was a student in the medical department of the University of West Virginia. He completed his professional course in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in the City of Baltimore, Maryland, from which he received in 1912 his degree of Doctor of Medicine, the University of West Virginia conferring upon him a similar degree in the same year. He has since been continuously engaged in active general practice at Clarksburg, where he is a member of the regular staff of physicians for St. Mary's Hospital, and he is actively affiliated with the Harrison County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society, the Southern Medical Association and the American Medical Association. In the time-honored Masonic fraternity the Doctor has received the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite, besides being a Noble of the Mystic Shrine. He is affiliated also with the Delta Tau Delta college fraternity and the Kappa Psi medical fraternity. He is a republican in his political proclivities and allegiance, and he and his wife are members of the United Brethren and Methodist churches, respectively, in their home city.

In 1912 Doctor Post wedded Miss Clara Clayton, who was born at Wilmington, Delaware, but who was a young woman when she accompanied her parents on their removal to Clarksburg, where she is a popular figure in the representative social activities of the community.

GEORGE LEE DUNCAN is prominently identified with banking enterprise and other important business activities in his native city of Clarksburg, Harrison County, where his advancement and distinctive success represent the results of his own ability and well directed endeavors. He received the advantages of the public schools of Clarksburg, and at the age of sixteen years he assumed the position of book-keeper and office clerk for R. T. Lowmades, with whom he has been continuously associated during the intervening years. In 1896 he entered the private bank of R. T. Lowmades & Company, and in 1905 he became secretary and treasurer of the newly established Lowmades Savings Bank & Trust Company, of which he has since continued the incumbent. Mr. Duncan is president of the West Virginia Bank, one of the oldest banking institutions at Clarksburg, and is also vice president of the Merchants National Bank of this city. He is treasurer of the Clarksburg Gas & Electric Light Company, and is associated with other enterprises of importance, including oil and gas production in this section of the state. His is a record of substantial and worthy achievement, and he commands secure vantage place in connection with the civic and business activities of his native county. He is a loyal supporter of the cause of the democratic party, but has had no ambition for public office of any kind. He has received the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite of the Masonic fraternity, besides being a Noble of the Mystic Shrine and a member of the Elks. He and his wife are communicants of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

In 1898 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Duncan and Miss Gertrude Smith, a daughter of the late A. G. Smith, of Clarksburg. Mr. and Mrs. Duncan have four children, George Lee, Jr., Elizabeth Rankin, Meade Lee and James Jackson.

Mr. Duncan was born at Clarksburg on the 30th of November, 1872, and is a son of James Jackson Duncan and Maude (Lee) Duncan, who likewise were born and reared in this county, and who are representatives of old, honored and influential families of this section of the state.

FRANK VALENTINE LANGFITT, M. D., has made in his profession a record of worthy and successful achievement that has fully justified his choice of vocation, and he is numbered among the representative physicians and surgeons of Harrison County, where he is engaged in practice at Clarksburg, with office at 505 Prunty Building.

Doctor Langfitt was born on a farm in Doddridge County, this state, March 24, 1883, and is a son of Valentine and Caroline (Davis) Langfitt. The father was born in Brooke County, West Virginia, (then Virginia), April 14, 1833, and died in Doddridge County, April 1, 1904. He was a son of John and Martha (Farquer) Langfitt, the former of whom was born either in what is now West Virginia or in Pennsylvania, in 1776, he having been a pioneer in Brooke County and having thence removed to Doddridge County, where he remained until his death, at the age of seventy-three years. Family tradition has it that two brothers named Langfitt came from Scotland to America in the Colonial period, one settling in Pennsylvania and the other in Virginia, the West Virginia family being descendant from the Pennsylvania branch. Mrs. Martha (Farquer) Langfitt was born in what is now West Virginia, in 1787. She was killed by a rolling log which she had dislodged while attempting to extract a stick that was beneath it, and her husband likewise met an accidental death, from injuries received when he was thrown from a horse.

The mother of Doctor Langfitt was born in Doddridge County, June 30, 1836, and there she passed her entire life, her death having occurred June 26, 1920. She was a daughter of William F. Davis, who was born in the part of Virginia now constituting West Virginia, and who was a prosperous farmer of Doddridge County at the time of his death, in 1865, at the age of seventy-one years. Valentine and Caroline (Davis) Langfitt became the parents of twelve children: Elizabeth J., wife of Lewis Bond, deceased; Silas W., a banker; R. Belle, wife of Rev. M. A. Summers; Columbia L., wife of James Jones, deceased; Ila M., wife of J. E. Trainer, deceased; John H., a banker; Samuel E., a dentist; W. Creed, a traveling salesman; Effie M., deceased; Bruce B., a glass manufacturer; Mona G., wife of Dr. C. L. Parks; and Frank V., subject of this sketch. The father was one of the substantial exponents of farm industry in Doddridge County, and represented the same in the West Virginia Legislature. He was a democrat in politics, and he and his wife were zealous members of the Baptist Church. He acquired a large landed estate, and was a man whose life was guided and governed by the highest principles of integrity and honor. Of alert mentality, he became a man of broad information and mature judgment, and he was well fortified for leadership in community sentiment and action.

Reared on the home farm, Doctor Langfitt early began to assist in its work, and after attending the rural schools he continued his studies in turn in Salem College and the West Virginia Wesleyan College. His pre-medical course was obtained in the University of West Virginia, and in 1907 he was graduated in the medical department of the University of Maryland, in Baltimore. After thus receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine he further fortified himself by a year of service as an interne in the Maryland General Hospital at Baltimore, and in 1908 he engaged in the active general practice of his profession at Salem, Harrison County, West Virginia, where he built up a large and successful practice and where he remained until October, 1918, when he was commissioned first lieutenant in the Medical Corps of the United States Army, he having volunteered his services when the nation became involved in the World war. He remained at Camp Greenleaf, Georgia, until December, 1918, when he received his honorable discharge. He then passed the following six months as assistant resident surgeon at St. Agnes Hospital in the City of Baltimore, and thereafter remained one year as resident surgeon in this institution. In 1920 the Doctor returned to Harrison County and established his residence at Clarksburg, the county seat, where he has since continued in an active practice that is largely in the surgical branch of his profession. He is a member of the staff of physicians at the Mason Hospital in this city and is actively identified with the Harrison County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. Doctor Langfitt is aligned in the ranks of the democratic party, is a Knight Templar Mason and has extended his Masonic affiliations to include the Mystic Shrine.

The year 1913 recorded the marriage of Doctor Langfitt and Miss Veda Davis, daughter of Owen T. and Zeta (Summerville) Davis, and the two children of this union are June Leanoire and Frank Valentine, Jr.

RANSEL JOHNSON, one of the influential citizens and successful business men of Clarksburg, Harrison County, was born on a farm on Shinn's Run, this county, June 5, 1865, and is a son of Ransel and Elizabeth (Richardson) Johnson, the former of whom was born in Loudoun County, Virginia, in 1829, and the latter in Clark County, that state, in 1824. Soon after their marriage the parents came to what is now West Virginia and settled on a farm on Coons Run, removal later being made to the farm on Shinn's Run, where the father became one of the energetic and successful exponents of farm industry in the county and a leader in community affairs. He and his wife were life-long members of the Baptist Church, of which he was a most generous and liberal supporter, and in his honor the Johnson Baptist Church of his community was named. He was one of the organizers of this church, aided liberally in the erection of the church building, and was for many years one of the strong pillars of the church. His death occurred in 1885, and his widow passed away in 1906, venerable in years and loved by those who had come within the sphere of her influence. Of their children the following named attained to adult age: Athela J., Wesley R. (now deceased), Samantha, Roberta, Zorada (deceased), Turner A. and Ransel, Jr. Both the Johnson and Richardson families were founded in Virginia in the Colonial days, and representatives of both were patriot soldiers in the war of the Revolution. Joseph Johnson, grandfather of the subject of this review, eventually followed his son to Harrison County, and here he passed the remainder of his life.

Ransel Johnson (II), immediate subject of this review, was reared on the home farm, and that he profited by his early educational advantages, those of the public schools of the period, is shown by the fact that as a young man he became a successful teacher in the schools of his home county, he having advanced his own education by attending, for three years, the State Normal School at Fairmont. Upon the death of his father in 1885 he became administrator of the family estate, and after the old homestead farm had been sold he purchased a small tract of land near Clarksburg. There he maintained his residence from 1889 to 1901, in which latter year he moved to Clarksburg, where for a time he was in the employ of the Stout Lumber Company. He finally purchased the retail end of the business, which he thereafter continued under the title of the Stout-Johnson Lumber Company until 1907, when he sold his interest and engaged independently in the wholesale lumber trade. In 1912 the Johnson-Garrett Lumber Company was formed and it continued a successful wholesale and retail business until 1915, when Mr. Johnson became the sole owner. He continued operations successfully, but in August, 1920, in consonance with his judgment concerning business conditions in general, he began to restrict his business, which is now confined to minor wholesale dealings. He gives the major part of his attention at present to stocks and investments. Mr. Johnson has achieved substantial financial success and reputation as a fair, honorable and progressive business man and loyal and public-spirited citizen. He has been a director of the Farmers Bank of Clarksburg from the time of its organization.

Mr. Johnson and his wife are zealous members of the Baptist Church, with which he united in his early youth, and while residing on the farm he served as deacon of the local church of this denomination. Politically he chooses to vote for the candidate who in his judgment is the one best fitted for office. Yet he leans strongly to democratic party policies. He has been for many years affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

The year 1896 recorded the marriage of Mr. Johnson and Miss Annie B. Goodwin, daughter of Peter I. Goodwin, a well known citizen of Harrison County. The two children of this union are Paul and Mary, and both are members of the Baptist Church.

HUGH GORDON SMITH, of Clarksburg, Harrison County, is prominently identified with the coal production industry in this section of West Virginia, and is a popular citizen of the state that has represented his home from his boyhood. He was born at Stevenstone, Ayrshire, Scotland, November 4, 1879, and is a son of David O. and Jane (Kelso) Smith, both of the staunchest of Scottish ancestry. In 1887 David O. Smith, in company with his wife and their eight children, came to the United States, and on the 17th of April of that year the family arrived at Clarksburg, West Virginia. Soon afterward removal was made to Rosemont, Taylor County, in which locality David O. Smith worked two years at his trade, that of expert coal miner. Removal was then made to Elk Garden, Mineral County, and six years later the family home was established at Midland, Maryland, where the father is now living retired, at a venerable age, his wife having died while the home was at Rosemont, West Virginia. All of the eight children survive the mother and all are now married and well established in life.

Hugh G. Smith was seven years old at the time of the family immigration to the United States, and he received his early education in the schools of West Virginia, though he was but twelve years old when he did his first work in a coal mine. His experience extended until he became a skilled miner, and at the age of twenty-one years he was appointed mine foreman for the Davis Coal & Coke Company at Thomas, Kanawha County. Within a short time thereafter he gained still more gratifying recognition, being chosen manager of mines for the Consolidation Coal Company at Midland, Maryland. In 1907 Mr. Smith opened the Harrison Mine at Rosemont, West Virginia, and this mine he continued to operate until 1919, with residence at Rosemont. In that year he removed with his family to Clarksburg, where the home has since been maintained, as are also his business headquarters, his offices being in the Union Bank Building. He was associated with his brother, Alexander G., and their father in the forming of the Harrison Coal Company, of which he is vice president, as is he also of the Smith Brothers Coal Company, of Lumberport, Harrison County. He is also a director and the general manager of the Franklin Coal Company, is secretary of the Lauretta Coal Company, vice president of the Smith Big Vein Coal Company, and president of the Percy Oil Company. In addition to these important connections Mr. Smith is a director of the Clarksburg Trust Company, the Liberty ss Company of Clarksburg and the Prunty Real Estate npany of this city. He was formerly a director of the yler County Bank, at Grafton. He has served two years chairman of the Clarksburg Coal Club. While the busi- ss interests of Mr. Smith are many and varied, he has en most of his time to the coal industry, and has found ortunity also to give helpful manifestation of his un- ended civic loyalty and progressiveness. He is a valued mber of the Clarksburg Chamber of Commerce, and holds mbership in the Kiwanis Club, the Old Colony Club, the rksburg Country Club and other representative local rganizations of business and social order. Since 1919 he served as commissioner of the Boy Scouts, in the affairs which organization he takes deep interest. He and his e are zealous members of the First Presbyterian Church their home city and the year 1922 finds him in earnest vice as superintendent of its Sunday school. He is liated with the Masonic fraternity, the Independent der of Odd Fellows and the Benevolent and Protective der of Elks.

The year 1900 recorded the marriage of Mr. Smith to ss Jean Kelson Gibson, who was born and reared in est Virginia and who, like himself, is of Scotch lineage. y and Mrs. Smith have two sons, David K. and Thomas M. y is also a versatile writer. The following verse is on native country:

"Scotland is a grand old place,
The land where I was born.
Its beauty and its grandness too—
May it forever dawn.
The garden spot of peace and love,
And friendship with the land above,
Long may the thistle wave in peace,
The emblem of my country."

HOWARD HARWOOD HOLT is editor, owner and publisher the Grafton Sentinel, one of the oldest and most influential wspapers in the state. Practically from the beginning and ough its early destiny the chief figure in its management d editorial policy was the late James W. Holt, father of e present owner.

The Holt family has been in Virginia, Pennsylvania and est Virginia for a number of generations. John W. Holt, a tive of Virginia, was an early shoemaker in Fayette County, nnsylvania, later a farmer there. His son, James W. old, moved to Lewis County, West Virginia, and followed rming. His son, Alfred T. Holt, was born in Pennsylvania d after his marriage settled at Kingwood in Preston County. e was a farmer and one of the highly respected citizens of a locality. He died at Grafton in 1902. His wife, Maria e Stone, was born in Virginia, in Culpeper County, but from rly childhood was reared at Kingwood. She died in 1877, e mother of four children: James W.; Keturah, who mar- ed Joseph N. Brown; Katherine, who married Scott Garner; d the late Judge John Homer Holt of Grafton, whose career riefly sketched elsewhere.

James W. Holt, who died in January, 1918, when in his xty-ninth year, was for more than forty years connected ith the Grafton Sentinel and retained an interest in the per until his death. He was born at Kingwood February 1, 1849, was educated in the old Kingwood Academy and e and former Governor William M. Dawson as boys together arned the printing trade in the office of the Preston County urnal at Kingwood. He was not twenty years of age when e was called to Grafton at the request of John W. Mason, mbrose Snively, Samuel McCormick and others, who wned and were attempting to publish a newspaper in Taylor ounty, then strongly democratic, and thus the young printer ok charge of this enterprise as editor and publisher and rithin a year purchased the plant. In a sense the Grafton entinel is the result of the merging of several old weekly pers of Taylor County. The publication for several years as known as the Eagle-Sentinel, but for half a century it as been the Grafton Sentinel. It was James W. Holt's onnection with the struggling effort that made it a final uccess and incidentally had something to do with changing e politics of the county. James W. Holt held a position e revenue service in the early '80s, was elected mayor f West Grafton in 1885, and under Harrison's administration he was postmaster of Grafton until 1894. For several terms he was a member of the School Board and for one term its president. He was an active Lutheran, interested in Sunday School work, was a Mason and a member of the Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, and for one year colonel of the Rank in the state.

In May, 1873, in Taylor County James W. Holt married Anna Jordan, daughter of John Jordan, who was a pioneer of Grafton, in the service of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company. Mrs. Anna Holt died in 1896. For his second wife James W. Holt married Florence Stemple, member of a prominent old family near Aurora in Preston County. She is still living. By his first marriage James W. Holt had the following children: John A., of Gage, Oklahoma; Alfred A., a Grafton druggist; William A., of Elewirth, Kansas; Howard II.; Lillian, wife of W. E. Rightmire, of Grafton; and Catherine, who was married to Frank W. Shrewsbury, of Mont- gomery, West Virginia, but died the same week as her father, leaving a son, David Thompson Shrewsbury.

Howard Harwood Holt was born at West Grafton Sep- tember 13, 1883, and he practically grew up in the atmosphere of a printing office. He attended the Grafton High School three years and took freshman work in the University of West Virginia. During 1903 he engaged in a subscription canvass for the Grafton Daily Sentinel, and then entered the Iron City Business College at Pittsburgh, finishing a short- hand course. On returning home he was appointed official court stenographer by his uncle, the late Judge John H. Holt, who presided over the old Third Judicial Circuit, then the largest circuit in the state, comprising the counties of Tucker, Randolph, Barbour, Taylor and Preston. He continued his service with Judge Holt until 1907, when he resigned and entered the law department of the State University. He completed his course in 1909. While engaged in his work as a law student he served as court stenographer in Monongalia County for Judge John W. Mason and also did similar work in the Federal Court. After his admission to the bar for a few months only he practiced in the office with A. W. Burdett. In the spring of 1910 he was offered and accepted a place as assistant secretary to Stephen B. Elkins, then United States senator from West Virginia, and he remained a member of the Senator's official staff until his death. Soon after returning to Grafton Mr. Holt took up some matters in connection with the Sentinel office, although at that time he had no particular aspirations for a career as a newspaper man, but as a result of circumstances he became manager of the business, and later he bought the Sentinel, acquiring the controlling interest in the plant in 1911. Since then he has become owner of all the stock. The Grafton Sentinel Publishing Company was incorporated in 1907, and while the corporation has since been dissolved the plant continues under the old name. The Grafton Sentinel has for a number of years been both a daily and weekly paper. The weekly Sentinel has been published continuously since 1869 by the Holts, father and son.

A newspaper man is almost ex-officio a public servant and leader in church affairs. During the period men," and devoted much of his time and a large amount of the space in the columns of the Sentinel to promoting war sentiments and the measures of the Government. He has been very active in politics, and the Sentinel is generally recognized as the mouthpiece of the republican party in Taylor County.

The Sentinel office is one of the modern newspaper plants of the state. Its job plant is hardly to be surpassed, and the general equipment comprises three linotype machines, a Duplex web press, cylinder job press, automatic self feeding press. The machinery is electrically equipped, current being generated in the plant. Mr. Holt is a member of the Associated Press and has been active in editorial meetings in the state and district. As a youth he joined the Lutheran Church at Grafton, and has been active both in church and Sunday School, serving on the church council for some years. Mr. Holt is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias, the Elks and the Moose, is a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha college fraternity and is a Rotarian.

October 18, 1911, at Grafton, he married Alice Barber. She was born at Alliance, Ohio, daughter of Findlay and Ella (Crandon) Barber. Her maternal grandfather, James Crandon, was one of the prominent citizens of Niles, Ohio. Mrs. Holt was reared in Taylor County, West Virginia. The only child of Mr. and Mrs. Holt is James Findlay, born in 1912.

HON. JOHN HOMER HOLT was one of West Virginia's strong and able lawyers and jurists, and for a number of years was Circuit Judge of the old Third District, now included in the Fifteenth District.

A son of Alfred T. and Maria A. (Stone) Holt, he was born in Gilmer County June 19, 1857. He attended the common schools, the Preston Academy at Kingwood, and taught for five years, three of them at Kingwood. He began the study of law in the office of William E. Brown and George H. McGrew at Kingwood, finished his studies in the office of James A. Brown, and was admitted to the Kingwood bar in 1878. He began practice among the friends and neighbors he had known so long and so intimately, but in 1881 he removed his office to Grafton. He continued his practice in that city except for two years while engaged in special and important duties as a counselor and advocate at Washington, D. C.

In politics he was staunchly identified with the protection principle for American industry, and for many years had a prominent part in the councils and organization of the republican party. Soon after reaching his majority in Preston County he was elected a member of the Legislature in 1878, and he was a delegate to many of the early state conventions. He was chairman of the state convention at Huntington in 1892 that named Thomas E. Davis of Grafton for governor. He was also a prominent figure in the Elkins convention which nominated Alston G. Dayton for Congress in 1894. He was also chairman of the republican convention that nominated George W. Atkinson, the first republican governor since the Civil war. As a speaker Judge Holt proved himself effective at all times, and was considered almost invincible as a debater. His knowledge of politics and economic history put him at an advantage over his adversaries, and his good address and pleasing voice supplemented his logical and analytical mind. Judge Holt was nominated and elected Circuit Judge of the Third Circuit in 1896 and in 1904 was re-elected. After retiring from the bench he remained a resident of Grafton until his death.

OLIVER IRVIN MONTGOMERY, one of the proprietors of the Exchange Mill Company of Grafton, is also president of the County Court. Mr. Montgomery has lived in Taylor County thirty years, and prior to engaging in business was in the service of the Baltimore & Ohio Railway Company.

He was born on a farm near Pennsboro in Ritchie County September 24, 1873. His father, John F. Montgomery, was a native of Rockbridge County, Virginia, born in 1844. Not long after the outbreak of the Civil war he left Virginia and came into West Virginia, and at Buckhannon in 1863 enlisted in the Union army. Though he was in the service until the close of the war, he escaped wounds or capture. After leaving the army he settled in Ritchie County, and is now a resident of Richwood, West Virginia. In Barbour County he married Miss Virginia C. Murphy, who died in January, 1919, at the age of seventy-six, daughter of Marshall Murphy, who came from Virginia to Taylor County, where his daughter was born. John F. Montgomery and wife had eight children: Margaret C., of Akron, Ohio, widow of George Pymale; Oliver I.; Mary, wife of Norman McCoy, living at Flatwoods, West Virginia; Miss Savanna Lee, of Richwood; Minnie R., wife of James McKenzie, of Richwood; Ida, wife of Walter Rogers, of Taylor County; Joseph F., a farmer in Taylor County; and Mrs. Annie Hoskins, of old Virginia.

Oliver I. Montgomery acquired his country school education in Ritchie, Upshur and Braxton counties. When he left the farm he took up railroading, entering the service of the Baltimore & Ohio as a brakeman. He spent fifteen years with the company, and after a period as conductor in the yard service he was appointed assistant yard master at Grafton. When he left the railway company he resumed farming seven miles from Grafton, and was one of the progressive men in the rural districts of Taylor County and gave his personal attention to his farm and its personal management from 1906 until the fall of 1920.

In February, 1921, Mr. Montgomery and A. B. Shroy purchased the Exchange Mill. This is one of the old industries of Grafton, having been founded by Whit Heironimus who was succeeded by A. B. Blue, and later by a stock company of which Ona C. Jefferys and others were members. The plant is a custom and jobbing mill, grinding buckwheat flour, cornmeal and feed. The company also handles line of feeds and farm machinery. They are jobbers for the International Harvester Company and distributors for the Johns Manville Roofing and dealers and handlers of At Portland cement.

Mr. Montgomery was reared in a republican atmosphere and when he cast his first presidential vote it went to Maj. McKinley. He has been taking a more or less active part in local campaigns for many years. He was elected county commissioner from the Fetterman District as successor to Charles R. Burbin in 1916. He entered the office in January, 1917, and two years later was elected president of the board, his time expiring December 31, 1922. While he has been with the County Court the first permanent road work was done in Taylor County, and since then a dozen miles of hard surface road has been constructed, besides a number of asphalt concrete bridges, making an effective unit in the program of modern highway construction in the county.

Mr. Montgomery was reared a Methodist, was active in the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen while in the service and his only other fraternal connection is Grafton Lodge No. 31, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In Taylor County June 16, 1892, he married Miss Louisa A. Murphy who was born in the county February 6, 1870, daughter of James G. and Christina (Rogers) Murphy. She is the youngest of four children, the others being Sylvanus, Thomas J. and Virginia O., the latter the wife of J. E. Newcomb.

WARREN D. CLINE, M. D. For many years Dr. Warren D. Cline has been a prominent citizen of Williamstown, West Virginia, an acknowledged leader in civic affairs and a successful medical practitioner. In more than one field of effort he has demonstrated notable qualities that for over a quarter of a century have been largely used to further the best interests of Williamstown, where public respect and private esteem are his. Doctor Cline was born in Washington County, Ohio, October 3, 1856, a son of Reuben and Diana (Cady) Cline, and a grandson of David and Sarah (Mills) Cline.

On the maternal side Doctor Cline's ancestors were Vermont people who settled very early in Washington County, Ohio. It is related that one of his great-grandfathers, Thomas Mills, was most seriously injured on one occasion by savage Indians, who attacked him while he was fishing in a skiff by moonlight on Fishing Creek, a lonely stream running near Wheeling. David Cline, the paternal grandfather of Doctor Cline, was of German parentage but was born in Monroe County, Ohio, in which state he spent his life as a farmer. Of his family of thirteen children the only daughter died in childhood, twelve sturdy sons growing to manhood around the home hearth, and at least four of these served as soldiers in the war between the states.

Reuben Cline, father of Doctor Cline, spent the greater portion of his life as a farmer in Washington County, Ohio. Late in life he retired to Williamstown, West Virginia, where his death occurred at the age of eighty-five years. He was a man of great personal industry, and reared his children with practical ideas in relation to the duties of life. His family consisted of six sons and three daughters, Doctor Cline being the seventh born. The eldest, Luther A., who is a veteran of the war of 1861-65, still survives and lives in Illinois.

Warren D. Cline grew up on the home farm, assisting his father during the summers and attending the country schools in the winters. Later he had graded school privileges and also instruction in a private school at Marietta, where he applied himself closely to his books in order to secure a teacher's certificate and after fairly earning the same taught nine terms in the country schools. The money thus earned paid his way through the Eclectic Medical Institute (now College)

Isaac J. Boston

t Cincinnati, for which he had been prepared by his brother-in-law, Dr. E. Sloan of Williamstown. He was creditably graduated at Cincinnati in 1886, located for practice at Danchester, Illinois, and spent eight years there. In September, 1894, he came to Williamstown, and has engaged in a general practice ever since, on numerous occasions attending courses in the New York City Post Graduate College and Hospital.

Although the practice of medicine has largely engaged his attention since coming to Williamstown, Doctor Cline has been very active and immeasurably useful in other directions. He was largely due to his earnest efforts in furthering the welfare of the city that so much has been done in the way of educational progress and opportunity here. During the fifteen years he served as president of the Board of Education he labored ceaselessly for the establishment of the high school and for the erection of the present well equipped building. He served as mayor of Williamstown for four terms, and during this time the place was practically developed from a village into a modern city. In July, 1913, he was appointed postmaster, and is now serving in his second term.

Doctor Cline married in December, 1887, in Illinois, Miss Alice Husted, who died July 2, 1891. In 1896 he married Miss Frances Leonard, a daughter of Augustus Leonard, of Newell's Run, Ohio, who served in the Union Army during the war between the states. Doctor and Mrs. Cline have three daughters: Helen D., Frances D. and Celia E.

In political life Doctor Cline is a democrat, having come from a long line of that political faith. He was one of the charter members of the Masonic Lodge at Williamstown and its third worshipful master, and belongs also to the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen. He is an elder in the Presbyterian Church and is the unstinted contributor to many worthy charities.

ISAAC JAMES COSTON. In the twenty years that he has been a resident and in the business life of Clarksburg Mr. Coston has enjoyed that widening diversity of interests that is the synonym of success. His chief business is the Empire Laundry Company, of which he is secretary, treasurer and general manager.

Mr. Coston was born on a farm in Somerset County, Maryland, November 16, 1876, son of Isaac James and Rosena (Humphreys) Coston, his father of English and his mother of Scotch ancestry. The parents were also natives and life-long residents of Somerset County, where they gained their livelihood from a farm. The maternal grandfather was Samuel S. Coston also a native of Somerset County.

The youngest in a family of four sons, Isaac James Coston was left an orphan at the age of twelve years, and from the age of fifteen he had to be self supporting. His early life was spent on the farm and his education was limited to the common schools. From the age of fifteen until he reached his majority he worked at the printer's trade in Princess Anne, Maryland. At the age of twenty-one he became associated in the firm of Hayman & Coston, dealers in fancy groceries and confections at Princess Anne. In 1901 the firm sold their place of business, and in the same year established at Clarksburg a similar business, which was conducted under the firm name of Hayman and Coston for ten years. Mr. Coston's business associate was Newell J. Hayman. On leaving this business Mr. Coston in 1910 organized the Empire Laundry Company, which was incorporated with a $20,000 capital. The present capitalization is $200,000, a figure that reflects in a measure the constant growth and development of the business. I. Wade Coffman is president; Dr. C. C. Jarvis, vice president; and Mr. Coston, secretary, treasurer and general manager. A modern plant on West Main Street was built in 1914, building a two-story brick building 40 feet wide and 300 feet deep, and equipped with all the intricate and efficient machinery devised for laundry work. The company handles an immense volume of business, from a large territory surrounding Clarksburg, and besides the routine laundry work they have dry cleaning, carpet cleaning and pleating departments.

Mr. Coston is also an owner and manager of the Coston Printing Company, a stockholder in the Hayman Green-House Company and a director in the Community Savings & Loan Company. In politics he is a democrat, is a member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Clarksburg, and fraternally is Knight Templar Mason and Shriner, and holds membership in the Chamber of Commerce, the Rotary Club, and Country Club.

In 1905 Mr. Coston married Miss Allena May Holden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee D. Holden of Harrison County. The five children born of their marriage are: William H., James D., Dorothy R., Charles D. and Louise.

ALONZO C. PINSON, sheriff of Mingo County, and one of the popular citizens of Williamson, the county seat, was born in Pike County, Kentucky, December 26, 1876, and is a son of Thomas B. and Louisa (Matney) Pinson, the former of whom was likewise born in Pike County and the latter of whom was born in Virginia, both families having been founded in America many generations ago. It is supposed that the lineage of the Pinson family traces back to Spanish origin and that the first representative of the line in America was a Spaniard named Pinzon, who came over with Columbus. Thomas B. Pinson long held prestige as one of the substantial farmers of his native county.

The sheriff of Mingo County profited by the advantages of the public schools of his native county, and his discipline included four months' attendance in high school. At the age of sixteen years he initiated his service as a teacher in the rural schools, and he continued his successful pedagogic work four years. He then came to Mingo County, West Virginia, and became manager of the general store of Morgan & Judd at Matewan. Later he became manager of a branch office of the Yellow Poplar Lumber Company at Buckhannon, where he remained one year. In 1899 he came to Williamson, where he continued to be employed as clerk in a general store until 1905, when he resigned to give his attention to his duties as mayor of the city, to which position he had been elected by a gratifying majority. In 1903 he had served as city recorder, and he was a member of the city council in 1904, at the time of his election to the office of mayor, in which he served seven consecutive terms, or until 1915, when he was retired by the provisions of the act passed by the State Legislature that changed the municipal government of Williamson to the commission form. His long tenure of office shows alike the efficiency of his administration and the estimate placed upon him by the community. After completing his regime as mayor Mr. Pinson was here engaged in the real estate business three years, besides conducting a retail grocery business. He then became a traveling salesman for the Williamson Grocery Company, with which concern he continued his connection until he assumed the office of county sheriff, on the 1st of January, 1921.

Mr. Pinson is affiliated with O'Brien Lodge No. 101, Free and Accepted Masons, at Williamson, with the local chapter of Royal Arch Masons, with the Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston, and has received the eighteenth degree in the Scottish Rite of the time-honored fraternity. He is a popular member also of the Williamson Lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. During the World War he served as a member of the draft board of Mingo County. He is a staunch democrat, and he attends and supports the Presbyterian Church, of which his wife is an active member.

On December 4, 1902, Mr. Pinson was united in marriage with Miss Belle Maynard, who was born and reared in Pike County, Kentucky, a representative of a family early founded in America. Sheriff and Mrs. Pinson have no children.

JOSEPH BUTCHER STRATON, junior member of the representative law firm of Branson & Stratton, with offices in the Patterson Building at Williamson, judicial center of Mingo County, was born at Myrtle, this county, September 10, 1888, and is a son of the late Allen Butcher Stratton, who was born in Logan County, this state. The family was established on the Guyandotte River in this section of West Virginia for more than a century. It is evident that the Straton family was here founded when this section, then a remote part of Virginia, was little more than a wilderness, and in the succeeding generations the family name has been closely and worthily identified with the record of civic and material development. Allen B. Straton was engaged in both the hotel and the insurance business, and was one of the well-known and honored citizens of Williamson at the time of his death. Here his widow still resides, and he is survived also by four sons and three daughters. The maiden name of Mrs. Straton was Sarah J. Deskins, and she was born in Wayne County, this state, of sterling American lineage of several generations.

Joseph B. Straton was seven years of age at the time of the family removal to Williamson, and after here profiting by the advantages of the public schools he continued for three years a student in Alderson Academy at Alderson, Monroe County. Thereafter he passed two years in the Ohio Military Institute in the City of Cincinnati. He next passed two years at the historic old University of Virginia, where he took studies in the academic department, but gave most of his time and attention to the pursuing of a course in the law department. He thereafter continued the same system of study in the University of West Virginia. During the summer vacations from 1902 to 1907, inclusive, he held a clerical position in the railroad yards at Williamson. At the Ohio Military Institute he became a member of the Alpha Chi Sigma fraternity, and at the University of Virginia he became affiliated with Delta Chi. At the University of West Virginia he was elected a member of the Mountain Club, an honorary society. During three years of his college work he was pitcher of the baseball club.

In September, 1912, Mr. Straton was admitted to the bar, and forthwith opened an office at Williamson, where he built up a substantial and representative individual law practice and gained secure standing at the bar of his native county. On the first of January, 1920, he became a member of the present law firm of Bronson & Straton.

The political convictions of Mr. Straton caused him to be staunchly aligned in the ranks of the democratic party, and he has held various official positions. In 1917 he represented Mingo County in the State Legislature; in July of that year he became city attorney of Williamson, in which position he served until 1919; and from June 1, 1919, until he resigned, April 1, 1921, he served as assistant prosecuting attorney of Mingo County.

Mr. Straton is a member of the American Bar Association and the Mingo County Bar Association, holds membership in the local Kiwanis Club, and is a Scottish Rite Mason, in which his basic of ancient-craft membership is in O'Brien Lodge No. 101, Free and Accepted Masons, at Williamson. During the nation's participation in the World War Mr. Straton was food administrator of Mingo County, and also was active in the local drives in support of the Government war loans and in other patriotic work.

March 3, 1915, recorded the marriage of Mr. Straton and Miss Mae Sullivan, who was born at Milton, Cabell County, this state, her father having been born in Ireland and her mother being a representative of an old and honored Virginia family. Mr. and Mrs. Straton have no children.

JOHN LEWIS STAFFORD, who is engaged in the practice of his profession in the City of Williamson, judicial center of Mingo County, has held for more than a quarter of a century a secure place as one of the able and representative member of the bar of this section of the state, and he is now senior member of the law firm of Stafford & Rhodes, with offices in the Goodman building.

When Mr. Stafford came to Williamson in 1895 and opened a law office in a building at the corner of Pike Street and Third Avenue, the present vigorous industrial city was but a village, with no paved streets and with but few sidewalks, and these of board construction, Third Avenue having been the main street, and the Thacker Mine having been about the only one in operation in this now important coal field. Mr. Stafford continued in the independent practice of law about ten years, and then formed a professional partnership with D. W. Brown, under the firm name of Stafford & Brown. This alliance continued about three years and was dissolved when Mr. Brown was appointed a judicial office. Mr. Stafford thereafter continued his individual practice four years and then admitted Mr. Rhode to partnership, under the present firm name of Stafford & Rhodes. In 1896, the second year of his residence here Mr. Stafford was elected prosecuting attorney of the county and served the regular term of four years. In 1909 he was again elected to this office, and his second term of four years was marked by the same efficiency that had attended his former incumbency of the office. During the nation's participation in the World war he was active in patriotic service, was a Four Minute Speaker and aided greatly in the local campaigns in support of the Government war loan, Red Cross work, etc. He is a member of the American Bar Association, the West Virginia Bar Association and the Mingo County Bar Association. He is a stalwart in the local camp of the republican party, and he and his wife hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

October 4, 1900, recorded the marriage of Mr. Stafford and Miss Minnie B. Mullens, who was born in Lincoln County, this state, and of the two children of this union the first, John Lewis, Jr., was born May 2, 1905, and died March 26, 1908, while with his parents in San Francisco, California. The surviving son, Paul Edwards, was born August 2, 1915.

John L. Stafford was born in Mercer County, West Virginia, which was still a part of Virginia, on the 22d of October, 1856, his father, William M. Stafford, likewise having been born in that county, a representative of a family founded in America in Colonial days and of English origin. For many years William M. Stafford was a farmer in his native county, and there both he and his wife remained until their deaths. Their children were ten in number—four sons and six daughters. Mrs. Stafford, whose maiden name was Harriet Shumate, was born in Giles County, Virginia of Colonial ancestry.

The early education of John L. Stafford was acquired in the country schools of his native county, and he began to help in the work of the home farm when he was a mere boy. In pursuance of higher education he next attended the Concord Academy at Athens, Mercer County, and in this institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1878. He then began the study of law in the office of Johnston & Hale at Princeton, the county seat, and in 1880 he was admitted to the bar. He soon afterward opened a law office at Oceana, Wyoming County, and almost immediately was elected prosecuting attorney of that county, in which office he served three consecutive terms. Finally he returned to Mercer County and engaged in practice at Bluefield, where, shortly afterward, he formed a law partnership with J. M. Saunders, under the title of Stafford & Saunders. This alliance continued about two years and Mr. Stafford then removed to Williamson, which has since continued the central stage of his law business, which has been of broad scope and importance and involves his appearance in both criminal and civil departments of practice. He has made a record of large and worthy achievement in his exacting profession, and is one of its leading representatives in Mingo County.

WILLIAM PRESTON TAULBEE VARNEY, vice president and cashier of the Day and Night Bank of Williamson, Mingo County, has been closely associated also with important commercial and industrial enterprises in this section of West Virginia. He was one of the promoters and organizers of the Pond Creek By-products Coal Company, is secretary and treasurer of the Leckieville Land Company, and is president of the Ira Coal Company and the Tug Valley Fuel Company. In his home city he is a loyal member of the Kiwanis Club, his political allegiance is given to the democratic party, he and his wife hold membership in the Baptist Church and he is affiliated with O'Brien Lodge No. 101, Free and Accepted Masons, as well with other York Rite bodies and with Lodge of Perfection No. 4, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, at Huntington, and with the Temple of the Mystic Shrine in the City of Charleston. Mr.

ney gave active service in local patriotic work in the world war period, especially in furthering the campaign support of the Government war loans, the service of the Red Cross, etc.

Mr. Varney was born on a farm in Pike County, Kentucky, October 23, 1886, and is a son of Asa Harmon Varney and Nancy (West) Varney, both likewise natives of Pike County, the West family, early founded in Virginia, being numbered representatives among the first to settle in Pike County, Kentucky. Asa H. Varney was actively engaged in farming and school teaching for the long period of forty-four years, made a splendid record in the pedagogic profession and was honored by being presented by Kentucky a life certificate that entitled him to teach in any part of the state which he might choose. In all of his years of teaching he never failed to attend the annual teachers' institutes until the final one before his death, when ill health caused his absence. The Varney family was founded in Virginia in the Colonial period of our national history. Of the children of Asa H. and Nancy Varney four sons and four daughters are living. W. P. Taubee Varney early began to assist in the activities of the home farm, and he continued to attend the district schools of his native county until he was seventeen years old. Thereafter he attended a year in the graded schools at Pikeville, the county seat, and three years as a student in Pikeville College. In the meantime he taught about five months of each of three summers in the rural schools, and in January, 1907, he came to Williamson, West Virginia, and took a position in the weighmaster's office of the Norfolk and Western Railroad. In the depression in the following year he lost his position, and he thereupon returned with his family to Pike County and resumed his service as a school teacher. Somewhat more than a year after he returned to his former railroad position at Williamson, was transferred to Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1910, and in 1912 was appointed weighmaster of the Norfolk and Western at Williamson. At the expiration of one year Mr. Varney resigned this office to take the position of bookkeeper in the National Bank of Commerce, in which he was eventually advanced to the position of cashier and with which he continued his connection until the spring of 1919, when he became associated with other citizens of the county in organizing the Day and Night Bank, of which he was made cashier and, in the latter part of the same year, the vice president also. He has since retained these executive offices and has been the foremost factor in developing the substantial business of the representative financial institution. He is one of the loyal and progressive citizens of Mingo County, and has a secure place in popular confidence and good will.

On June 7, 1907, Mr. Varney wedded Miss Emma Pinson, who likewise was born and reared in Pike County, Kentucky, where the marriage was solemnized. The Pinson family is one of long American lineage and one of its representatives, Alonzo C., is now sheriff of Mingo County. Mr. and Mrs. Varney have three children: Golefrey Wendell, born August 25, 1908; Frances Helen, born June 7, 1912; and Anna Margaret, born September 26, 1919.

DAY AND NIGHT BANK, of Williamson, is one of the newer financial organizations of that city, and was instituted not only to furnish general banking facilities, but also to give a service through hours not included in ordinary banking schedules.

The bank, located in the Goodman Building on Logan Street, was organized in March, 1919, and opened its doors May 1st of that year. Mr. Hurst, Mr. Greene and Mr. Varney were primarily responsible for the organization. The first officers and directors were W. A. Hurst, president, J. H. Greene, vice president, J. M. Smith, vice president, W. P. T. Varney, cashier, and H. F. Carper. Through the accidental death of Mr. Hurst a change in the personnel was instituted, and the present officers and directors are J. H. Greene, president; J. M. Smith, vice president; W. P. T. Varney, cashier and vice president; Dr. G. T. Conley and A. B. Scott.

CURTIS EARL PRUNTY. The business of real estate in a broad sense should also involve real estate improvement and development, and it has been in this natural combination of related lines that Mr. Prunty has become an important factor in the business affairs of Clarksburg during the past two decades.

Mr. Prunty was born on his father's farm in Doddridge County, West Virginia, February 22, 1878, son of Hughie Benton and Martha Ann (Cross) Prunty, the former a native of Harrison County and the latter of Ritchie County. His parents spent their married life on a farm in Doddridge County, where the father died in 1906 at the age of fifty-nine, while the mother passed away in 1889. Their children consisted of three sons and four daughters.

Curtis E. Prunty had as youth on the farm, acquired his education in the country schools. His last experience after farming was as a wage worker for James Maxwell, a Doddridge County farmer. The wages were too small to give promise of any future, and at the age of nineteen he left the farm to become an employee of the Eureka Pipe Line Company. He was with that company one year and in 1899 removed to Salem, West Virginia, where he soon after took up building construction work. With accumulating capital, credit and experience, he invested in real estate in Salem, but his ambitions soon led him to a larger field for his promising business and in 1900 he located at Clarksburg. Since then he has handled real estate and building construction, and has been instrumental in developing some of Clarksburg's most attractive sub-divisions and vacant property. He organized in 1909 the Prunty Real Estate Company of which he is president. This company laid out and marketed a sub-division known as the White and Stonewall Park additions. The Prunty building in Clarksburg was erected in 1914, as a modern office building, and Mr. Prunty now has under way a supplementary building, fronting on Third Street and connecting on the rear with the present Prunty building. This new structure is planned ultimately to rise eleven stories.

Mr. Prunty has never married. He is president of the Bland Realty Company, a director in the Percy Oil Company, and the Clarksburg Trust Company of which he was an active organizer. He is a republican and a member of The Old Colony Club of New York.

DAVID MOSSER GOOD has achieved reputation and success in his professional work as a civil and mining engineer, and as a consulting engineer he has developed a substantial and representative business, with headquarters at the Hill Reservation, Williamson, Mingo County.

Mr. Good was born at Ragersville, Tuscarawas County, Ohio, July 27, 1871, a son of David Mosser Good, Sr., and Elizabeth Ann (Shunk) Good, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania and representatives of families early founded in that state. The father was born December 12, 1812, and died at the age of seventy-three years. The mother was born in May, 1833, and passed to the life eternal in 1900. They became the parents of three sons and two daughters. David M. Good, Sr., followed the tanner's trade in his early manhood, and later became a hotel keeper, besides building up a substantial general merchandise business. He became one of the honored and influential citizens of Tuscarawas County, Ohio, and there both he and his wife died.

He whose name initiates this review attended the public schools of his native place until he was sixteen years of age, and in the meanwhile he had found employment at farm work, besides working at intervals in the livery and feed stable conducted in connection with his father's hotel. He was finally placed in charge of the livery barn, and thus continued until he was nineteen years old, when he took the position of masonry inspector in the office of the chief engineer of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad at Cincinnati, Ohio. A few months later he became rodman in connection with civil engineering service with this railroad, and in the ensuing two years was located in turn at Alderson, West Virginia, Richmond, Virginia, and Thurmond, West Virginia. By study and practical work he had in this period gained valuable experience in civil engineering work, and in 1893 he entered the employ of L. W. Atkinson, a mining engineer at Thurmond, in the capacity of transit man. In June of the following year he became engineer for the Quinnimont Coal Company at Quinnimont, West Virginia, where the company was operating two coal mines. In the spring of the following year Mr. Good became associated with J. M. Clark, a contracting engineer at Kanawha Falls, this state, but in the fall of the same year he again took the position of engineer of the Quinnimont Coal Company. In 1898 he became mechanical draftsman for the Covington Machine Company at Covington, Virginia, and while thus engaged he took a course in mechanical engineering through the medium of the International Correspondence School of Scranton, Pennsylvania. In 1900 Mr. Good once more became engineer of the Quinnimont Coal Company, and was also made its assistant superintendent. In 1902 he joined the War Eagle Coal Company, for which he had supervision of the entire working plant for its four mines, and with which he continued as engineer for a period of eleven years. On the 28th of August, 1912, he established himself in independent business as a civil, mining and mechanical contract engineer, with residence and professional headquarters at Williamson, and he is now mining and consulting engineer for the Williamson Fuel Company, the War Eagle Coal Company, the Stone Mountain Coal Corporation, at Matewan; the White Star Mining Company, at Merrimac; the Sullivan Pond Creek Company, offices at Tralee; Triangle Coal Company, at Pinson, Kentucky; Sudduth Fuel Company, Bailey Fuel Company, Black Gem Coal Company and Carry-On Coal Company, all at Toler, Kentucky; Grey Eagle Coal Company, Grey Eagle, West Virginia; Webb By-Products Coal Company, at Webb, this state; Inspiration Coal Company, at Krum; Katona Coal Company, at Wayne; West Williamson Coal Company, at Williamson; Standard Thacker Coal Company, at Chattaroy; Burning Creek Coal Company, at Kermitt.

Mr. Good is president of the Good Construction Company, which has been recently organized. His professional ability has further been demonstrated in his building of the suspension bridge at Matewan and the free public bridge across the Tug River at Williamson. In nearly all of the important mining companies with which he is associated, as noted above, Mr. Good has installed the operating plants, and he is financially interested in several of these corporations. During the World war period he gave effective service in promoting the various patriotic agencies in his home district and volunteered his services to the Government, the authorities deciding that his work could be of greater value in connection with fuel production than in military service, so that he continued his zealous activities in advancing coal production through the medium of the various companies with which he was connected at the time. He has the distinction of having been elected to full membership in the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers. He is a republican in political allegiance, and he and his wife are active members of the First Presbyterian Church of Williamson, in which he is serving as an elder.

March 24, 1889, recorded the marriage of Mr. Good and Miss Mary A., daughter of Frederick F. and Elizabeth Snellenberger, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Pennsylvania. Mrs. Good was born in Ohio, August 12, 1872. The names and respective birth dates of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Good are here recorded: Ethel Blanche, January 13, 1890; Vida Fern, May 15, 1892; William Earle, May 21, 1898; Orpha Elizabeth, February 15, 1903; and Margaret Alice, March 20, 1910. The only son, William E., was a student in the Virginia Polytechnic Institute at the time when the nation became involved in the World war, and he there remained in studying for a commission after he had enlisted in the Marine Corps. Miss Ethel B. Good served as secretary of the local chapter of the Red Cross during the war period, and she still retains this position.

RUSSELL A. SALTON, M. D., who is engaged in the general practice of his profession at Williamson, Mingo County has demonstrated in ability and effective service the consistency of his choice of profession. The doctor was born at Walton, New York, August 12, 1887, a son of Robert E. and Margaret (Henderson) Salton, the former of whom was born in the State of New York and the latter in North Carolina. Robert E. Salton gained much of success in the raising of and dealing in live stock, especially horses, and became a leading representative of these lines of enterprise in his section of the old Empire State. He served a number of years as county superintendent of roads.

The public schools of his native place afforded to Dr. Salton his preliminary education, and after his graduation from high school in 1905 he was for one year a student in the University of Syracuse, New York. During the ensuing year he was employed, and he then began preparing himself for his chosen profession. In 1911 he was graduated from the Baltimore Medical College, Baltimore, Maryland, and after thus receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine he became house surgeon in the West Virginia State Hospital at Welch, McDowell County, this being Miners Hospital No. 1. After an effective service of eighteen months at this institution Dr. Salton established his residence at Williamson, judicial center of Mingo County, and here he has developed a successful and representative general practice, the while he has gained specially high reputation as a skilled surgeon. His private practice was interrupted when in June, 1917, shortly after the nation became involved in the World war, he became a member of the Medical Reserve Corps of the United States Army. On the 4th of January, 1918, Dr. Salton was called into active service and assigned to duty at the base hospital at Camp Stuart, Newport News, Virginia, where he remained, with the rank of first lieutenant, until the 18th of the following October, when he was assigned to duty with the Forty-eighth Infantry, Twentieth Division, at Camp Sevier, Greenville, South Carolina. His command had orders to sail for France, but the outbreak of the great epidemic of influenza caused the entire command to be quarantined, and before this quarantine was lifted the armistice was signed and the war came to a close. Dr. Salton remained at Camp Sevier until January 23, 1919, when he received his honorable discharge. He was commissioned captain in the Medical Reserve Corps, and is still an active member of this organization.

Soon after his return to Williamson Dr. Salton initiated the vigorous and well ordered campaign that resulted in the establishing of the Williamson Hospital, and though he encountered many obstacles and difficulties he has the satisfaction of knowing that the county seat of Mingo County can now claim one of the best equipped and most effectively conducted hospitals in this section of the state, an institution whose benignant service stands to his enduring credit and honor. In the conducting of the hospital he has as his able and valued coadjutor Doctor Hatfield, who is engaged in practice in the City of Huntington. Doctor Salton is a member of the Mingo County Medical Society, West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He is affiliated with the American Legion, is a Knight Templar Mason and affiliated also with the Mystic Shrine, and he holds membership in the Presbyterian Church in his home city. The doctor is a wide-awake and progressive citizen, and is essentially one of the leading physicians and surgeons of Mingo County. On both the paternal and maternal sides the ancestry of Doctor Salton traces back to staunch Scotch origin. His paternal great-grandfather came from Scotland in 1837, with wife and seven children, and established his residence in the State of New York. On the maternal side the doctor is a scion of the Henderson and McDonald families, which were early established in North Carolina.

In his native town of Walton, New York, in the year 1912, Doctor Salton wedded Miss Ella Robertson, daughter of Alfred and Mary (King) Robertson, both natives of the State of New York, whence they eventually removed to California, where Mr. Robertson engaged in ranch en-rise. Doctor and Mrs. Salton became the parents of four children: Virginia, Robert (deceased), and Russell Jr.

IRELAND JAMES has been a resident of West Virginia since boyhood, is now a leading exponent of the real estate business at Williamson, Mingo County, and is a former member of the State Legislature.

Mr. James was born in Martin County, Kentucky, on the 10th of September, 1837, and is a son of David and Mary (Hall) James, both likewise natives of the old Blue Grass State. David James was engaged in the real estate business in Martin County, Kentucky, a number of years, and in 1898 he turned his attention to the timber business, logging operations in the vicinity of Dingess, Mingo County, West Virginia. After four years of activity in this line of enterprise he removed to Williamson, where he engaged in the real estate business, in connection with which he platted and placed on the market an attractive subdivision to the city. He continued his active association in the real estate business and did much important development work until 1920, when he retired. He and his wife are still residents of Williamson, and both are members of the Baptist Church.

In 1904 Ireland James graduated from the Williamson High School, and after being associated with his father's real estate operations for a time he served four years as a dispatch rider for the Norfolk & Western Railroad. For ensuing four years he was a locomotive fireman for this road, and he then resumed his active alliance with his father's real estate business, with which he had continued to be connected during the period of his railroad service. He and his father and son conducted also a grocery business, but they sold in 1920, when the father retired from active business. Since that year Ireland James has successfully continued the substantial real estate business in an individual way, and he is one of the leading representatives of the important line of enterprise in Mingo County. He is affiliated with both the York and Scottish Rite bodies of the Masonic fraternity, and also with the Mystic Shrine. He holds his wife hold membership in the Baptist Church, and is a republican in political allegiance. Mr. James has been active in the local councils of the republican party, and served one term as representative of Mingo County in the State Legislature, to which he was elected in 1915.

At Louisa, Kentucky, in 1914, Mr. James wedded Miss Alice Vinson, a daughter of Lazerus and Vicann (Wiley) Vinson, both natives of that state. Mr. and Mrs. James have no children. The James family, of English origin, was early represented in Virginia and Kentucky, and on the paternal side Mr. James is of Irish lineage.

JAMES W. PETERS has been one of the progressive and successful exponents of the real estate business at Williamson, judicial center of Mingo County, and has contributed financially to the material and civic upbuilding of the city and county.

Mr. Peters was born at Parisburg, Giles County, Virginia, April 7, 1864, a son of John D. and Mollie (Sublett) Peters, both likewise natives of the Old Dominion State, where the respective families were founded in an early day. John Peters was a gallant soldier of the Confederacy in the Civil War, doing scout duty. During the entire period of the war he was in a Virginia regiment under the command of General Lee. He was a shoemaker by trade, was influential in public affairs of local order, served as mayor of Parisburg, as justice of the peace for many years and also as assessor of Giles County, Virginia. As a young man he taught successfully in the schools of his native state, and here he and his wife continued to reside until their deaths.

James W. Peters attended the schools of his native town until he was fourteen years old, when, owing to the ill health of his father, who also had given earnest service as a local preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, he became the main support of the family and assumed active charge of the home farm. The ambitious youth applied himself diligently to getting out timber and firewood on the home place, hunting game, and otherwise worked vigorously to support the family and also to gain advancement. He gained excellent reputation as a woodsman and guide, and this led to his being employed as guide and pilot in connection with the first or reconnoitring survey for the construction of the line of the Norfolk & Western Railroad from Virginia through to the Ohio River, he having been but sixteen years old at the time. He aided also in the final location of the line and also as guide to the English engineer who represented the English capitalists who were interested in the promotion and construction of the new railroad. To Mr. Peters is thus due much credit for the work he did in connection with the defining of the line of this railroad through Virginia and West Virginia. As an expert rifle shot he was retained as guard in charge of convicts who were employed on the construction work, and after the road was completed he acted as mail carrier at the general offices of the company at Parisburg, Virginia. Finally he learned telegraphy, and thereafter he served as operator and station agent for the Norfolk & Western Railroad at Bramwell, Elkhorn and Richland, West Virginia. In 1892 Mr. Peters left the employ of the railroad and engaged in the hotel and mercantile business at Gray, West Virginia. Seven years later he sold his business at that place and purchased the hotel known as the Esther Arms at Williamson. After successfully conducting this hotel five years he sold the property and turned his attention exclusively to the real estate business, in which he had become interested at the time when he established his residence at Williamson. He has since continued a leading representative of this line of enterprise in this city, and his operations, always fair and constructive, have done much to further the progress of the city and county. When Mr. Peters began work for the railroad he received $16 a month and board, and considered his compensation adequate. Later the railroad company paid him a salary of $200 a month. He has advanced to substantial prosperity, and that entirely through his own ability and efforts. He owns and occupies one of the finest residences at Williamson, is the owner of coal property of valuable order, and is especially interested in the promoting of coal properties, the while he still retains his fondness for hunting and general outdoor recreation. He and wife are democrats in politics and are members of churches. In 1888, in Washington County, Virginia, Mr. Peters married Miss Lettie Thomas, daughter of the late John L. Thomas, who was born in Virginia, as was also his wife, her family name having been Winn. Mr. Thomas was one of the prosperous farmers of Washington County. He served under General Lee in the Civil War, was captured at the battle of Gettysburg, and thereafter was held a Union prisoner until the close of the war. Mr. and Mrs. Peters have three children: Ethel is the wife of S. D. Stokes, of Williamson, who is (1923) prosecuting attorney of Mingo County; Gladys is the wife of Richard Dreschler, superintendent of the foreign-exchange department of the Buffalo Trust Bank, Buffalo, New York; and Clarence E., the only son, remains at the parental home and is associated with his father in the real estate business.

HON. JAMES W. FLYNN as a banker and business man has been vitally identified with many lines of the fundamental industrial development of West Virginia. His home and many of his interests are centered at Kingwood, he is a native of Preston County, and at this writing represents the county in the legislature.

Mr. Flynn was born in Lyon District of Preston County March 13, 1861. His grandfather, James Flynn, settled here in 1848, and, like many of the other early settlers, came out of old Virginia. The Flynn's for several generations lived in Fauquier County, and more remotely the family came from Ireland. James Flynn on coming to Preston County bought some of the land now owned and operated by the Austen Coal & Coke Company, and the ten years he lived here were devoted to farming. He was born in 1806 and died in 1858. His life was fully and industriously spent, and represented a modest contribution to the improvement of the community. He brought his family out of Virginia by wagon over the old Northwestern Turnpike through Winchester. He buried his first wife in Fauquier County, and his two sons and five daughters all reared their families and died in Fauquier County except Benjamin Flynn.

Benjamin Flynn was born in Fauquier County, was educated there, and as a young man left his family to enter the Confederate Army as a member of the 20th Virginia Infantry. He was a scout in the mountain sections of Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia. Following the war he became a furnace man in Lyon District, and at the time of his accidental death in 1883 was superintendent of the Irondale Furnace. Benjamin Flynn married Miss Lydia Buncutter, of Winchester, Virginia, daughter of George Buncutter, who spent his life in the Shenandoah Valley. Mrs. Lydia Flynn died in 1869, and the only one of her five children to grow to maturity is James W. Flynn. The second wife of Benjamin Flynn was Miss Mary Montgomery, and she and six of her nine children survive.

James Willoughby Flynn was born at the opening of the Civil war, and the first stories he heard of the world outside of his own home were incidents of the great conflict. He attended the common schools and finished his education in the Wheeling Business College. He had grown up around an iron furnace, and eventually became superintendent of the industry his father conducted at the time of his death. Mr. Flynn in 1839 left the iron business and for three succeeding years was a merchant at Kingwood, as a partner of Hon. C. M. Bishop. He left merchandising to become associated with the financial and industrial interests of the syndicate whose two principal figures were Stephen B. Elkins and Henry G. Davis, and he has been more or less associated with this group ever since. He was in their real estate department and was a cruiser over various coal properties of the Elkins-Davis Company, and gave his time to this and similar work until 1904. Since then he has rather concentrated his energies at Kingwood in the real estate business and banking.

Mr. Flynn organized in 1903 the Kingwood National Bank, with a capital stock of twenty-five thousand dollars, and which now has surplus and capital of fifty thousand dollars. He was elected vice president and since 1914 has been president. The vice presidents are George A. Herring and C. A. Craig, and the cashier is Ivan Davis. Mr. Flynn is financially interested in the Logan Developments of Logan County, in the Kingwood Stone Company, in the National Fuel Company of Morgantown, and the Deaker Hill Coal Company of Kingwood, and has some important private holdings of his own, which are not yet developed.

Mr. Flynn cast his first presidential vote for James G. Blaine. For sixteen years he was chairman of the Preston County Republican Committee, has been a member of the Senatorial and Congressional Committees, and has served in both branches of the Legislature. In 1908 he was elected to the State Senate, then presided over by Hon. L. J. Foreman, during the administration of Governor Dawson. His senatorial district comprised Preston, Tucker, Mineral, Grant and Hardy counties, and he was the unanimous choice of his party for the senatorial nomination. While in the Senate he was a member of the committees on banking, finance, judiciary, and was chairman of the banking committee. His chief interests in the legislation of that session was prohibition and the income tax. He championed the former and was an opponent of the income tax law as then presented to the body, though he favored fifty per cent of the income going to the government of West Virginia. Mr. Flynn was one of the fifteen republican senators who left the state to keep the democrats from organizing the Senate. One of those fifteen senators has since been governor of the state and another one United States senator from West Virginia. After his senatorial term there followed a considerable interval before he was chosen, in 1920, to the Lower House of the Legislature. He entered the House in January, 1921, under Speaker E. M. Keatley, and has been a member of the finance, banks and banking, mines and mining committees. A project in which he is deeply interested for the welfare of the state as a whole is the development of water power. Hardly second to water power development has been road improvement. He supported the general road measure providing for the connection of all the county seats of the state with permanent highways, and favored the fifty million dollar bond issue as a revolving fund until the state highway system is completed. Mr. Flynn also sought to increase the efficiency of the state police force, and whether as a legislator or private citizen he is for law and order first of all. Improvement of the facilities and advancement of the welfare of a locality or state are matters that enlist his co-operation without solicitation, and his contributions to the practical achievements of such objects is commensurate with his ability to pay.

Mr. Flynn has a wide personal acquaintance with eminent West Virginians, including Governor White, Governor Dawson and Governor Atkinson, with United States Senators Stephen B. Elkins and N. B. Scott, and he voted for Scott for United States senator, while he himself was a member of the State Senate, and also supported Davis Elkins to succeed to the unexpired term of his noted father. He knew Senator Goff, and these and other political leaders of the state met in many conventions. He was campaign manager for this district for Congressman Dayton and for George Bowers, who now represents the Second West Virginia District in Congress. Mr. Flynn is a Royal Arch Mason and a member of the Eastern Star.

In Preston County March 6, 1886, he married Miss Annie V. Klausner. Both before and after her marriage her life was one of such service and influence as to require no memorial of the present generation of Preston County people. She was born in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, August 1, 1861, and died February 9, 1919. She was granted the first four year certificate to teach ever issued in Preston County and was a valuable factor in the educational affairs of the county for eight years before her marriage. She was active in the Presbyterian Church and its various societies, and was deeply concerned in auxiliary war work, and at the time of her death some French orphan children were depending upon her for support.

Levi Klausner, father of Mrs. Flynn, was one of Preston County's best loved and most influential characters. He represented a branch of the Pennsylvania Dutch who settled in Pennsylvania in the seventeen hundreds and became founders of Churchtown, that state, where Levi Klausner was born in 1818. He received the college education which was a matter of tradition in the family and his first calling was that of a civil engineer. From that he entered journalism and one of his first ventures was at Pittsburgh, where he became editor and proprietor of the Pittsburgh Times, subsequently consolidated with the Pittsburgh Gazette. On selling his interests in Pittsburgh Mr. Klausner removed to Kingwood, West Virginia, and about 1866 founded the Preston County Journal, and remained its proprietor until his death in 1871. He made this the leading paper of the county. His writings were characterized by a sound literary style, and were especially effective in influencing the development and social improvement of the county. Personally and through his paper he insisted that the people should show a proper civic pride in Kingwood, and that has been accounted as one of the important influences in making Kingwood a good, clean place in which to live. Levi Klausner was born in an environment of sound ideals, and in his active life he never departed therefrom. He was a republican in politics, was affiliated with the Odd Fellows and Masons, was a member of the Methodist Church, in physique was of medium size and though he lived in Preston County only a few years he enjoyed an immense popularity. He married Caroline Silkknitter, of German ancestry, a family still represented in Greenbrier County, West Virginia. Levi Klausner and wife had two children, and they were reared in a printing office, an environment that gave a practical turn to their education. The son is John R. Klausner, a printer and newspaper man of Indianapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. Flynn had three children, the oldest being Ben L., referred to in the following paragraph. The second, Charles Willoughby Flynn, is an electrical engineer in Logan County, West Virginia, and by his marriage to Miss Ellen Gore has a daughter Martha M. The daughter of Senator Flynn is Nellie M. now the wife of Russell C. Burnside, of Kingwood.

Benjamin L. Flynn, who died of the influenza at Logan, West Virginia, November 1, 1918, was then thirty-two years of age, yet his efficiency in his profession and his talent for business had enabled him to create a modest fortune in less an a decade of activity. He was a civil and mining engineer, being a graduate of the Kingwood High School and the International Correspondence School of Scranton, and began his active career as a civil engineer during the construction of the Morgantown and Kingwood Railway. He became an engineer for the Elkins Coal & Coke Company, and subsequently established himself in a general engineering practice. While so engaged he became superintendent for the Logan Mining Company at Logan, and was filling that position when he died. He was a young business man with a very magnetic personality, had a peculiar faculty for handling men easily and without friction, attracted friends to him on all walks of life, and was a nature lover, fond of the woods and of all the life and things of natural creation. He served three years as a member of the West Virginia National Guard, and had few equals as a marksman. He stood high in Masonry and was a member of the Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Wheeling. Benjamin L. Flynn married Miss Mamie Elworth, who survived him with three children, James W., Edward E. and Donald J.

CAPTAIN JOHN PORTER. A most unusual and distinguished figure in the business and industrial affairs of the Upper Ohio Valley was the late Captain John Porter, who died February 1922. As an estimate of who he was and what he did in the world of affairs nothing better could be said than to repeat the words of an editorial in the Evening Review of East Liverpool:

"The East Liverpool District today joins with Hancock, Brooke and Ohio counties, West Virginia, and, in fact, the entire Ohio Valley, in mourning the death of Captain John Porter, of Kenilworth, West Virginia, originator as well as pioneer in the paving brick industry in the United States. At his home in the West Virginia town he died last night at the age of eighty-three, after a successful career in business and public life.

"Wherever paving brick is used—and there is not believed to be even a hamlet in the broad expanse of America in which vitrified fire clay is not used for street purposes—the name of Captain Porter is honored, for he is the oldest paving brick manufacturer in the United States, and it was due to his efforts that brick was adopted for this purpose by municipalities.

"Captain Porter's success in the business world should encourage ambitious men of the present and future generations. Discouragement on all sides—even ridicule—proved to obstacle when his experiments in the manufacture of brick convinced him that vitrified fire clay was adaptable for street paving. He introduced paving brick after members of councils in cities laughed at the idea. But when his arguments failed to win over skeptics he adopted the novel plan of shipping a nominal number of brick to cities to be used in paving a portion of a street for testing purposes. And after each test came a substantial order.

"To Captain Porter belongs the credit for manufacturing the brick used for the first paved street in Wheeling. This was in the early '80s. In 1884 he introduced paving brick in Ohio, his product being used to improve a section of Third Street in the City of Steubenville. And so satisfactory did the vitrified fire clay prove that twenty-six years later—in 1910—authorities of Steubenville forwarded a letter, pointing out that no repairs had been necessary to the portion of the thoroughfare paved with brick from his plan except when the street was torn up to lay pipe or street car lines.

"Not only in commercial affairs did Captain Porter make his mark. He was a familiar figure in the river trade and was a leader in West Virginia politics. He served one term as sheriff of Hancock County and two terms in the West Virginia Legislature, of which one of his four sons, J. Nessly Porter, is now a member.

"The Ohio Valley has suffered a great loss in the death of Mr. Porter."

Captain Porter was born at Martins Ferry, Ohio, August 7, 1838, son of Moses Porter. It was in the early period of his life that he had his experience as an Ohio River man. He operated a line of steamboats and barges on the Ohio and Mississippi between Pittsburgh and New Orleans. He was owner of the steamboat which bore his name and which in 1877 came up the river from Memphis with several of the crew suffering from yellow fever. None of the towns along the way would permit the boat to land so as to secure medical attention, and the ill-fated barge had its ending near Gallipolis, where the disease raged all winter, six persons dying from its effects. When he became a manufacturer of brick the old hand processes were still in use, and it is said that he and his helpers could make about thirty-five hundred brick a day, firing about two kilns a week. The first brick pavement laid in any city in America was at Charleston, West Virginia, where building brick was laid on Summers Street in 1871. Although these brick were not so satisfactory as the later vitrified paving brick, they served their purpose for thirty-eight years, and some of these brick are still preserved in the state museum at Charleston. This brick used at Charleston was manufactured and sold by Captain Porter, and he always took a great deal of justifiable pride in that conception.

On December 7, 1870, Captain Porter married Miss Carrie Mahan. They celebrated their golden wedding anniversary a little over a year before the death of Captain Porter, and Mrs. Porter survives him with four sons and one daughter: Fred G., James Bennett, J. Nessly and Sidney C. Porter, and the daughter is Mrs. Fred B. Lawrence. Captain Porter was also survived by thirteen grandchildren.

In politics Captain Porter was a staunch republican, his first vote being cast for Abraham Lincoln. His service as sheriff of Hancock County was for the term 1891-95. He was twice elected a member of the West Virginia House of Delegates, serving his first term beginning in 1911.

THE GLOBE BRICK COMPANY, one of the largest plants of its kind in the Upper Ohio Valley, is located at Kenilworth, one mile below Newell and about two miles from Liverpool, Ohio. The entire community of Kenilworth is an outgrowth of the brick plant.

This industry was established at Kenilworth by the late Captain John Porter in 1893. In that year he erected the first units of the plant. That was a year of stringent financial conditions, and the hard times following compelled him to sell the property, and it was only irregularly operated until the plant was burned in 1900. Somewhat later Captain Porter again secured the property and in 1906 rebuilt the plant. In 1909 the business was incorporated with a capital stock of $150,000 under the name of the Kenilworth Brick Company. In 1920 this name was changed to the Globe Brick Company, and Captain Porter continued the active head of the business until his recent death. The stock in the company was held by himself and others of his family, including his sons Fred G., James Bennett, J. Nessly and Sidney C. All but James B. are directly interested in the operations of the company, James B. being a director in the company but giving his chief time to the management of his farm near Kenilworth. Since the death of Captain Porter Fred G. has been president and general manager; J. Nessly, secretary and treasurer; and Sidney C., in charge of the mechanical department. The company's property embraces twenty acres, about half of which is covered by the kilns, yards and other operations. The plant has the equivalent of twenty-three standard kilns, each with a capacity of sixty-five thousand brick, and the annual output ranges around twenty-five million brick. The plant has always been operated primarily for the production of paving brick, though a considerable portion of the output is building brick and fire clay brick. The company has about one hundred employees, with a pay roll of about $9,000 per month, while about a similar amount is paid out for coal for fuel. The company also owns the clay under several hundred acres of adjacent land, and this clay is sufficient for three or four generations of continuous operation.

Fred G. Porter, president of the company, like his two younger brothers, grew up in the business, and their experience has given them a practical familiarity with every phase of brick manufacture. Fred G. Porter married Margaret Allison, and their four children are: William Frederick, Richard Allison, Jane Caroline and Robert Grant. Mr. Fred Porter is a prominent Mason, and has taken both the York and Scottish Rite, with all the degrees and orders except the thirty-third in the Scottish Rite, and is a member of the Mystic Shrine. He belongs to all of these bodies in Wheeling, West Virginia.

LAFÉ CHAFIN, one of the representative attorneys of the younger generation in Mingo County, is engaged in the practice of his profession at Williamson, the county seat, in which city he was born February 1, 1896. He is a son of Rev. James M. and Elizabeth Susan (Bevins) Chafin, the former a native of West Virginia and the latter of Kentucky. The father, a clergyman of the Christian Church, was actively interested in public affairs and was specially influential in the movement which led to the creation of Mingo County, after the organization of which he was appointed the first clerk of the County Court.

In 1913 Lafe Chafin graduated from the Williamson High School, and he then entered Washington and Lee University, where he carried forward his studies in both the literary and law departments, in the latter of which he was graduated in 1917, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. Almost immediately after his graduation he found the call of patriotism greater than immediate professional ambition, for in July, 1917, he enlisted for service in the World war. He passed three months at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, where he received commission as second lieutenant and was assigned to the Forty-fifth United States Infantry. With his command he was transferred to Camp Taylor, Kentucky, later to Camp Gordon, Georgia, and thence to Camp Sheridan, Montgomery, Alabama, where his regiment received orders for overseas service. The command proceeded to Camp Mills, New York, and soon afterward sailed from the port of the national metropolis. When the transport was two days out it received orders to return, owing to the signing of the historic armistice. Mr. Chafin and his comrades landed at Hoboken, New Jersey, November 14, 1918, and then returned to Camp Mills. After a brief stop at Camp Sheridan, Alabama, Mr. Chafin's regiment returned to Camp Gordon, Georgia, where it was assigned service in connection with demobilization. He there received his honorable discharge in September, 1919, and upon his return to Williamson he entered the law office of B. Randolph Bias. In March, 1920, he was admitted to the bar of his native state, at Charleston, and then became associated with Mr. Bias in practice. On the 1st of January, 1922, Mr. Bias, one of the leading members of the bar of the state, admitted him to professional partnership, under the firm name of Bias & Chafin, and thus he initiates the practice of his profession under most favorable auspices, while his admission to this partnership betokens alike his sterling character and professional ability. The firm is retained as counsel for the Coal Operators Association, and its practice is thus largely of corporation order. Mr. Chafin is a member of the Mingo County Bar Association and the West Virginia Bar Association, is affiliated with the American Legion, the Alpha Chi Rho college fraternity and the Masonic fraternity, and in the Masonic fraternity he has membership in the local Blue Lodge, Chapter and Commandery of the York Rite and the Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Wheeling. He is a democrat in political allegiance, and he and his wife hold membership in the Presbyterian Church.

In New York City, in 1918, Mr. Chafin wedded Miss Gladys Claire Pierce, daughter of W. Frank and Clara (Miller) Pierce, of Buckhannon, West Virginia, where Mr. Pierce is engaged in the timber and lumber business. Mr. and Mrs. Chafin are popular figures in the representative social activities of their home city.

LAFAYETTE E. LAWSON, D. D. S. In the career of Dr. Lafayette E. Lawson, a leading dental specialist of Williamson, there are to be found those elements which make interesting biography. Success in professional life, varied experiences of a military character, interest in civic affairs and modest personal deportment serve to make him a figure to be singled out in his community, where, however, he is inclined to prefer to be known merely as an earnest follower of an honorable profession and a citizen who respects the laws of his state and country.

Doctor Lawson was born February 22, 1890, in Mingo County, West Virginia, a son of Harry and Ella (Murray) Lawson, natives of Virginia. His father has been engaged in the real estate business for many years, and is one of the prominent and influential men of his locality. After attending the public schools Lafayette E. Lawson pursued a course at the Williamson High School, from which he was graduated as a member of the class of 1906. He then entered the University of Kentucky, at Louisville, and in 1910 was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery. He began practice at Hempstead, Texas, where he remained for two years, and in 1912 took up his residence and opened an office at Williamson, West Virginia, where he now specializes in dental reconstruction work.

On January 4, 1916, Doctor Lawson enlisted in the army recruiting service, and while stationed at Columbus, Ohio, was commissioned second lieutenant. In March, 1917, when his detachment was transferred to Fort McPherson, he was put into field work as a field officer, and later was stationed for two months at Camp Stuart, Newport News. Ordered overseas, Doctor Lawson was attached to the British forces at Saint Dizier, France, whence troops were dispatched to the front, and remained with the British until the American troops got into the field, when he joined the Second Pioneer Infantry, Second Army Corps, under General Huiler, remaining with that outfit during all its numerous engagements in the Meuse, Argonne, St. Mihiel and Verdun sectors. When the armistice was signed Doctor Lawson was attached to the S. O. S. salvage department, and after being at Dijon and Buda Pesth, Germany, for the Red Cross, returned to Belgium, sailed from Antwerp, and arrived at Hoboken in 1920. He went then to Camp Grant, where he received his honorable discharge, with the rank of captain, having received his commission as such in 1919.

Upon his return to Williamson Doctor Lawson joined the state troops as captain and went into Logan County, where he remained in the state service for a month, during all the trouble with the striking miners. Receiving his honorable discharge in September, 1921, he returned to Williamson and resumed his practice, in which he has been very successful. He has reached a high place in his profession and belongs to the various organizations thereof, likewise holding membership in the Elks and the Kiwanis Club.

MARVIN LAMBERT. Nearly twenty years of experience in the coal industry has given Marvin Lambert a thorough insight into the business, and the various position which he has held and the territory which he has covered have combined to make him well and favorably known, particularly in his present location, Borderland, Mingo County, where he is cashier and assistant secretary of the Borderland Coal Corporation. Mr. Lambert is a native of Rush, Kentucky, and was born February 2, 1883, a son of Samuel T. and Margaret Elizabeth (Simpson) Lambert, natives of Kentucky. The Lambert family came originally from Virginia, while the Simpsons have been known for many years in Kentucky.

Samuel T. Lambert, one of the pioneer coal men in this district of West Virginia, came here from Kentucky in 1893 and located at Thacker, where he worked as a miner for the old Maritime Coal Company. When he left Thacker he became superintendent of the Red Jacket Consolidated Companies, and came to this locality before Mingo County was formed. After its organization as a county he was honored by election as first justice of the peace, and served capably and honorably in that capacity. Embarking in business for himself, he became the organizer of the Magnolia Coal Company, but later went to Logan County, where he had charge of the Shamrock Mine. Next Mr. Lambert went West as superintendent for a Colorado mining company, but after one year in Colorado returned to West Virginia and located in Mingo County as superintendent of the Stone Mountain Coal Company, an industry with which he remained two years. On leaving that concern he went into the mercantile business at Matewan, West Virginia. At the age of sixty-one years Mr. Lambert is still active not only in business life but in civic affairs as well. A republican since his early manhood, he has been one of the wheel-horses of his party, and his political record is an eminently honorable one. In fact his honesty has been such that on several occasions in the past he has been betrayed and sacrificed by unscrupulous politicians, who have traded upon his integrity and belief in his fellows to further their own ends. Mr. Lambert's name has been prominently mentioned in connection with the office of mine inspector for this district.

Marvin Lambert was given the advantages of attendance at the country schools of Carter County, Kentucky, and for four and one-half years worked as clerk for his father, who was serving in the capacity of postmaster. Next he took a course at the National Business College, Roanoke, Virginia, and upon its completion returned for a time to the postoffice, but in November, 1903, began his experience with the coal industry when he started to work as pay roll clerk for the Red Jacket Coal Company. He remained with that concern until September 30, 1908, when he resigned to venture into the hazardous field of politics as a candidate for the office of Circuit Court clerk. Being defeated, he secured employment as cashier and purchasing agent for the Crozer Coal and Coke Company at Elkhorn, West Virginia, with which firm he remained two years and nine months. On October 1, 1911, he came to Borderland as bookkeeper and cashier for the Borderland Coal Company, remaining until May 5, 1913, when he moved to Bluefield as bookkeeper for the Baldwin-Felt Detective Agency. After eight months he joined the Guyandotte Coal Company at Kitchen, West Virginia, and remained three and one-half months, then returning to Bluefield and becoming a traveling salesman. In July, 1914, he returned to Borderland, where he has since been cashier and assistant secretary of the Borderland Coal Corporation, located on the main line of the Norfolk and Western Railroad, six miles west of Williamson. Mr. Lambert bears an excellent reputation in mining circles, and is considered one of the thoroughly informed men in his line.

On October 11, 1905, at Edgerton, West Virginia, Mr. Lambert was united in marriage with Miss Nellie Adams, daughter of Charles J. and Elizabeth Adams, natives of Kentucky, where Mr. Adams was superintendent of a coal mine. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Lambert: Evelyn Francis, born in 1906, and Helen Adams, born in 1907. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and are generous contributors to all worthy movements, either of a religious, educational or civic character. Politically Mr. Lambert gives his allegiance to the democratic party. He is a Scottish Rite Mason and a member of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

BENJAMIN J. READ, M. D., who since 1911 has been in charge of mine practice in the coal district of Mingo County, where he is in charge of the professional service of this order for the Red Jacket Consolidated Coal Company, maintains his home and headquarters at Red Jacket. He is a skilled physician and surgeon who is aiding effectively in maintaining the high standard of his profession in the state.

Doctor Read was born on the family homestead farm in Bedford County, Virginia, August 11, 1876, and is a son of Thomas G. and Imogene Penn (Jordan) Read. Thomas G. Read was born on the same old homestead, in 1851, and there his death occurred in 1913, his widow still remaining there. Thomas G. Read was a university graduate, but was content to devote his attention to the basic industries of agriculture and stock-growing, of which he continued a successful exponent in his native state until the close of his life. He was a democrat and was influential in public affairs of a local order. His father, Dr. John Thomas Wyatt Read, was named in honor of three Read brothers who died at Valley Forge while serving as patriot soldiers in the War of the Revolution. The American progenitors of the Read family came from the ancestral seat of the family at Readsdale in the North of England, one representative of the name having settled in New Jersey, one in Bedford County, Virginia, and one in a state farther to the south. George Read, another member of the family, was a resident of Delaware and figures in history as one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Dr. John T. W. Read owned a fine landed estate of 2,500 acres on the Lynchburg and Salem Turnpike in Bedford County, Virginia, and most of this property is still in the possession of the family. He was long one of the leading physicians and surgeons of that section of the Old Dominion State, and was a man of far-reaching influence in connection with civic and public affairs.

Dr. Benjamin J. Read, the only son in a family of five children, gained much of his early education in New London Academy, near the old home, this institution having been founded in 1793 and is still one of the important industrial schools of Virginia. At this academy the doctor continued his studies until he was eighteen years of age, and in 1896 he matriculated in the medical department of the historic old University of Virginia, in which he was graduated as a member of the class of 1900. After thus receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine he was for two years established in practice at Bellevue in his native county. For five years thereafter he was connected with the medical department of the United States Bureau of Pensions in the City of Washington, D. C., and he next passed one year in Oklahoma as special examiner for this bureau. In April, 1911, Doctor Read established his residence at Red Jacket, West Virginia, where his large general and mine practice places heavy demands upon his time and attention and marks him as one of the representative physicians and surgeons of Mingo County. Until its destruction by fire Doctor Read also had charge of the hospital at Matewan. He is a member of the Mingo County Medical Society, West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. In the Masonic fraternity he is affiliated with Marshall Lodge No. 39, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Lynchburg, Virginia; the Chapter of Royal Arch Masons at Wayne, West Virginia; Bluefield Commandery No. 19, Knights Templars, at Bluefield, this state; and the Consistory of the Scottish Rite at Wheeling. The doctor is a past noble grand of Friendship Lodge No. 12, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, at Washington, D. C., is a member of the Lodge of Elks at Huntington, his religious faith is that of the Presbyterian Church, and his wife holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

June 8, 1921, recorded the marriage of Doctor Read and Miss Chloe Dymple Spriegel, daughter of E. L. Spriegel, of Red Jacket, and she is a popular figure in the representative social life of the community.

EVAN THOMAS. A leading figure in the coal industry of Mingo County is Evan Thomas, superintendent of the Cinderella Mine and a man who has had much experience in his line of endeavor. Mr. Thomas has been a constructive force in the activities which have contributed to the development of this region, and has played his part in the movements which have uncovered some rich coal mining properties. He was born at Monmouthshire, England, March 10, 1873, and is a son of James and Elizabeth (Williams) Thomas, natives of Wales and England, respectively.

On the paternal side Mr. Thomas is descended from an old Welch family, while on the maternal side he is connected with the Williams family, which at one time conducted the famous Whistle Inn at Blau Aron, England, one of the most noted of the old English inns. His parents immigrated to the United States and located at Scranton, Pennsylvania, in 1881, and there James Thomas, who had been a skilled and experienced miner in the old country, secured as his first employment the work of sinking what was known as the Saloon shaft. In this line he was accounted an expert, and followed the same specialty at various places, including Glenlyon, Luzerne and other places in Pennsylvania, until 1890, when he removed to Randolph County, West Virginia.

Evan Thomas attended the common school at Scranton, Pennsylvania, but as he started to work when he was only eleven years of age his education was somewhat limited, although later he attended school intermittently during the winter months when it was not possible for him to be at his employment. His first work was as a trapper, after which he was made a mule driver, and before he had reached the age of twenty years he had been advanced to the post of boss driver. About this time he came with his father to Randolph County, West Virginia, and first located at Pickens Post Office, where he entered the lumber business as a buyer of lumber for the Kele & Morgan Company, and also acted as an inspector. During the five years that he was identified with this concern he spent two years in North Carolina. Later he became identified with the Keyes-Fannon Company as superintendent of their lumber mill, and for five years continued as the head of this band-saw and circular-saw mill. In 1911 he left this firm and joined the Sycamore Coal Company, opening up all their properties, including the Cinderella Mine, erecting the buildings for the housing of the miners, as well as the office, stores, etc., and getting out much of the lumber, for, while he was a miner, he was likewise a lumberman and his experience in both directions assisted him greatly. Since then Mr. Thomas has continued as general superintendent of the Cinderella Mine, located at Cinderella Post Office, about two and one-half miles up the branch of the N. & W. Railway, which turns off the main line about three miles east of Williamson. He is widely and favorably known in coal mining circles of this part of the state, and has the confidence of his employers and the respect of his men. Mr. Thomas is a thirty-second degree, Scottish Rite Mason, a Knight Templar, an Elk, a Shriner and a Pythian Knight. With his family he belongs to the Presbyterian Church. On May 9, 1908, Mr. Thomas married at Pikeville, Kentucky, Miss Josephine L. Francis, daughter of D. L. and Katherine (Dean) Francis, natives of Kentucky. Mr. Francis, who at one time was engaged in the lumber business with the W. M. Ritter Lumber Company, is now engaged in the insurance business at Pikeville. Mrs. Thomas is a direct descendant of the distinguished Dr. James Draper of Philadelphia, and on her mother's side belongs to the Gibson family of which Charles Dana Gibson is a member.

ERVIN PRENTICE STEPP, M. D., is another of the able physicians and surgeons engaged in successful general practice in the great coal-mining districts of West Virginia, his residence and professional headquarters being at Kermit, Mingo County.

Doctor Stepp was born at Pilgrim, Martin County, Kentucky, September 30, 1888, and is the only child of Moses and Elizabeth (Payne) Stepp, whose marriage was solemnized in that county, where Mrs. Stepp was born and reared. Moses Stepp was born in Tennessee, and after his marriage he was actively identified with the timber business on Tug River in Kentucky and West Virginia, his death having occurred when he was still a young man and when his only child, subject of this sketch, was a small boy. The widowed mother later became the wife of C. C. Fannin, a lawyer in Martin County, and later they came to Mingo County, West Virginia, and established their home at Naugatuck. There the death of Mr. Fannin occurred, and his widow now resides with her son, Dr. Ervin P. Stepp, who is still an eligible bachelor.

Doctor Stepp acquired his early education in the public schools of Martin and Lawrence counties, Kentucky, and as a young man he was a successful teacher in the schools of Martin County and also Mingo County, West Virginia, he having taught six different schools. Finally, with his savings and the further financial reinforcement gained through money lent to him by friends who approved his ambitious purpose, he went to St. Louis, Missouri, in 1911, and there entered the National University, where he completed his high school course the first year and also passed the examination that enabled him to enter the medical department of the institution. In his last year at the university he again did double work, by taking not only the regular studies of the medical school but also specialized in the study of diseases of children. After receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine from this institution he was for two years engaged in practice at Parma, New Madrid County, Missouri, and he then returned to his native county in Kentucky, whence, shortly afterward, he came to Kermit, West Virginia, where he has since built up a most successful practice, in which he is associated with Dr. H. Haws. This representative professional firm has the practice of the Himler, Earlston and Grey Eagle mines in addition to a large general practice. Doctor Stepp is a member of the Mingo County Medical Society, the West Virginia Medical Society and the American Medical Association, he is a democrat in politics and is affiliated with the Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons at Inez, Kentucky. His revered and devoted mother presides over the domestic economies and social hospitalities of their pleasant home, she having been his inspiration, his guide and counsellor, and he having provided for her since his boyhood days, with utmost filial solicitude.

THOMAS A. SHEWEY has the characteristics and the ample experience that combine to make him one of the efficient and popular executives in connection with coal-mining operations. He is manager of the Grey Eagle Mine of the Grey Eagle Coal Company at Grey Eagle, in the extreme lower end of Mingo County, West Virginia, and also of the Dempsey Coal Company, the mine of which is situated in the adjoining Kentucky County of Martin, the tipple of this mine being over the line in West Virginia. The Grey Eagle Mine was opened in 1908 and the Dempsey Mine, in 1919, under the direct management of Mr. Shewey, who has been actively identified with operations in this field since 1916.

Mr. Shewey, who maintains his home and executive headquarters in the Village of Grey Eagle, was born on his father's farm in Bland County, Virginia, December 13, 1877, and is a son of Walter and Ellen (Fry) Shewey, the former of whom died in 1915, at the age of fifty-eight years, and the latter of whom remains on the old home farm, she having attained to the venerable age of seventy-eight years (1922). Mrs. Ellen Shewey is a daughter of Abram Fry, who was born in Wythe County, Virginia, and who died in Bland County, that state, in 1920, at the remarkable age of ninety-eight years, his active career having been one of close association with farm enterprise. Walter Shewey was a son of Washington Shewey, who was an early settler and representative farmer in Bland County and who also served the United States Government as collector of internal revenue. When the Civil war was precipitated Washington Shewey was so determined not to be drawn into the Confederate service, owing to his intense loyalty to the Federal Government, that he set forth with wagon and ox team and made his way across the plains to the gold fields of Montana, where he gained pioneer honors. He eventually returned to Virginia, where he passed the remainder of his life. He was a stalwart republican, as have been the other men of the family in later generations, he was affiliated with the Masonic fraternity and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Walter and Ellen (Fry) Shewey became the parents of four sons and one daughter: Charles A. is a merchant at Carus, Bland County, Virginia; William F. is engaged in the cotton-seed oil business in Kansas City, Missouri; David F. is a farmer of Virginia; Thomas A., of this sketch, was next in order of birth; Maude is the wife of P. A. Conner, and they reside in the State of Florida.

Thomas A. Shewey attended graded school in his native county, and at the age of twenty years was graduated in the high school at Sharon. Thereafter he was for two years a student in the department of liberal arts in Grant University, Athens, Tennessee, and in 1902 he came to the Pocahontas coal fields of West Virginia. He became a salesman in the general store conducted by the Mill Creek Coal & Coke Company at Cooper, McDowell County, and six months later he was transferred to the company's engineering department. He severed his connection with this company two years later and entered the employ of the Cirrus Coal & Coke Company at Big Four, McDowell County, where he remained seven years—first as bookkeeper and thereafter as manager. During the ensuing seven years he was manager of the Margaret Mining Company at War Eagle, Mingo County, and since 1916 he has been connected with the Grey Eagle Coal Company, of which he is mine manager, as is he also of the Dempsey Coal Company. He has been actively concerned in virtually all of the great coal development in this section of West Virginia. Mr. Shewey is uncompromising in his allegiance to the republican party. His basic Masonic affiliation is with Vivian Lodge No. 105, Ancient Free & Accepted Masons, at Vivian, McDowell County, besides which he is a member of the Chapter

B. B. Wheeler, F.A.C.S.

Royal Arch Masons at Northfork, that county, the Commandery of Knights Templars at Bluefield and the Temple the Mystic Shrine in the City of Charleston.

The year 1910 recorded the marriage of Mr. Shewey and ss Mao Peetry, daughter of Mrs. Virginia Peetry, and three children of this union are Virginia, Thomas A., and Frederick.

JOHN CARL LAWSON, M. D. One of the younger men in a profession, Doctor Lawson is an exceptionally able and skillful surgeon, and has the heavy responsibilities of being physician and surgeon in charge of all the mining practice of the Borderland Coal Corporation, the Chatarray Coal Company and the Winifrede-Thacker Coal Company's mines in Mingo County. His home and office are in Borderland.

Doctor Lawson is a native of Mingo County, born on Camore Creek, near Williamson, July 20, 1894. He is the son of Harry and Ellen (Murray) Lawson, residents of Williamson. His father is fifty-five and his mother is fifty-eight. Harry Lawson, beginning in early manhood and continuing until a few years hence, was an active timber man on the Tug River. He rafted a great volume of timber to market on the Ohio River and became widely known as a successful business man. He also was born on Sycamore Creek in Mingo County, while his wife is a native of Louisville, Kentucky. The Cinderella Coal Mines are located on the Lawson lands. Doctor Lawson is the second in a family of four children. All three of the sons saw active service in the World War. Dr. L. E. Lawson, a Williamson dentist, became a first lieutenant, was trained at Camp Gordon, and during the fifteen months he was in service was first with the Fifty-seventh Engineers and then in the Third Pioneer Infantry, and while on duty in the battle lines was severely wounded. He received his discharge at Camp Grant. Lee, the youngest son, trained at Camp Houston, Texas, and completed his early literary education in the University of Maryland and is now in the University of West Virginia. His daughter, Lena, is a student in West Virginia University.

John Carl Lawson acquired his early education in the Randolph-Macon Academy and Randolph-Macon College, and in 1917 he graduated from the College of Medicine and Surgery of Chicago. While in school he made surgery his special study, and after graduating he was house surgeon of St. Anthony's Hospital in Chicago. From there he returned to West Virginia and was connected with the Logan Miners' Hospital at Logan. In April, 1918, he was commissioned a first lieutenant. He began his medical training at Camp Grant, and later was assigned to Camp Lee and then to Camp Mills and from there went overseas. After the armistice was signed he was with the Eighth Division and the Embarkation Hospital, taking care of the wounded, and after his return to the United States he remained for eight months in charge of hospital trains from Hoboken to all parts of the United States. Upon his discharge from the army Doctor Lawson came to his present duties at Borderland.

He is a member of the various medical associations, and is affiliated with O'Bryan Lodge No. 101 at Williamson, Wheeling Consistory and a Shrine in Charleston. He is an active member of the Presbyterian Church.

October 4, 1919, he married Esther Clyde, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Clyde, of Olean, New York. Doctor and Mrs. Lawson have one son, John C., Jr.

BENJAMIN BLAINE WHEELER, M. D. As chief of staff and surgeon of the King's Daughters Hospital at Beckley, Dr. Benjamin Blaine Wheeler occupies a recognized position of prominence in medical circles of Raleigh County. His activities, however, are not strictly confined to the limits of his profession, for he is likewise well known in public affairs and in business and financial affairs. He has contributed materially to the advancement and progress of the various communities in which he has lived and labored, and in all respects has proven himself a man of broad mind and versatile gifts.

Doctor Wheeler was born at Clay Court House, Clay County, West Virginia, July 24, 1876, and is a son of Edward B. and Sarah J. (Hamrich) Wheeler. Edward B. Wheeler was born at Jane Low, Lewis County, West Virginia, in 1836, and as a young man engaged in farming. When the war between the states came on his sympathies were with the North, and he accordingly enlisted in the Union Army and was assigned to Company F, First West Virginia Volunteer Infantry. At one time he was a prisoner for six months, but escaped while being transported from one prison to another, and later took part in the heavy fighting around Petersburg and before Richmond, he also being present at Appomattox. At Droop Mountain, Pocahontas County, he was shot through the body, and this wound left him an invalid for the remainder of his life, although he still engaged in farming to some extent and rounded out a useful career. Always active in republican politics, he served as postmaster at Clay, as justice of the peace and as a member of the County Court, and at one time was elected to the State Senate on the first count, but lost his seat in the recount of votes. He died in 1899, respected and esteemed. Mrs. Wheeler, who was born in 1856, at Braxton, West Virginia, died in 1912. They were the parents of six sons and two daughters, of whom three sons are now living: G. B., a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Baltimore, who is now engaged in practice at Cressmont, near Lexington, Kentucky; J. B., who is assistant cashier of the Elk Valley Bank at Clay; and Dr. Benjamin Blaine.

Dr. Benjamin B. Wheeler attended public school at Clay Court House, and during his spare time worked on his father's farm, cut and rafted timber on the Elk River, worked in construction camps for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company, and turned his hand to whatever honorable employment came his way. He also taught two schools, and then entered Glenville State Normal School, from which he was graduated in 1900, at that time becoming principal of the Clay schools, which he had attended as a lad. Doctor Wheeler spent only one term in educational work, and then entered the Medical College of Louisville, Kentucky, from which he was graduated in 1904, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. This training was later supplemented by post-graduate courses in 1906 and 1908 in the New York Polyclinic, where he specialized in surgery. After leaving medical college he located at his boyhood home, Clay Court House, and in 1906 became superintendent and surgeon in charge of the McKendrie State Hospital, where he remained until 1917. In that year he became superintendent and surgeon of the Chesapeake & Ohio Hospital at Clifton Forge, Virginia, resigning in September, 1921, to take charge of the King's Daughters Hospital at Beckley. Doctor Wheeler keeps fully abreast of the wonderful advancements constantly being made in medicine and surgery, and is a member of the Raleigh County Medical Society, the West Virginia Medical Society, the American Medical Association and the American College of Surgeons. He is a registered pharmacist in West Virginia. Doctor Wheeler has a number of prominent business connections, and is president of the Elk Valley Bank, and a director of the National Bank of Thurmond and of the Carver Fork Coal Company of Clay County. An active and influential republican, as early as 1893 he served as general clerk in the West Virginia House of Delegates. In 1916 and 1917 he was chairman of the Fayette County Republican Central Committee, and in 1920 was delegate-at-large from Virginia to the Republican National Convention at Chicago which nominated Warren G. Harding for the presidency. Fraternally Doctor Wheeler is a member of Warren Lodge No. 109, at Berry, West Virginia; Sewell Chapter, R. A. M., at Thurmond; Hinton Commandery, K. T., and Beni-Kedem Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., at Charleston, as well as West Virginia Consistory, S. R. M., thirty-second degree, at Wheeling. He is a life member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks at Hinton, and holds membership in the Clifton Forge Kiwanis Club.

In 1903 Doctor Wheeler was united in marriage with Miss Fannie L. McMillan, of Louisville, Kentucky. They are members of the Clifton Forge (Virginia) Methodist Episcopal Church.

PERRY C. WILLIAMS. Until he was well on toward middle age Mr. Williams kept his energies concentrated upon his farming and stock-raising enterprise. For over twenty years he has been a resident of Clarksburg, and though a man of ample means has never been satisfied with a career of leisure. His activities and interests make him an associate of some of the busiest and most influential men in that city.

This is one of the oldest of Harrison County families, and descendants of the original settler are numerous represented here. In the different generations, covering more than a century, the people of this name have taken an important part in the development of both town and country and in public affairs.

The original settler in this county was William Williams. One of his descendants, George W. Williams, of Harrison County, has made some investigation as to the family lineage and has concluded that William Williams was not, as some have thought, born in Wales, but that his father was a native of that country and came to America in 1740, settling near Philadelphia. William Williams was born April 10, 1772, probably in Pennsylvania, and as a young man removed to Maryland, where on August 22, 1797, he married Sophia Freshour, who was of German lineage. For a time they lived in the vicinity of Baltimore, and in 1799 William Williams crossed the mountains by wagon and settled in Harrison County, near the present site of Wilsonburg. He arrived early enough to take some part in the development of what was essentially a pioneer district, and lived there the rest of his life. The children of William and Sophia Williams were: Mark, John, Jeremiah, Thomas, Isaac, William and three daughters.

Mark Williams, grandfather of Perry C. Williams, was born October 22, 1798, and was about a year old when the family came to Harrison County. He, therefore, lived in this county practically all his life, and died here March 23, 1847. He married Jane Tate, who was born August 13, 1803, and died October 10, 1856. Their children were: Anna, William J., Isaac, Thomas, Margaret, Sophia, Jane and Hugh. Of these the only survivor at this time is Hugh.

William J. Williams was born in Harrison County, August 6, 1826, and devoted all his active years to the farm. He was a man of fine intelligence and possessed sterling qualities of both heart and mind. He died November 21, 1901, at the age of seventy-six. William J. Williams married Elizabeth Jane Riley, who was born in Taylor County, September 8, 1825, and died November 12, 1895. Her father, Freeland Riley, came from Ireland. The children of these parents were: Margaret Ellen, Riley M., Jahuh, Sarah Ann, Mark, John T., Isaac, Polly, Perry C., James E., Thompson H., Alice, Andrew J. and Ida May. The parents were Baptists, and the father was a democrat in politics.

Perry C. Williams, who was born on the old homestead farm in Harrison County, February 2, 1861, spent his youth in a rural environment, and when not in school was helping his father carry on the work of an extensive farm. Later, by purchase, he acquired two hundred acres of the old homestead, and with that he continued his own successful efforts as a farmer and stock man until thirty-nine years of age. Mr. Williams inherited a strong constitution, and he put it into effective service through hard work and good management, and laid the basis of his prosperity while on the farm. After leaving the country he lived for a brief time in Salem, and in 1901 came to Clarksburg, where he completed his beautiful and dignified residence on East Main Street.

During the past twenty years Mr. Williams has handled a considerable volume of real estate transactions, buying chiefly with his own capital. More important still has been his effort and the use of his capital in developing vacant property in the city. He was also one of the organizers of the Empire National Bank of Clarksburg, was for a time vice president and is still on the Board of Directors.

Mr. Williams acquired a good common-school education as a boy, and for six years he was engaged in teaching, for a period from 1881 to 1887. While on the farm he also served four years, 1892-96, as justice of the peace. He is a democrat and a member of the Baptist Church.

On October 21, 1886, Mr. Williams married Miss Rosa B. Randolph, who was born at Salem, Harrison County, November 3, 1861, daughter of Lloyd F. and Elizabeth (Davis)

Randolph. The Randolphs were another early and prominent family of Harrison County, coming here from the State of New Jersey. Their original settlement was at Salem. Mrs. Williams's great-grandfather was a soldier in the American Revolution, and by virtue of her direct descent she is a member in the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams have reared four sons, all progressive young men in the business life of Clarksburg. Their names are Warren Lee, Lloyd W., Harvey C. and Jesse D.

FRANK B. HAYMAKER. His forty-five years of residence in Clarksburg also measures Mr. Haymaker's experience in the drug business here. He is one of the oldest active merchants in continuous service, and among both his older and younger associates he is esteemed as a business man of sterling integrity.

Mr. Haymaker was born at Morgantown, West Virginia, September 9, 1861. His grandfather, Leroy Haymaker, was born at Winchester, Virginia, in 1808, and in 1824 moved to Uniontown, Fayette County, Pennsylvania, where in 1830 he married Sarah Sutton, who was born in that county in 1800.

A son of Leroy Haymaker was John Hamilton Haymaker who was born in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, May 1, 1833. Early in life he learned the tailor's trade, and did some work in that line at Morgantown for a number of years. At Morgantown he married, September 4, 1859, Mary Virginia Wells, who was born at Paw Paw, West Virginia, July 1, 1843. Her parents were Marmaduke and Elvira J. (Smith) Wells, the former born at Paw Paw, October 2, 1811 and the latter in Loudoun County, Virginia, July 23, 1811. The parents of Marmaduke Wells were Richard and Nancy (Evans) Wells.

John Hamilton Haymaker and wife had the following children: Charles M., Frank B., Ella S., Horace L., William C., Edward E., Flora M., Sallie E., Richard B. and Blanche L. All were born at Morgantown, and lived there until their parents in 1877 moved to Clarksburg. At Clarksburg John H. Haymaker continued to work at his trade as a tailor and followed that vocation the rest of his life. At the time of the Civil war he was a Union soldier four years in Company I, First Regiment, Potomac Home Brigade, Maryland Cavalry. He was a republican and a Methodist. His widow lives at Clarksburg at the age of seventy-nine.

Frank B. Haymaker was sixteen years of age when he accompanied his parents to Clarksburg. He acquired his common school education at Morgantown. Soon after coming to Clarksburg he entered the drug store of his uncle, Horace L. Wells, and that early experience proved the opening for his permanent career. In 1892 he acquired an interest in his uncle's business, and the firm name was then changed to the Wells-Haymaker Company, and though the senior partner has been dead some years Mr. Haymaker still continues the business under the old name.

Mr. Haymaker is a republican, has served several terms on the Clarksburg City Council, and for four years, 1888-92, was deputy revenue collector under A. B. White. He is affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and Knights of Pythias and the Clarksburg Rotary Club. In addition to the business over which he has presided for so many years Mr. Haymaker has interests in the oil and gas fields, and is a director of the Clarksburg Light & Heat Company and the Empire National Bank of Clarksburg.

On December 28, 1888, he married at Tullahoma, Tennessee, Miss Florence Edna Gray. Their children are Genevieve, wife of George G. Lynch; Alma Earle, wife of Charles G. Coffman; Grace B., wife of J. Lee Hornor; and Edna V., wife of John Koblegard, all residents of Clarksburg.

JAMES WALKER WOODDELL is one of the veteran hotel men of the state. It is a business in which he grew from boyhood and he developed those qualities akin to genius required of the successful landlord. He has managed several well known hotels, and is now manager of the Waldo at Clarksburg.

Mr. Wooddell was born at Green Bank, Pocahontas County, West Virginia, May 14, 1873, son of William J. and Mattie (Gum) Wooddell, and grandson of James Wooddell, a native of Virginia. William J. Wooddell was born at Monterey in Highland County, Virginia, was a successful ner and merchant, served as sheriff of Pocahontas County and was a member of the Legislature. He was an active democrat. After many years of residence in Pocahontas County he moved to Webster Springs, Webster County, and died soon afterward at the age of sixty. His wife, Mattie Cole, was born at Green Bank, West Virginia, daughter of William Cole. She is still living, at the ripe age of eighty-two, at Webster Springs, where for a number of years she was proprietor of the old Wooddell House. She became the mother of three sons and six daughters.

James Walker Wooddell learned the hotel business in his father's hotel at Webster Springs, and for twenty years more was actively connected with its management. After the Webster Springs Hotel was built Mr. Wooddell leased the property, and conducted this popular house for fifteen years. For three years he was manager of the Hotel Willard Grafton, and on April 24, 1916, took charge as manager of the Waldo, the leading hotel of Clarksburg.

Mr. Wooddell is a democrat, and in 1907-08 represented Webster County in the House of Delegates. He is a Master Mason and Elk.

In 1907 Mr. Wooddell married Miss Rebecca Kessler, of Nicholas County. She died in 1916, leaving four children, named Beatrice, Martha, Virginia and James W. In 1919, Mr. Wooddell married Miss Gae Morgan, of St. Petersburg, Florida.

CLYDE ALONZO COLE is one of the prominent young bankers in West Virginia. His experience since leaving university has been concentrated on banking. His home is at Shinnston, where he is cashier of the First National Bank.

Mr. Cole was born at Grafton, June 2, 1880, son of Taylor and Emma V. (Henning) Cole. The parents were natives of Winchester, Virginia, and for many years lived at Grafton, where his father was in the furniture business. The father now deceased and the mother lives at Shinnston.

Clyde Alonzo Cole acquired a common school education in his native city, and spent two years in West Virginia university. He took up his work as a banker in 1905, and prior to coming to Shinnston in 1914 was cashier of the Grafton Bank. In Shinnston he has been cashier and has exerted a great deal of influence in building up a splendid financial institution. The bank was established in 1909, with a capital stock of $90,000, and total resources of $1,500,000. The president of the bank is George W. Harrison, and the directors include some of the best known citizens in this section of Harrison County.

Mr. Cole is a democrat, a member of the Lutheran Church and is affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. In 1902 he married Miss Florence M. Stroh, of Grafton. Their two children are Richard E. and Katherine Cole.

GROVER C. WORRELL. A leading member of the Wyoming County bar, who is also prominent in public and political affairs of his county and district, is Grover C. Worrell, of Mullens. His career has been one in which he has demonstrated high professional ethics and marked executive ability, thoroughly warranting the confidence reposed in him by the people of his community.

Mr. Worrell was born at Hillsville, Carroll County, Virginia, March 13, 1885, and is a son of Christopher C. and America V. (Watson) Worrell. The great-great-grandfather of Mr. Worrell went from Pennsylvania with two brothers during the Revolutionary war to North Carolina and was on the battlefield of Guilford Court House the day after the battle. Later the family moved to Virginia, where, in Carroll County, was born John Worrell, the grandfather of Grover C. Worrell. He was stationed at Fort Monroe during the War of 1812, and the powder horn that he carried during that war is now one of the prized possessions of his grandson. Later he became one of the distinguished citizens of his community, and was accidentally killed by a horse during the latter part of the Civil war. A cousin of John Worrell introduced General Lafayette at Philadelphia on his second visit to the country. John Worrell married Ollie Jones, a cousin of John Paul Jones.

Christopher C. Worrell was born in 1835, in Carroll County, Virginia, and was reared on a plantation, adopting agricultural pursuits for his life work when still a young man. When the war between the states came on he enlisted in the Confederate service, joining the Forty-fifth Regiment, Virginia Volunteer Infantry, under General Floyd, and saw much service in West Virginia. He rose to the rank of first lieutenant, and participated in the engagements of Carnifax Ferry, Cotton Mountain, Fayetteville and Lewisburg, and was shot through the right hand at Cloyd's Farm. A staunch and unwavering democrat, he was chairman of the Carroll County Democratic Executive Committee for thirty-five years, and always led his party to victory, but never aspired to public office on his own account. Honorable in his methods and way of living, he had the esteem and respect of all, and when he died, May 28, 1920, his community lost one of its best and most public-spirited citizens. He was thrice married. One of his wives was a Miss Wood, to which union were born five children. After her death he married America V. Watson, who was born in Carroll County in 1852, and died in 1897, and they became the parents of five children. Of the two families seven were sons, two now being residents of Wyoming County: Edgar Watson, engaged in the practice of law at Pineville; and Grover C., of this review. A twin brother of Grover C. Worrell is a well-known physician of Mount Airy, North Carolina.

Grover C. Worrell received his early education in the home schools and academy, and subsequently attended Washington and Lee University, after having taught in four rural school districts in Carroll County. In January, 1910, while still a student, he took the bar examination and was admitted to practice, and in June of the same year graduated from Washington and Lee with his degree of Bachelor of Laws. On August 14, 1910, he went to Pineville and engaged in practice, and in February, 1912, came to Mullens and took the census of this community, at that time a hamlet of only 241 population. Later he wrote the present charter of Mullens. Mr. Worrell was appointed prosecuting attorney to fill out the unexpired term of Judge Bailey when the latter was called to the Circuit bench, and made a very satisfactory official from every standpoint. At present he is being mentioned very favorably as the nominee for Congress of the democratic party in his district. He has a large and lucrative law practice, and is acknowledged one of the most learned, thorough and able legists in Wyoming County, while his qualifications as to citizenship and personal probity are of the highest. Mr. Worrell is a stockholder in the Bank of Mullens and a member of the Board of Directors and attorney for the First National Bank of Pineville. He is a Methodist in his religious faith, while Mrs. Worrell is a Baptist. Judge Worrell is now master of Mullens Lodge, A. F. and A. M.; a member of Princeton Chapter, R. A. M.; has attained the Scottish Rite degree at Huntington; is a Knight Templar at Wheeling, and a Noble of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston. He also holds membership in the Knights of Pythias and the Loyal Order of Moose, and is a past dictator of the latter.

On September 3, 1913, Mr. Worrell married Ethelena Jennings, daughter of Charles L. Jennings, of Camp, Virginia, and they have one son, John Carroll.

JEDEDIAH D. FRUM. While change of scene and routine are no doubt desirable and beneficial, the welfare of humanity seems to depend chiefly on the work which continues day after day and is an elaboration of small tasks well done. An example of this type of faithfulness is the person of Jedediah D. Frum, whose life since childhood has been spent on a farm in the Rosemont community of Taylor County, engaged in its duties and in the performance of those responsibilities that arise from the community need.

The Frum family was established in the new world by a colonist from Germany, and the family has been in West Virginia for considerably more than a century. Some of the history of the family is published on other pages, and with a few exceptions here is supplementary to that data. The grandfather of Jedediah Frum was Solomon Frum, who was born in Monongalia County in the closing years of the eighteenth century. John G. Frum, father of Jedediah, was a blacksmith and farmer in the Rosemont community of Taylor County. April 13, 1865, he enlisted as sixth sergeant of Company L, of the Third West Virginia Cavalry, and was on guard duty at Washington and along the Potomac until mustered out and discharged at Wheeling on June 9, 1865. He had been appointed sergeant on the second of June. The mother of Jedediah D. Frum was Elizabeth Allen. She was married to John G. Frum June 22, 1856, in Doddridge County. Her father, Joshua Allen, was born on West Fork River in Harrison County and died in Doddridge County in May, 1867, when almost seventy years of age. Barnes Allen, the father of Joshua, married Eve Swiger, and their sons were: Stephen, Joshua, John and Israel, and their daughters were Katie and Rebecca, who married brothers, Starling and Tom Bartlett. Joshua Allen married Rebecca Whiteman, of a Quaker family from Pennsylvania. Their children were: Rachel, who became the wife of John T. Swiger; Pindall, who lived in Doddridge County; Doddridge, who was a farmer in that county; Israel, who died on McElroy Creek; Osburn, who spent his life as a farmer on Indian Creek in Tyler County; Washington, who lived out his life at Rock Camp, Harrison County; Eve, who married Winter Hutson, of Doddridge County; Elizabeth; Stephen, who died in Webster County; and Abram, who died in young manhood.

Mrs. Elizabeth Frum is now nearly ninety years of age. Her son Jedediah was born at Center Point, Doddridge County, June 28, 1857, and was about eight years of age when his parents moved to Taylor County, reaching the community of Rosemont November 28, 1865. Here he spent his boyhood and youth and acquired a common school education. Mr. Frum still lives with and takes care of his aged mother. In all the sixty-four years of his life he has never been absent from her as long as six months. While he was teaching school he was away four months. Although not specially prepared for schoolwork, he began teaching at the age of seventeen and taught four terms altogether.

Following that for eight years he worked around the mines of Tyronnell, now Rosemont, with the Newburg-Oral Coal Company. Aside from this his attention has been given to farming and stock raising. His farm is a part of the Solomon Frum homestead.

While he deserves honor for the material success he has accomplished as a farmer and his devotion to home duties, Mr. Frum has been a valuable member of the community. He has served fifteen years as a member of the Board of Education of Flemington District, was president of the board eleven years and he served fifteen years as road surveyor or supervisor. Good roads and good schools are the matters closest to his heart in the way of community improvement and advancement. While he was on the board the first high school was established in the district and two good grade schools were also erected. Mr. Frum has been a staunch republican in politics, though in local elections he votes for the man rather than the party. While not a member of any church, he believes in the wholesomeness of churches. He is a past noble grand of the Odd Fellows Lodge and four times was a representative to the Grand Lodge.

In Taylor County May 5, 1895, Mr. Frum married Miss Sarah L. Curry, who was born near Rosemont in 1863, daughter of Lloyd Melvin Curry. Her mother was a Houston. She was the second of three children, the other two being Ella V., who married John F. Finley, and Luther Curry, who died near Boothville, Taylor County. The one child of Mr. and Mrs. Frum is a son, John Morris, born May 13, 1898. He is a graduate of the Flemington District High School and finished the electrical engineering course in West Virginia University, graduating June 13, 1921. He is now in his practical apprenticeship as an electrical engineer in the shops of the Westinghouse Company at Pittsburgh. While a student at Morgantown he enlisted for the Coast Artillery, was trained at Camp Lee, Virginia, and received his honorable discharge at Fortress Monroe.

WILLIAM CLINTON FRUM. The Frum family was established in the wilderness of West Virginia soon after the close of the Revolutionary war, and members of some four or five generations have left their impress as good citizens in several localities, including Taylor County, where William Clinton Frum has lived most of his life. Farming and coal mining have perhaps been the chief activities of the family, and members have also been noted for their readiness to respond to military service when the nation required it. The two sons of William C. Frum are both ex-service men of the great war.

The grandfather of William C. Frum was Solomon Frum who was born probably in Monongalia County in 1793. His career was that of a farmer, and as a young man he moved to that portion of Harrison County that is now Taylor County, and his last years were spent at Rosemont, where he died November 9, 1869. He married Tabitha Goodwin who died December 10, 1872, at the age of seventy-five years and eight months. They had fourteen children, and brief mention is made of the following: Sylvester, who died in Doddridge County, leaving two children; John Goodwin, whose record follows; Nancy, who married Thomas Shier and died in Doddridge County; George W., who spent his last years as a farmer at Bridgeport; Sallie, who became the wife of Samuel Douglass and died in Doddridge County; Andrew J., who was a farmer of Doddridge County; Zad M., who lived in Taylor County and is buried at Baileytown Church; Hamilton G., who was a Union soldier in the Civil war and died in Randolph County; Porter, who lost a leg while in the Union Army, died at Rosemont and lies in the National Cemetery at Grafton; Elizabeth, wife of Alfr Williams, living in Harrison County; Malinda, who married Charles Lanham and lives on the waters of Ten-Mile Harrison County; and Frank, one of the older children, who died in Doddridge County.

John Goodwin Frum, father of William C., was born 1824 at Rosemont, Taylor County, and the log cabin that was his birthplace is still standing on the farm of his son Clinton. He grew up there, had little opportunity to attend school, and could barely sign his name and do a little reading. He learned the blacksmith's trade, and work of the trade as farming constituted the employment of his active years. Prior to the Civil war he moved to Doddridge County, and while there, toward the close of the war, he enlisted as ninety-day man in the Third West Virginia Cavalry. His regiment was ordered to Washington, and its chief service was guard duty at Washington and along the Potomac River. He never saw any active fighting. He was a republican and he died May 10, 1886, and is buried in the Baileytown Cemetery of Taylor County. His first wife was Mary McRow, and to that marriage were born two children: Solomon who spent his last years at Harold, South Dakota, where he died, leaving a wife and two daughters; and Miss Irene, who is living at Rosemont. The second wife of John G. Frum was Elizabeth Allen, who was born in Doddridge County April 22, 1833, and is now living, in her ninetieth year, being one of the children of Joshua Allen and wife. Her children are: Jedediah D., of Rosemont; William Clinton; Osborn of Adamston, West Virginia; and Jerome, of Webster.

William Clinton Frum was born November 28, 1859, when his parents were living in Doddridge County, and on his sixteenth birthday the family returned to Taylor County, and practically ever since his home has been in the vicinity of Rosemont or Tyronnell. He acquired a common school education in the Tyronnell School, and as a boy he was trained to the strenuous work of a farm, learning how to wield all the simple instruments contained in the farm equipment of that time, chiefly the ax, the maul, the grubbing bar and the plow. About the time he reached his majority he took a contract to clear a piece of ground, but on account of the hard winter made such a slow progress that he abandoned the work to go into a coal mine. Mr. Frum spent thirteen years as a practical miner, and since then his activities have been with the farm and as a carpenter. His first purchase of land included a portion of the Solomon Frum homestead at Rosemont. This is chiefly grazing land, and he raises on it sheep, cows and horses, and devotes the cultivated land to corn and wheat. Outside the farm his chief business interests are as a stockholder in the Farmers Bank of Clarksburg, as a stockholder and director in the Taylor County Bank at Grafton, and he is one of the original promoters and stockholders of the Flemington Bank at Flemington.

In politics he has been a republican all his voting years.

Harry W. Sheets,

al has served as one of the trustees of the Rosemont or Reconnell School. During the World war he took an active part in the sale of bonds and stamps and worked with the Rosemont committee that put the community "over the top" every drive. He and Mrs. Frum are members of the Bailey Methodist Protestant Church, of which he is one of the steers. His two sons are Masons, Sheridan being a knier.

While in Harrison County Mr. Frum made the acquaintance
Nora E. Morris, and they were married April 20, 1893.
She is the daughter of John M. and Emilia J. (Robison) Morris. Her father, a son of George Morris, an early settler in Harrison County, was born in that county, and lived on a farm where he died May 26, 1901. His widow survived.
Mrs. Frum was born February 24, 1873, and the other chilren of her parents were: Flavius C., who was killed by lightning and unmarried; Cora, wife of William Nicholson, living in Harrison County; and George, who died unmarried.
Mrs. Frum was educated in the common schools and was twenty years of age when she married. Three sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. Frum, but the youngest, Jerome Bud, died when about three years of age. The two survivors are Sheridan and William Hobart. Sheridan is a designer and an assistant for the Hazel-Atlas Glass Company at Clarksburg, married Ethel Gibson and has a daughter, Margaret. William Hobart is still in the home circle at Rosemont.

Sheridan Frum was called to the colors during the World war, was trained at Camp Lee, Virginia, with the Eightieth Division, and remained at Camp Lee to the end of the war as a boiler inspector.

The younger brother, Hobart, volunteered May 29, 1918, at Pittsburgh, as a machinist, and was sent to Fort Sam-Houston, San Antonio, Texas. He was in the automobile repair shop for training in the 304th Mechanical Repair Battalion. This outfit was sent to Camp Merritt, New Jersey, and thence overseas on the transport Armenia, landing at Liverpool, and nine days later went through Southampton to La Havre, and then to the Argonne Forest, where it was assigned to the Ninety-first Division. Subsequently his unit was sent to Belgium to help the French and English break the German line at Ypres and was at Audenard when the armistice was signed. Hobart was with his command when it crossed the Hindenburg line. He witnessed the destruction of that famous line on September 29, 1918. The barrage began at two o'clock in the morning and five hours later the famous line was completely in ruin. Hobart Frum started back from Iseghem, Belgium, stopping enroute to be coast to work in different repair shops, and from Brest sailed in August, 1919, on the U. S. S. President Grant, which landed in New York the seventeenth of that month.
He received his honorable discharge at Camp Dix, New Jersey.

He came home August 28 following, and a few days later entered the West Virginia University, where he took the mechanical engineering course and remained two and one half years. Since then he has been employed by the Rosemont Coal Company as electrician and also in construction work as a carpenter. He is a member of General David Morgan Post No. 543, Veterans of the Foreign Wars at Morgantown.

JAMES EDWARD WILSON, M. D. Holding prestige in the ranks of his profession because of the possession of marked natural and acquired ability, aided by a comprehensive training and wide experience, Dr. James Edward Wilson is firmly established in the confidence of the people of Clarksburg. He is secretary of the staff of physicians and surgeons at St.
Mary's Hospital, and of recent years has become known as an authority on X-Ray work.

Doctor Wilson was born at Princess Anne, Somerset County, Maryland, August 3, 1881, a son of Levin James and Mary Evelyn (Dougherty) Wilson, also natives of Maryland, the former born in 1844 and the latter in 1850. They still make their home at Princess Anne, where Levin J. Wilson was engaged successfully in agricultural pursuits for many years.
Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are numbered among the highly esteemed residents of their community and are noted for their many excellencies of heart and mind. Of their children three grew to maturity, namely: Mary E., Jane D. and James Edward.

The primary educational training of James Edward Wilson was acquired in the graded schools of his native city, following which he attended high school, thus receiving a good elementary education. After some further preparation he enrolled as a student at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the famous Baltimore institution, and, completing the required course, was duly graduated and received his degree of Doctor of Medicine May 18, 1904. In the following month he began his professional career at Clarksburg, which has continued to be his home and the scene of his accomplishments.
Doctor Wilson came to Clarksburg as superintendent of the Harrison County Hospital, which afterward became, as now, St. Mary's Hospital, an institution with which he is still connected, being secretary of the staff of physicians and surgeons. During the past few years Doctor Wilson has devoted much of his time and attention to research and investigation in the interesting and inexhaustible field of X-Ray work, a department of his profession in which he has gained something more than a local reputation. He is frequently called into consultation in connection with work of this character, and his associates have the greatest confidence in his knowledge and application of the subject.

Doctor Wilson is a member of the Harrison County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, the Southern Medical Society, the Southern States Association of Railway Surgeons, the Baltimore & Ohio Railway Surgeons Association, the West Virginia Hospital Association, the National Catholic Hospital Association, and the Radiological Society of North America.
He acts as local surgeon at Clarksburg for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. Fraternally Doctor Wilson is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason, a Noble of the Mystic Shrine and a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He is interested in civic affairs as a public-spirited citizen, and holds membership in the Clarksburg Rotary Club and the Clarksburg Chamber of Commerce. In politics the Doctor is allied with the democratic party, but has not been a seeker for public preferment. In religious relationship he is a communicant of the Episcopal Church, while Mrs. Wilson is a member of the Catholic Church.

On September 6, 1906, Doctor Wilson was united in marriage with Miss Mary Evelyn Boggess, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Stringer Boggess, of Clarksburg, and to this union there have been born the following children: Mary Evelyn, James Edward, Marie Antoinette, Jane Boggess, Ann Pershing,
Margaret Dougherty and Robert Stringer. Doctor
Wilson has a pleasant home at Clarksburg, and maintains offices at No. 211 Empire Building.

HARRY WILBUR SHEETS represents an old family of Harrison County, was born and grew up in that section of the state, and has justly earned a commendable position at the local bar. He is a member of the prominent law firm of Carter & Sheets at Clarksburg.

Mr. Sheets was born on a farm near West Milford in Harrison County, February 14, 1885, son of Arthur and Annie Jane (Wooddell) Sheets, and grandson of George H. Sheets and William Wooddell, all of West Virginia or Virginia birth and ancestry. Arthur Sheets was born in Harrison County and his wife in Pocahontas County. Their four children are Harry W., Earl W., Hazel, wife of Earl Romine, and Miss Mary Sheets.

Harry W. Sheets while a boy on the farm attended the rural schools. He also took some courses in West Virginia Wesleyan College, and a source of valuable training to him in his subsequent career was an experience as a teacher in the public schools for four years at Bridgeport. He completed his law course at West Virginia University at Morgantown with the LL. B. degree in 1909. He was admitted to the bar, and in the same year began practice at Clarksburg as a partner of David J. Carter.

Mr. Sheets votes as a democrat but is not active in politics.
He is a Methodist, is a Knight Templar Mason, has attained the thirty-second degree of Scottish Rite and is a member of the Mystic Shrine. He also belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In 1909 Mr. Sheets married Miss Hazel

LaMont, of Ashland, Wisconsin. They have one child, Alberta Lee.

ERNEST M. MERRILL, whose home is at Charleston has a state wide and in fact national reputation as an authority on the technical and practical side of coal mining. The practice of his profession has brought his extensive interests as a coal operator and he has been interested in West Virginia mining industries for nearly twenty years.

Mr. Merrill was born at Newark, Ohio, in 1878. The Merrills are a new England family and he is a member of the Sons of the American Revolution, through ancestors on both his father's and mother's side. Mr. Merrill was liberally educated, attended Denison University, and graduated with his degree in engineering from the Ohio State University in 1902. In that year he came to West Virginia as an engineer on the location of the Virginian Railway extending from Deepwater through the southeastern section of the State. Since then both as a mining engineer and operator he has been progressively useful and prominent in the coal mining industry of West Virginia. His profession of engineering has taken him into the coal fields of other states.

His professional work is carried on under the corporate name of Ernest M. Merrill Engineering Company, with headquarters office in Charleston, and with branch offices at Beckley, Mullens and Madison, West Virginia. As an operator he is financially interested in and a director of eight coal mining companies, these interests being located in the Winding Gulf and Coal River districts.

Mr. Merrill is author of "American Coals for Export" published in 1913. This work is the basis of much of his national reputation as an authority on the technical as well as the practical side of the coal mining industry. The book deals largely with American and European coal production and the marketing opportunities for American coal in foreign countries.

Mr. Merrill is a member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, being on the coal committee of this association. He is also a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and belongs to the college fraternity Beta Theta Pi. He married Miss Faith C. Welling of Columbus, Ohio. Their two children are Ernest M. Jr. and Frances.

HON. JOE L. SMITH. During a very busy and successful career Hon. Joe L. Smith has been printer's devil, editor and bank president, and in the meantime has found time to devote to civic and public affairs. He was formerly state senator, and at present is well known in financial circles of Raleigh County as president of the Beckley National Bank of Beckley. He was born at Marshes, in the Trap Hill District of Raleigh County, May 22, 1880, and is a son of Hulett A. and Angeline (McMillen) Smith, natives, respectively, of Patrick and Carroll counties, Virginia.

Hulett A. Smith was reared to agricultural pursuits, and as a young man moved to Raleigh County and settled at Marshes, where he carried on farming until the outbreak of the war between the states, when he enlisted in the Thirty-sixth Regiment, Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and subsequently fought under the leadership of Colonel McCausland. At the close of his military service he returned to the Marshes, but about 1885 or 1886 took his family to the locality of Beckley, and there rounded out the remainder of his life, his death occurring in 1916, when he was eighty-three years of age. Mrs. Smith, who was a child when brought to this section by her parents, still survives her husband and resides at Beckley, at the age of seventy-eight years. They were the parents of six sons and three daughters.

The eighth in order of birth of his parents' children, Joe L. Smith passed through the graded schools at Beckley and finished his education at the age of seventeen years. However, prior to this time he had to start to work, and when less than fourteen years of age, in 1893, became printer's devil in the office of the Raleigh Register. While thus engaged he learned the trade of printer, and eventually, with E. L. Ellison, purchased the Register, which was the first paper printed in the county, it formerly having been issued as the Raleigh County Index, and the partners continued until 1905, when Mr. Ellison withdrew and Mr. Smith remained as editor and publisher. He disposed of his interest in 1911, and in 1914, with others, took over Winding Gulf Bank, which had been moved from Hotcoal Beckley, and effected its reorganization as the Beck National Bank. At the time of the reorganization Mr. Smith became vice president, and since then has advanced to his present position as president. He has contributed materially to the success of this organization, and has made the name of the institution an honored one in bank circles.

Senator Smith is an ardent democrat, and has been interested in civic affairs from the time that the court house was the only brick structure at Beckley, and when a weekly stipend for work on the Register was fifty cents a week. He was the first mayor of Beckley after the charter was granted, and during the years of 1908, 1909 and 1910 also served at different times as a member of the City Council, and in 1908 was elected a member of the State Senate, in which he acted from 1909 to 1913, serving numerous important committees and conscientiously serving his constituents. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church, in which he is president of the Bible Class in the Sunday School, and as a fraternalist he holds membership in Beckley Blue Lodge, Beckley Chapter, Elton Commandery, Lodge of Perfection at Huntington, Beni-Kedem Shrine, A. A. O. N. M. S., at Charleston. He likewise belongs to the Chamber of Commerce and the Kiwanis Club of Beckley.

In 1914 Mr. Smith married Miss Christine Carlson, daughter of L. P. Carlson, of Annapolis, Maryland, and this union there have been born two sons: Joe L., Jr., and Hulett C.

GRANT E. TOMPKINS, a citizen of Cedar Grove, Kanawh County, represents one of the old and prominent families of the Kanawha Valley.

He was born at the Tompkins homestead at Cedar Grove July 19, 1893, son of Henry Preston and Addie L. (Ellwick) Tompkins. His grandmother, Rachel (Grant) Tompkins, was a sister of Jesse R. Grant, father of General U. S. Grant. The home of Grant E. Tompkins is the old homestead at Cedar Grove, one of the finest and oldest homes in the valley. The residence was erected in 1844 by his grandfather, William Tompkins, a pioneer salt manufacturer of the Kanawha Valley. William Tompkins was the first man in America to utilize natural gas, applying it to his salt furnaces in 1841. Henry Preston Tompkins was one of the first steamboat operators on the Kanawha River, and was also engaged in farming, the coal business and flour milling.

Grant E. Tompkins attended public school at Cedar Grove until he was sixteen, graduated in the academic and commercial courses from the West Virginia Trade School at Montgomery, June 13, 1919, and since then has been in the coal mining industry, now holding a responsible position with the Empire Fuel Company.

He was elected and served as a member of the Cedar Grove Council in 1922. In his national political views he is a republican, but at all times votes for the man rather than the party. He is a member of the Southern Methodist Episcopal Church. At Gallipolis, Ohio, January 22, 1921, he married Violet Lenora, daughter of George and Margaret (Ballanger) Holland. Her father is one of the pioneer coal operators of West Virginia, coming to the New River coal field when a young man and is now operating the Ballinger Coal Company's mine at Winona. Mr. and Mrs. Grant Tompkins have a daughter, Dorothy Lee.

Grant E. is a younger brother of Harold P. and Roger W. Tompkins, the latter a veteran of the World war, member of the Thirty-third Division, Light Field Artillery, in which he saw service in both Belgium and France. He has two sisters also, Rachel (Tompkins) Settle, of Pineville, Kentucky, and Helen A. Tompkins, of Cedar Grove.

His father was born in Monroe County, Virginia, in 1849, served as a Confederate soldier in the last year of the Civil war, was a merchant and farmer in Monroe County, and since 1889 has lived in Pulaski County, Virginia. He is an elder in the Presbyterian Church, a democrat and a Mason. His first wife, Minnie Humphreys, was born in Augusta County, Virginia, daughter of a Presbyterian minister who at one time had charge of a school in Giles County. She was born in 1852 and died in 1884. The second wife of Henry Dunlap was Maggie Nicholson of Norfolk, Virginia. There were three children by the first marriage, the two daughters being: Ida, wife of John S. Egan of Pulaski, Virginia, and of this marriage there are two daughters, Margaret and Mary D.; and Mary, who died at the age of thirty-three, the wife of Andrew Hoceman, and was survived by a daughter, Naney. Henry Dunlap has two sons by his second wife: McClure, in charge of the same farm; and Louis, who graduated from Washington and Lee University in 1922.

He completed his literary education in Appomattox-Sidney College of Virginia, graduating with the degrees A. B. and B. S. in 1894. He taught school at Hot Springs, Virginia, and spent three years in the study of law with I. H. Larew, of Newbern, Virginia. He was admitted to the bar before the West Virginia Supreme Court in May, 1897, and located at Hinton against his father's wishes, who desired that he locate at Bluefield. Having made his own independent choice in this matter, he felt that he could not ask his father for further financial aid, and borrowed $40.00 to make his start in Hinton. He roomed with a Sheriff, and soon formed a law partnership with John Osborne of Union, West Virginia. The firm of Osborne and Dunlap continued for a brief time and then followed a partnership with W. H. Garnett, as Dunlap & Garnett. Since 1901 Mr. Dunlap has carried on an independent practice. He won his first case at court, which was a precedent for many other successful efforts as a lawyer. He became city solicitor in 1901, serving two years, was city attorney until 1904, and also held the office of prosecuting attorney once more.

From the first Mr. Dunlap has been a party worker, and he was a delegate to the National Convention at Baltimore in 1912 when Mr. Wilson was nominated for the first time. He has attended many state and district conventions and in 1920 was made state chairman of the party, an honor and responsibility fully in keeping with his individual power and influence.

church, and is a York and Scottish Rite Mason, a Rotarian, member of White Oak Country Club, of Oak Hill, West Virginia, Willow-wood Country Club, Hinton, Allegheny Sportsmen Association, State and American Bar Association and of Sigma Chi fraternity. In 1903 he organized the Elks Lodge at Hinton, became its first exalted ruler and is a life member. He was president of the Elks Improvement Company and Hinton Masonic Development Company when both the Elks and Masonic homes were constructed in Hinton.

Mr. Dunlap is now president of the Chamber of Commerce of Hinton, and during the war he was chairman of the Council of Defense for Summers County, attorney for the Draft Board, chairman of the County Fuel Administration, and of the Summers County Red Cross Chapter.

WILLIAM J. MARTIN is associated with his brothers David E. and Giles R. in the control of a large and important contracting and building business, with headquarters at Hinton, county seat of Summers County. The Martin Brothers have been the contractors in the erection of many of the fine dwelling houses and other buildings not only at Hinton and in other parts of Summers County, but also at numerous other points in the state, especially in the coal-producing districts. All of the brothers were born in Pine-stem district, Summers County. There William J. Martin was born September 10, 1881. The parents, Richard and Lonisa (Houchins) Martin, were born respectively in Giles County and Summers County, Virginia, the latter county being now in West Virginia. Richard Martin was born July 31, 1843, and his wife was born on the 5th of November of that year. This honored couple have celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage, and they are numbered among the venerable citizens of Hinton. Richard Martin was a loyal soldier of the Confederacy in the Civil war, took part in the battles of Cloyd Mountain, Cedar Creek and Gettysburg, and was once captured, but friends soon effected his release. He was a boy at the time of his parents' removal to Summers County, where he was reared to manhood and where he continued his successful and active association with farm industry until 1904, since which time he has lived retired at Hinton. He is a republican, is affiliated with the United Confederate Veterans, and he and his wife still retain membership in the Primitive Baptist Church known as Knob Circuit, in Pine-stem District. Of their ten children, six are living: Naney is the wife of W. H. Belcher, of Hinton; David E. was the next in order of birth, the date of his nativity being February 22, 1876; Cora is the wife of Robert Hill, of Hinton; William J., of this review, is the next younger; Giles R., the youngest member of the firm of Martin Brothers, contractors and builders, is the next in order of birth; Dr. E. L. is engaged in the practice of dentistry in the City of Charleston. Of those deceased it may be noted that Alice, who died in 1902, was the wife of Levi Matsteson Neely, she having been the mother of Dr. Robert S. and W. Clyde and R. Claude Neely, of whom individual mention is made elsewhere. In this work: May, who was still a young woman at the time of her death, was the wife of Robert Bosham, of Summers County. Robert died at the age of nineteen and Maude, at the age of eighteen years.

William J. Martin and his brothers were reared on the home farm and received the advantages of the local schools. William J. was eighteen years old when he initiated his apprenticeship to the carpenter's trade. He became a skilled workman and was employed by the Snyder Construction Company of Mount Hope, his two brothers who are now his associates in business having likewise learned their trade with this concern, in the employ of which the three brothers continued a number of years. In the initial stage of their independent activities as contractors the Martin Brothers established their headquarters at Hinton, they having been assigned by their former employers to erect the Warren residence in this city, and after completing this work they started their independent enterprise as contractors and builders, in which their success and prestige have proved unequivocal.

William J. Martin has been active in the local ranks of the republican party since his early youth, and he and his brothers are known for their civic loyalty and progressiveness. He has had the management of many local campaigns in Summers County, and has been influential in the councils of his party, many of whose leaders in West Virginia are well known to him. In 1914 Mr. Martin was elected city treasurer of Hinton, and in 1916 was chosen mayor of the city, his administration as chief executive having been marked by most vigorous and progressive policies. He has served also as chairman of the Summers County Republican Committee. He and his wife are active members of the Christian Church, and he is treasurer of the building committee which is to supervise in the near future the erection of the new church edifice at Hinton. In the Masonic fraternity Mr. Martin has thrice served as master of the Blue Lodge, and has been high priest of the local Chapter of Royal Arch Masons. He is affiliated also with the Commandery of Knights Templars at Hinton and with the Temple of the Mystic Shrine in the City of Charleston. He and his brothers are representative members of the Hinton Chamber of Commerce, and are loyal supporters of its progressive policies.

December 28, 1908, recorded the marriage of William J. Martin and Miss Ona Morris, daughter of C. E. Morris, of Hinton. The three children of this union are William J., Jr., Raymond and Marguerite.

David E. Martin married Miss Lessie Falls, daughter of Louis Falls, of Hinton, and they have four children: Hallie, Eva, Neta and Luther. Mr. and Mrs. David E. Martin are zealous members of the Christian Church at Hinton, and he is a Knight Templar Mason and a member of the Mystic Shrine, his brother Giles R. likewise being affiliated with the Masonic fraternity and being also a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

LEWIS N. TAVENNER was admitted to the bar in 1876, and from that year to the present his name has been associated with the best abilities of a lawyer, with public service on the bench, and with the highest attainments of good citizenship. Judge Tavenner is still in the vigor of manhood and in active practice as a lawyer.

He has been deeply interested in the history of his section of West Virginia, and has rendered much valuable service in connection with the present history as an advisory editor. His grandfather was one of the most distinguished men in the pioneer citizenship of the country around Parkersburg.

His grandfather, Thomas Tavenner, was born April 18, 1776, in Loudoun County, Virginia. As a young man he visited Kentucky for the purpose of settlement, but eventually took up land in what is now West Virginia. A survey was made for him in what is now Wood County in November, 1798. His first home, however, was on the property known as Lake Farm, on Elizabeth Turnpike. During the next half century he became one of the largest land owners, his home estate consisting of about two and a half square miles of land extending from the mouth of Neal's Run, and he owned much other property in Wirt County and elsewhere in the state.

Thomas Tavenner was a man of upright and kindly character. His personal magnetism drew to him many friends and admirers, and his active interest in public affairs resulted in his holding numerous public offices. In the first organization of militia of Wood County he was elected ensign, and was promoted from time to time until he retired as colonel of the 113th Regiment. At this time, it must be remembered, militia service was not a mere formality, but frequently involved real warfare. In April, 1794, the Armstrong family were attacked just below Parkersburg near the head of Blennerhassett Island, and it was such events as this and the subsequent treaties with the Indians of the Northwest Territory, just across the Ohio River, that required active service on the part of the militia. During the Burr-Blennerhassett excitement, when there were no orders from the President of the United States nor from the Governor of Virginia, and when the affair seemed threatening to the true welfare of the nation, the citizens assembled on October 6, 1806, adopted resolutions, forwarded to the President and to the Governor, and enlisted volunteers for the suppression of any reasonable enterprise. Among those who served on the committee that recommended the adoption of resolutions and the enrollment of volunteers were Colonel Tavenner and William Beauchamp, and Colonel Tavenner was one of those selected to "hand around subscription papers." Some modern writers have stated that these volunteers were a mob, as they were not under official orders, but the truth of this statement is controverted by the fact that they placed themselves under the direction of Col. Hugh Phelps, who was at that time command of the Virginia militia. At all events, they rendered their country valuable service at a time when it needed action rather than formalities.

Colonel Tavenner served as deputy for Sheriff Hugh Phelps as early as 1802; as presiding justice of the County Court, 1819-21; as high sheriff, commissioned by the governor of Virginia, 1821-23; and as deputy marshal of the Fourth Chancery Circuit, 1816. He was a member of the House of Delegates in the Virginia Assembly in 1805-6-7-8 and 1811-12. When the County of Wirt was formed Colonel Tavenner gave the square of ground where the public buildings now stand. He was active in securing for the county Elizabeth Turnpike, the Staunton Pike and the Northwestern Turnpike. He contributed $1,000 toward securing the Northwestern Virginia Railroad and, though then a man advanced in years, he rode about the county describing the benefits to be derived from the railroad and urging other citizens to subscribe. His will records the emancipation of eighteen slaves, or "servants," as he called them. As he lived near the underground railroad, some of his slaves asserted, but these he made no attempt to recover. He asserted that if they could find a better home than he gave them they could go, and he would prosecute anyone who tried to bring them back. Colonel Tavenner was a liberal, warmhearted and hospitable man, and his useful and public spirited life caused him to be held in great confidence and esteem by his fellow citizens. It was one of his peculiarities never to lift his hat to a man, though he was scrupulously polite to women. He was a staunch upholder of justice and strongly defended his rights. If compelled to go to law he fought to the end. The case of Tavenner vs. Emerick, found in Nin Gratt, in which he was appellant, established a precedent regarding the rights of the landlord and the tenant that has been followed many years.

Thomas Tavenner, who died May 23, 1857, married February 22, 1807, Elizabeth Beauchamp, daughter of William Beauchamp, who moved with his family from Delaware about 1794, becoming a large land owner at what is now Elizabeth West Virginia. His son William, a brother of Elizabeth Tavenner, was a pioneer minister and church builder of the Methodist denomination throughout several eastern and western states. He was also a teacher, civil engineer, lawyer and master mechanic. Elizabeth Beauchamp was a devout Methodist. Colonel Tavenner had been brought up a Quaker, although he never allied himself with any church ministers were frequently entertained at the Tavenner home. Mr. Elizabeth Tavenner died September 30, 1844. Her oldest child, Cabell Tavenner, gained distinction in the profession of law at Weston and married a daughter of Col. Alexander Withers, author of "Chronicles of Border Warfare."

Isaac Tavenner, father of Judge Tavenner, gave his life to the farm. From 1837 to 1865 he lived on a farm adjoining the Town of Elizabeth and thereafter on a farm at what is now Warmore Station in Wood County. During the Civil War he declined to take an oath binding him to the support of either the Federal or Confederate government. He based his objection on the fact that he would stay where he was and would support which ever side was victorious, and such was his reputation as a citizen that he was allowed to abide by his resolution by the troops of both armies. Both he and his wife were devout Methodists. He died March 13, 1899, and his wife, on January 20, 1891. Her maiden name was Priscilla Harriet Warth, whose grandfather, George Warth, was a soldier in the Duane campaign of 1774, and afterward fought on the Colonial side in the Revolution. After the war for independence he came into the Ohio Valley. His son, John Warth, father of Priscilla Harriet Tavenner, was born in 1771 and became famous as a scout and frontiersman, being at one time a companion of Daniel Boone, and was also entrusted with the dangerous duty of carrying mail and dispatches from Marietta down the Ohio River in canoe. He became a large land owner along the Ohio river, and in his home the County of Jackson was organized in May, 1831. He was elected presiding justice and was commissioned first sheriff of the county, afterward justice, an office he held until his death on October 27, 1837. One of his sons, John Warth, served on the bench and compiled fine records of West Virginia, and a grandson was Judge John Warth English, for twelve years a member of the West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

Lewis N. Tavenner, youngest child of Isaac and Priscilla Tavenner, was born at Elizabeth, in Wirt County, February 7, 1855. He was educated in the public schools and continued his preparatory work in the John C. Nash Academy at Parkersburg, concluding his course there at the age of eighteen. He then taught school for two years, studied law under Judge George Loomis and was admitted to the bar in April, 1876. For sixteen years he practiced law with his preceptor in the firm of Loomis & Tavenner, until 1892. The honors of his professional activity have been constantly accumulating since then, but it is worthy of note that former Governor Atkinson as early as 1891 wrote of him: "He enters to an unlimited extent the confidence of his fellow citizens, practices law in an honorable way and has always maintained an upright life."

For a period of over forty years Judge Tavenner has been a leader in public affairs and in politics. He was a democratic committeeman from 1878 to 1884, and he has campaigned on the stump every year since then except while on the bench. He was city attorney of Parkersburg in 1881-82, was commissioner of the United States Circuit Court from 1883 to 1896 when he resigned, and in April, 1896, was appointed by Gov. W. A. MacCorkle as successor of Hon. Arthur I. Boreman to the bench of the Fifth Judicial Circuit, comprising Wood, Wirt and Pleasant counties. While serving the unexpired term he was unanimously nominated by the democratic party, and overcame an adverse majority in the circuit and was elected by over 400 votes. Judge Tavenner was on the bench until January 1, 1905. In 1910 he came within twenty votes of being nominated for governor. He was a delegate to the national convention at Baltimore in 1912 and supported the late Champ Clark for the nomination. He was an instructed Clark delegate, and it was also a matter of personal choice, since he was distantly related to Mr. Clark through the Beauchamps of Kentucky. Judge Tavenner has served as counsel for the board of education of Parkersburg, and during the World war he served without pay as permanent member of the legal advisory board. He has been active in the membership of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church since 1871, more than half a century.

His membership in the Masonic Order has been an opportunity for important service to that fraternity. He became affiliated with Mount Olivet Lodge No. 3, F. and A. M., in 1883, served two terms as master, grand master from 1891 to 1892, as grand commander of Knights Templars in 1897-98, and was crowned honorary inspector general, 33rd degree, of the Southern Jurisdiction of Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite in October, 1897. He was the first illustrious potentate of Nemesis Temple of the Mystic Shrine. He has served on the committee on ways and means for the Masonic Home for West Virginia as chairman, as chairman of the committee that visited other Masonic homes in other states, as chairman of the committee to select a site for the home, and since 1918 has been president of the board of governors of the West Virginia Masonic Home.

At Parkersburg October 27, 1886, Judge Tavenner married Carrie Moore Kraft, daughter of William and Ann Eliza (Moore) Kraft. Her father was a native resident of Wheeling. Judge and Mrs. Tavenner have two children. The daughter, Helen Louise, was married October 24, 1921, to William George Mundinger, formerly of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, now a sugar refiner at Central Lugareno, Camaguey, Cuba. The son, Lewis N. Tavenner, Jr., is unmarried and is an employe in the Laboratory at Parkersburg of the Standard Oil Company.

ROSCOE D. McMILLAN, M. D., one of the able and popular physicians and surgeons of Summers County, has been established in successful general practice at Hinton, the county seat, since 1921. He was born at Rowland, North Carolina, September 13, 1887, and is a son of Dr. Benjamin F. and Lou (Purcell) McMillan. Dr. Benjamin F. McMillan provided by his service as a teacher in the public schools the means with which to defray the expenses of his higher academic and his professional education. In 1882 he was graduated in the medical department of the University of Maryland, and he has since taken post-graduate courses in New York City, Philadelphia and Baltimore. After his reception of the degree of Doctor of Medicine he was engaged in practice at Rowland, North Carolina, until 1899, since which time Red Springs, that state, has represented the stage of his professional activities. The Doctor served one term as a member of the North Carolina Legislature, in which he was assigned to important house committees. He is a democrat, a progressive and public-spirited citizen, is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity and the Knights of Pythias, is actively identified with the North Carolina State Medical Society and the American Medical Association, and is local surgeon for the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad. He is a director of the Bank of Red Springs, and in that place he and his wife are zealous members of the First Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Roscoe D. McMillan attended the North Carolina Military Academy, and in 1905 he graduated from the University of North Carolina. In 1910 he graduated from the medical department of his father's professional alma mater, the University of Maryland, at Baltimore, and he further fortified himself by one year of service as an interne in the University Hospital in that city. Since receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine he has taken supplementary courses in the New York Post Graduate Medical College, in 1919 and 1921, besides which, in 1912, he took a post-graduate course at Baltimore. In the World war period he became a member of the Medical Corps of the United States Army, with the rank of first lieutenant, but he was not called into service overseas. Dr. McMillan was associated with his father and his cousin, Dr. J. L. McMillan, in practice at Red Springs, North Carolina, from the time of his graduation in the medical college until December, 1921, when he came to Hinton and opened an office, which has since continued the central point of the substantial and representative general practice he has here developed and which is constantly expanding. The Doctor is a member of the Summers County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society, the Tri-State Medical Society (North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia), the Atlantic Coast Line Surgeons Association, and the American Medical Association. He is a member of the Rotary Club at Hinton, is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, the Knights of Pythias and the Elks, and he and his wife hold membership in the Presbyterian Church.

The year 1912 recorded the marriage of Dr. McMillan and Miss Gertrude Garrison, a daughter of Lewis E. Garrison, who resides in Northumberland County, Virginia, and is a pilot in the merchant-marine service. Dr. and Mrs. McMillan have two children: Roscoe D., Jr., and Franklin Ellison.

ADRIAN D. DALY began his career as a railway telegrapher, studied law while acting as a train dispatcher at Hinton, and about fifteen years ago resigned from the railway to establish himself in practice in the county seat of Summers County. In his profession and in public affairs he has earned a merited place among the first citizens of influence in the county.

Mr. Daly was born at Bridgeport, Alabama, July 11, 1876, son of P. E. and Margaret (Loving) Daly, who were also natives of Alabama. His mother died in 1883. P. E. Daly, now living at Knoxville, Tennessee, at the age of seventy-five, has spent many years in the service of the Southern Railway Company, chiefly as a conductor. His second wife was Martha Gray, of Powells Valley, Tennessee. By the first marriage there were two children: Adrian D. and Mand, the latter the wife of Sam P. Frost.

Adrian D. Daly spent his early childhood and youth in Knoxville, Tennessee, attended school there, and at the age of fourteen began learning telegraphy in an office of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad, now part of the Southern Railway System. At the age of sixteen he was in the service of the Chesapeake and Ohio at Quinnimont, West Virginia, and he rose to the responsibilities of train dispatcher and acted in that capacity for a number of years at Thurmond and at Hinton.

He began the study of law in a private office, and in 1902 entered the law department of West Virginia University, passing the bar examinations in 1903. He was examined for the bar by the West Virginia Law Faculty and his license was granted by Judges H. C. McWhorter, Henry Brannon and George Poffenberger on January 30, 1903. Though qualified for practice, he continued with the railroad company as dispatcher until 1907. In that year, when a law was passed establishing the office of police judge for the city of Hinton, he received the appointment, and by his energy gave that office a standard of efficiency that well justified its establishment. Mr. Daly has also served as city attorney and as commissioner in chancery, and in 1916 he was elected prosecuting attorney of Summers County, entering that office January 1, 1917, and serving until December 31, 1920. He was prosecuting attorney and in charge of the law enforcement in the county throughout the period of the World war. In addition to the unusually heavy burdens of his office he acted as Government appeal agent for the Draft Board, and was a leader in the sale of bonds and other war campaigns. He is an ardent democrat in politics.

In 1905 Mr. Daly married Vella V. Flanagan, daughter of Andrew G. Flanagan, of Hinton. They have two children, Dorothy and Nancy. Mr. and Mrs. Daly are members of the Methodist Church. He is a Royal Arch and Knight Templar Mason, a member of the Shrine at Charleston, is a past grand of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, a charter member of Hinton Lodge of Elks and was formerly secretary of the Masonic Development Company. Mr. Daly is an adjutant in the Sons of Confederate Veterans, and is brigade commander of that order for West Virginia.

WILLIAM CLYDE AND RICHARD CLAUDE NEELY are brothers whose fraternal and business relations are specially close and noteworthy. They own and conduct a well ordered clothing establishment at Hinton, Summers County, and have made the title of the Hub Clothing Company a potent one in connection with the business interests of their native county. Apropos of their fraternal associations it is especially interesting to note that they are twins and that in a sense are able to celebrate their exact birthday anniversary only once in four years, as they were born February 29, 1888. The place of their nativity was the family homestead farm in Pipestem district, Summers County, and they are sons of Matthew and Alice (Martin) Neely, the father being still one of the substantial and representative exponents of farm industry in this county, he being fifty-five years of age at the time of this writing, in 1922. His first wife, mother of the subjects of this sketch, passed to eternal rest in the year 1902, and the maiden name of his present wife was Neely, the two families, however, being of no kinship.

The twin Neely brothers, who are familiarly known by their second personal names, Clyde and Claude, worked together on the home farm until they were twenty years of age, and in the meanwhile attended the same school and kept pace in educational advancement. When they were twenty years old, in company with their younger brother, Dr. Robert S., who is individually represented on other pages of this work, they borrowed from a local bank sufficient money to enable them to open and stock a small grocery store in the Masonic Building at Hinton. The twin brothers continued to be associated in the conducting of this enterprise nine years, within which period they purchased the interest of their brother, the Doctor. Their success and experience justified their progressive move in expanding their mercantile operations by opening the Hub Clothing Store on Third Avenue. Here they initiated business August 28, 1913, and two years later they removed to their present modern and handsomely equipped quarters 213-215 Temple Street, where they have ample space for the display of their comprehensive and select stock of high grade men's clothing and furnishing goods and where the cater to a large and appreciative patronage. Their success has been based alike on their fair and honorable dealing, effective service and personal popularity, and they are vite and progressive young business men. Both are active members of the local Chamber of Commerce and the Rotary Club, both are staunch republicans, and both are affiliates with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. From their childhood the companionship of the twin brothers has been of the closest and most gracious order, and now the both are happily married they and their families occupy the same house.

There has been one lack of coincidence in the careers of the two brothers—in that Clyde anticipated his brother in appearing at the hymeneal altar, his marriage to Miss Gertrude Mannix, daughter of Patrick Mannix, of Hinton having occurred in 1910. Claude Neely did not long consent to be a laggard in the matrimonial field, however, for on the 2d of July, 1913, was solemnized his marriage to Miss Amy, daughter of J. W. Shepherd, of Hinton. He and his wife have four children: Harold, Richard Claude Jr., Virginia and Caroline.

GEORGE S. ABBOTT, one of the progressive citizens and substantial business men of the City of Hinton, Summers County, has here given effective service as a member of the City Council and at the time of this writing, in 1922 he is chairman of the executive committee of the City of Hinton. He is senior member of the firm of George S. Abbott & Son, which here conducts a large and prosperous wholesale and retail business in the handling of flour and feed. Mr. Abbott came to Hinton in 1907, to assume charge of the business of the Domestic Laundry, of which he continued the active manager ten years, when he retired to be come associated with his only son in the flour and feed business. When Mr. Abbott took charge of the laundry at Hinton its equipment was somewhat meager and the establishment was hampered by debt. He brought the laundry up to the best modern standard of equipment and service and when he finally sold the property, which he had freed from indebtedness, he realized 125 per cent. more than represented in the original investment.

Mr. Abbott was born in Pendleton County, Kentucky May 18, 1861, a son of Alexander and Mary (Rush) Abbott his father having been a prosperous farmer in that county. In 1880 the family removed to Kansas and settled at Delphos, the father having become one of the pioneers of the Sunflower State, where he and his wife passed the remainder of their lives. Their children were thirteen in number.

George S. Abbott gained his early education in the schools of his native state, and was about nineteen years of age at the time of the family removal to Kansas, where he aided in the development of his father's pioneer farm and where he continued his studies for some time in the public schools at Delphos. At the age of twenty-one years he left the farm and learned telegraphy. He was thereafter operator and in charge of other station work at various points on the Union Pacific Railroad, and finally he turned his attention to the laundry business, as manager of a laundry at Concordia, Kansas. He later had supervision of leading laundries at Covington, Kentucky, and Cincinnati, Ohio, and after being identified with this line of business in Covington for a period of ten years he came to Hinton, West Virginia, in 1907, noted in the opening paragraph of this review. Mr. Abbott has shown deep and loyal interest in civic affairs at Hinton and is one of the most progressive and public-spirited men in this vital little city. He is a member of the Hinton Chamber of Commerce, in the Knights of Pythias he is a past chancellor of the local lodge, and is, in 1922, deputy grand chancellor of the Grand Lodge of West Virginia. His political allegiance is given to the democratic party, and he and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church.

In 1906 Mr. Abbott wedded Miss Genevieve N. Robin, daughter of John Robin, of Kankakee, Illinois, and the one old of this union, Otis G., is not only associated with his father in the flour and feed business but is also fitting himself for the dental profession, he being, in 1922, a student in the Ohio College of Dental Surgery in the City of Cincinnati.

THOMAS J. NOONAN. Though only forty-one Thomas J. Noonan has been engaged in the work that constitutes a business career for more than thirty years. He has achieved more than the ordinary success by an uninterrupted industry beginning in boyhood, when the necessity of self-support forced him into the ranks of wage-earners. Mr. Noonan who has lived at Huntington since early infancy, was born at Honeywell, Kentucky, April 14, 1881. His father John Noonan, was born in the same locality in 1856, was reared and married there, and became a railroad mechanic. In 1882 soon after the birth of his son Thomas, he moved to Guyandotte, West Virginia, and was in the service of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad as a mechanic until his death in 1887. He was a republican and member of the Catholic Church. John Noonan, married Elizabeth McIntyre, who was born near Honeywell in 1851, and is now living with her only son in Huntington. He was the second child, and his four sisters were: Nora, widow of Edward Maddy, who was a pipe fitter for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad and died at Huntington in 1914; Mary Ellen, wife of William Chamberlin, superintendent of a large steel plant and a resident of High Bridge, New Jersey; Anna, wife of George Swentzel a traveling salesman for the McClintock-Fields Dry Goods Company and a resident of Huntington; and Miss Catherine, who died at the age of thirty-one.

Thomas J. Noonan was six years old when his father died. Consequently he had the privilege of attending Parochial Schools of Huntington only two terms. His real education has been the result of continuous reading and long confabs with men of affairs. When he was eight years of age he went to work in a grocery store, putting in his hours before and after school. At the conclusion of his brief schooling he was given regular employment in the grocery store of Brady Brothers and remained with that firm five years at eight dollars per month. Mr. Noonan's longest working service was with the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. He learned the machinist's trade in the shops, and was in the railroad service until 1918. His thrifty habits and his good judgment in making adjustments enabled him to lay the foundation of his financial prosperity while still with the railroad. Since 1918 he has given his active attention to the real estate and insurance business, conducted under the name Thomas J. Noonan, Real Estate and Insurance, with offices at the Florentine Hotel Building at 907 Fourth Avenue. While he does a brokerage business he is mainly concerned with the buying and selling and the handling of city property both in the business and residential districts with his own capital. He owns considerable business property in the city. In addition Mr. Noonan is President of the Lincoln Land Company of Huntington, and is a stockholder in the Marietta Coal Company, the Royal Block Coal Company and the W. E. Deegans Consolidated Coal Company, all Huntington organizations.

Mr. Noonan is a republican, a member of the Catholic Church, is affiliated with Huntington Council No. 963 Knights of Columbus, and the Huntington Lodge No. 313, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, is a member of the Huntington Real Estate Board and the Chamber of Commerce.

He resides at 1829 Third Avenue. February 4, 1917, at Huntington, he married Miss Hanna Shaw who was born near Jackson, Ohio and was educated in the grammar and high schools of Wellston, Ohio.

EDWARD CALVIN EAGLE, who has been a very successful lawyer of Summers County for years, was elected prosecuting attorney in 1920 on a platform that called for the suppression of moonshining and law-breaking in general. While the task has been a difficult one, he has never wavered in the performance of his duty so far as the power of the law and his personal courage and energy avail to that end.

Mr. Eagle was born on a farm in Pocahontas County, West Virginia, May 24, 1873. His parents, Charles F. and Elizabeth Anderson Eagle, are now eighty-four years of age, and have been married since 1866, a period of fifty-six years. The father was born in Clay County, West Virginia, and has devoted his life to farming. The mother is a native of Greenbrier County. Charles F. Eagle was a Confederate soldier in the Twenty-second Virginia Infantry, but since the war has always voted as a republican. He and his wife have been loyal Methodists for many years. Edward C. Eagle is one of five living children. The others are: Maggie, at home; Ruth, wife of Rev. T. M. McCarthy, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church; John, a farmer of Frankfort, West Virginia; Meta, wife of A. W. Hill, of Pocahontas County.

Edward C. Eagle attended the common schools of Pocahontas County and Hillsboro Academy, and for five years was a teacher in country districts. Through teaching he paid his way through West Virginia University, graduating in 1896, and in 1898 located at Hinton, where for nearly a quarter of a century he has enjoyed a place of leadership in the local bar. While engaged in general practice his specialty has been real estate and chancery law.

Mr. Eagle served his first term as prosecuting attorney of Summers County from 1902 to 1904. For twenty years he was United States commissioner at Hinton. In the campaign of 1920 he was urged by his numerous friends to make the race for prosecuting attorney, and entered the contest on the republican ticket. The county is normally democratic, and he was elected by five hundred votes of his democratic rival. Since he took this office he has directed the forces of the law in the capture of seventy-two moonshiners stills in the county, and altogether has secured two hundred and twenty-five convictions in court.

Mr. Eagle married in 1900 Miss Mollie Baker, daughter of W. A. Baker of Sweet Springs, West Virginia. They have one son, Harold. Mr. Eagle is a member of the Board of Stewards of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and for years was superintendent of Sunday School. He took an active part in local affairs during the World war, serving on various committees.

JOHN FRANCIS BIGONY, M. D. A professional service that has met every test of proficiency and faithfulness as well as time has been that of Dr. Bigony, who for nearly thirty years has practiced medicine and surgery over a wide extent of country around Hinton, and in connection with his private practice established and has conducted a high class private hospital.

Doctor Bigony was born on his father's farm near Columbus, Ohio, May 22, 1869, son of Joseph and Caroline (Bury) Bigony, who are still living on their farm in that locality. The great-grandparents of Doctor Bigony came from Switzerland, and to repay their passage money over the ocean they worked two and one half years in the Stephen Girard Sugar Factory in Philadelphia. Mary Czarle, his grandmother, when a girl of six years walked with her mother behind the wagon that carried the family possessions from Harrisonburg, Virginia, to Ohio. Joseph Bigony in the course of a long lifetime has been a very prosperous farmer in Central Ohio. He was the father of five sons: Doctor John; Joseph H., who is a scientific gardener and has kept in close touch with the agricultural department of Ohio State University; Hiram Franklin, a graduate of the Medical College of Virginia, now practicing at Millersport, near Columbus, Ohio; Warren Ellsworth, a successful attorney at Columbus, who was educated in the Ohio State University and the University of Texas; Winfield Scott, a scientific farmer at the old homestead and who has also been trained in the Ohio State Agricultural College. All these sons at some period in their lives were teachers.

John F. Bigony attended home schools, and later entered the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, graduating Bachelor of Science in 1891 and with the M. D. degree in 1892. His period of teaching comprised four years. He began the practice of medicine at Kirkersville, twenty-one miles east of Columbus. After being there two years he came to Hinton in 1894, and for some years he performed the arduous labors of a country physician, traveling thousands of miles on horseback in all kinds of weather to look after his patients. During the influenza epidemic of 1920 he fell from his horse while on a professional visit, broke a leg, and was in the woods for hours before being discovered and rescued. Doctor Bigony so far as his busy practice has permitted has been a student and kept in touch with the advancement of medical and surgical knowledge, and during 1906 he took postgraduate work in diseases of women and children at Philadelphia. The Bigony Hospital was established in 1904. There were only four rooms to begin with, but it is now a modernly equipped hospital with twenty-three rooms. Doctor Bigony served as county health officer of Summers County five years and as jail physician seven years, and is former secretary and president of the Summers County Medical Society and a member of the State and American Medical Associations. He has also served on the City Council and the Board of Education.

On May 24, 1893, he married Mattie E. Charlton, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Jane (Wilson) Charlton. Joseph J. Charlton was born December 30, 1826, in Monroe County, Virginia, and was of English descent. He was educated in private schools, was a school teacher and vocal music teacher, was ordained a Baptist minister, was a temperance lecturer and served four years in the Confederate Army. He joined the regular army at Salt Sulphur Spring, belonged to Company B. Edgars Battalion, Twenty-second Regiment, under Captain Reed. He was in the battles of Lewisburg, Dry Creek and New Market, and was wounded in the battle of Cold Harbor in June, 1864. Mr. Charlton married twice, first Miss Nancy Parker in 1847. To them, three children were born, E. Tillie, Mary and Jesse. He married for his second wife in March, 1858, Sarah Jane Willson and to them were born ten children, Ida, Nannie, William, Annie, Mattie, Charles, Aldine, Edgar, Sarah and Edna. Mr. Charlton died October 3, 1905, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Mattie Bigony in Hinton, West Virginia. Dr. and Mrs. Bigony have five children: John Charlton, the oldest, is now a student of medicine in the Ohio State University, and during the World war was a cornet player for a year and ten days in Sousa's Band at the Great Lakes Training Station near Chicago. Joseph Clare, the second son, is a clerk in the Hinton offices of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. Ellsworth is a student of mechanical engineering in Ohio State University and has also taken military training there and is Major of Cadets. Philip H. is a student in the Hinton High School and Frances Louise, the youngest, is also in school at Hinton. Doctor and Mrs. Bigony are members of the Missionary Baptist Church, and both are teachers in the Sunday School.

JUDGE JAMES H. MILLER has given forty years of his life to the law and the public service of Summers County. Judge Miller is author of the history of Summers County, written in 1907, a book that will stand for all time as an invaluable source of local history in that section of the state. His dedication of the history is indicative of his fine loyalty to the county: "This book is dedicated to the people of Summers County, who have, for thirty years, so loyally shown their faith in a penniless youth of their own soil, and to whom he is indebted for whatever of success he has attained in their midst."

His pioneer ancestor in America was Patrick Miller, who was of Scotch-Irish descent and was born on the Atlantic Ocean while his parents were coming to America. The family were pioneers at Staunton, Virginia. John Miller, son of Patrick Miller, was born in Bath County, Virginia, October 13, 1772, and on account of some family differences he left home and about 1800 moved with his family to Greenbrier County. He was a carpenter by trade, and on his land he erected one of the best homes of that time. He died at the age of seventy-four. On January 27, 1803, he married Jean Hodge, who was born in Highland County, Virginia, February 26, 1780.

Their youngest son was William Erskine Miller, who was born at the old homestead August 18, 1825, and died February 3, 1901. He spent the greater part of his life in Greenbrier County, but for several years before his death lived at Foss. He was held in high esteem in Summers County, being regarded as a most unselfish character, consecrated Christian, honored for his service as a Confederate soldier, and in his daily life he touched and influenced for good a large circle of friends and acquaintances. He was never a candidate for any office.

William E. Miller married Sarah Barbara McNeer, Monroe County. They were married February 8, 1849, and were the parents of four children: Charles Lewis, who was born in 1852, and was a school teacher, a telegraph operator and agent for the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, subsequently became a farmer and merchant, and built the first store in Summers County. The second child of William E. Miller is Judge James H. The third, Anderson E., born in 1859, has been a wholesale merchant, banker and a business man. The fourth child was Miss Mary Benson Miller.

James Henry Miller passed his early life on a farm, as a boy attended a noted place of learning known as the Old Gum Schoolhouse on Lick Creek. He was a student under James Huston Miller at Green Sulphur Springs in 1876, and in 1879 he graduated at the Concord Normal winning the prize for the best oration and the best essay. Judge Miller taught school thirty months, four terms of this time at Hinton. While working as a clerk to pay his expenses he studied law with William W. Adams at Hinton, took a law course at the University of Virginia, and was admitted to practice in 1881. He was associated with Elbe Fowler until the latter's death, and then with his former preceptor, W. W. Adams, until the death of Mr. Adams in 1894. During the following ten years the firm was Miller & Reed.

Judge Miller served as superintendent of schools from 1882 to 1884. In 1884 he was elected prosecuting attorney of Summers County, and held that office for sixteen consecutive years, finally declining to be a candidate for reelection. In 1900 he was on the democratic state ticket as nominee for state auditor. In 1904 he received that nomination without opposition for judge of the Circuit Court of the Ninth West Virginia Circuit, comprising Summers, Raleigh and Wyoming counties, and was elected by about twelve hundred majority in a republican district. Judge Miller served sixteen years on the bench, and in 192 he was again the democratic nominee for state auditor. During his long time on the bench it is said that only rarely was a decision of his reversed by higher courts.

Until his election as judge he was active in the democratic party as a delegate to every state convention and senatorial and congressional conventions. He was a delegate to the Chicago convention of 1896 when William J. Bryan was first nominated, though he was not an original Bryan man. He is chairman of the State Democratic Committee and chairman for some twenty years of the Third Congressional District.

Judge Miller has been prominent in business affairs in Summers County. He has served as president of the Greenbrier Springs Company, director of the National Bank of Summers from its organization, and president of the Hinton Hardware Company.

February 1, 1882, he married Jane Tompkins Miller, daughter of James H. Miller, Jr., of Gauley Bridge. They are the parents of four children: James H., Jr.; Grace Chapman, now the wife of S. S. Rose, a Hinton druggist; Jean and Daisy Corinne, both at home.

The son, James H. Miller, Jr., is now associated with his father in law practice. He graduated in law from Washington and Lee University in 1915, and he then served a year by appointment as circuit clerk of Summers County. For two years he was in the internal revenue service under Sam Hayes, and on July 13, 1918, joined the army in the motor truck service, being trained at Richmond, Virginia.

ANDERSON EMBURY MILLER. A career devoted to solid and substantial lines of business and industry has been that of Anderson Embury Miller, who for a score of years has been general manager of the New River Grocery Company at Hinton. The greater part of his life has been spent in Summers County, and for several years he was interested in the timber and lumber industry in this vicinity.

The New River Grocery Company was incorporated in 1901 and opened for business January 1, 1902. The executive officials are: G. A. Miller, president; H. L. Johnson, secretary and treasurer; and A. E. Miller, general manager. It is one of the larger wholesale concerns handling groceries throughout the southern and eastern portions of the state. It commands a large and extensive patronage over the territory adjacent to the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad from Kanawha Falls to Covington, Virginia, including the counties of Summers, Fayette, Raleigh, Greenbrier, Monroe and Pocahontas, and portions of Mercer and Nicholas counties.

Anderson Embury Miller was born at Green Sulphur Springs, in what was then Greenbrier, now Summers County, October 1, 1859, son of William Erskine and Sarah Barbara (McNeer) Miller. In this locality his grandfather, John Miller, settled more than a century ago on coming from Bath County, Virginia. William E. Miller was born at the old homestead at Green Sulphur Springs, August 19, 1825, and died February 3, 1901. In 1891 he moved from this locality to Fess, where he lived until his death. He was a Confederate soldier, was a farmer and stock man and was never active in politics. His wife, Sarah Barbara McNeer was born May 10, 1827, and died February 6, 1897. Her father was Richard McNeer, an early settler on Hands Creek, Monroe County, and the McNeers were originally from Paisley, Scotland. William E. Miller and wife had three sons and one daughter: Mary B. living at Hinton; C. L. Miller, a retired farmer at Belle Point in Summers County; Judge James H. Miller, a prominent lawyer and man of affairs at Hinton; and Anderson E.

Anderson E. Miller attended both free and private schools and taught four winter terms of school. His first active business enterprise was in association with his cousin, W. N. McNeer, in operating a sawmill at Blue Hope Tunnel. Later he was in the lumber industry on Lick Creek, in the vicinity of Green Sulphur Springs, and he continued active in saw milling operations for ten years. Later he was associated in the store business with John McNeer at Belle Point and for eighteen months lived at Buckley, where he was cashier of the Bank of Raleigh, an institution he helped organize. Mr. Miller was also at one time associated with his brother C. L. in a milling business on Pipe Stem and on Tallory Mountain, and for seven years he owned a store at Belle Point. Since 1902, however, his time and energies have been quite fully taken up by his duties as general manager of the New River Grocery Company at Hinton.

On June 22, 1887, Mr. Miller married Jennie I. Hutchison, who was born at Elton, daughter of Michael Hutchison. Mr. Miller lost his wife by death January 24, 1908. There were five children: Owen, associated with the Sterling Motor Company of Hinton; Fay, at home; Harry L., Josie and Barbara Hutchison, both at home. The son, Harry volunteered and entered the First Officers Training Camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, was commissioned as first lieutenant of infantry, and was sent for duty to Camp Funston. He failed to go overseas with his command because of an attack of appendicitis, which developed into olebritis, but he was continued on duty for twenty-three months. Since the war he has been associated with his father in the wholesale grocery business. Mr. Miller is an active member of the Green Sulphur Methodist Church, South. He is a democrat and is a York Rite Mason and Shriner.

GEORGE EDWARD KLENCKE. Not only has George Edward Klencke been one of the constructive citizens of Piedmont, but he has actually done more of the contracting and building of this little city than any other man now living, and is the oldest of the contractors in this part of Mineral County, although for some time he has been living retired. He is a native son of the county and was born on the street on which his present residence is located, and all of his life has been spent here, so that naturally his interest is centered around Piedmont and Mineral County.

George Edward Klencke was born July 10, 1854, and he is a son of Ferdinand Klencke, a German by birth who came to the United States in young manhood, and after his arrival in this country first worked as a teamster between Cumberland, Maryland, and Piedmont, West Virginia. This was before the building of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and at a time when there were few bridges and it was while fording the Potomac and struggling with his horses, that was laid the foundation of the illness which resulted in his death in 1856. He was a carpenter by trade, at which he sometimes worked, and he erected the first house built on Main Street, Piedmont, in which his son, George Edward was born, now the home of William Simmons.

Ferdinand Klencke married Theresa Zacharias, born in Baltimore, Maryland, of German parents, who subsequently settled at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Klencke's four a quartermaster in the same service during the war of the '60s. The latter, William Zacharias, died at Pittsburgh, and all of his sons have also passed away. William Zacharias served as quartermaster in a Pennsylvania regiment during the Civil war, and after the close of the war returned to his home in Pittsburgh, where he became night agent for the Union Station and held this position at the time the station was burned during the railroad strike of 1877. Mr. Zacharias, although engaged in some of the bloodiest battles of the war, did not receive a scratch. His three sons also returned to Pittsburgh and engaged in the tobacco business, afterward managing the Merchants Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Klencke had three sons, namely: Michael and William, both of whom are now deceased, and George Edward, whose name heads this review. The mother of these children married for her second husband, John Hartell, and of the seven children born to them but one survives, namely: Frank Hartell, of Cumberland, Maryland. Another son, John Hartell, reached maturity, as did a daughter, Emma, but both died unmarried.

Growing up at Piedmont George Edward Klencke attended his schools until he was fourteen years old, at which time he began learning the carpenter trade under Captain Jarboe and his father, John Jarboe, the last named having been the first mayor of Piedmont, and these two being the oldest builders and among the earliest settlers of the place. After completing his apprenticeship Mr. Klencke remained with the Jarboes for a time as a journeyman, when he left them going with Henry Kight and still later with E. J. Fredlock, a contractor and builder and large factory owner. When he reached the age of twenty-five years Mr. Klencke formed a partnership with Henry Kight, under the name of Kight & Klencke, contractors and builders and this association was maintained for twenty years. Among other important contracts of this firm were the erection of the Murphy house, now owned by Dr. J. H. Wolverton, the erection of the Philgar House, now owned and occupied by H. Clay Thrush, several public school-houses of Piedmont, a number of residences at Luke, Maryland, the store building of Graham & Company and many residences at Piedmont. In all of their work the partners were noted for their conscientious fidelity in living up to the spirit as well as the letter of their contracts and the buildings stand as monuments to their skill and honesty. With the burden of his years pressing upon Mr. Kight, the firm dissolved and Mr. Klencke continued alone for five years and then retired from the building industry. While a member of the firm of Kight & Klencke, Mr. Klencke also built several houses in surrounding towns, namely, Keyser and Barnum, West Virginia, and Lonaconing and Midland, Maryland.

In addition to his work as a contractor and builder, Mr. Klencke has had other interests at Piedmont and for years was one of the directors of the Davis National Bank of which he is still a stockholder. Although several times elected as a member of the City Council of Piedmont, Mr. Klencke has refused to qualify, but his step-father, John Hartell served as the third mayor of the city, in which for years he had substantial interests and in the beginning of his career Mr. Klencke found his connection with this most excellent citizen and reliable business man of great value to him. The first presidential ballot of Mr. Klencke was cast for Rutherford B. Hayes, and in national matters he has continued to give his hearty support to republican candidates, but in local affairs he shapes his course according to the qualifications of those seeking office. In 1896 he was first elected county commissioner, to succeed Michael Mastellar in the office, and served a six year term. With John Dayton and George Arnold as his colleagues on the board Mr. Klencke built two of the finest bridges spanning the Potomac River in West Virginia, as well as numerous smaller bridges, and did this in the face of considerable opposition from reactionists. Some dirt-road building was done, but at that time the people had not been educated to the present day appreciation of good roads. At the expiration of his term of office Mr. Klencke retired. Subsequently he was again elected to this office, this time to succeed Doctor Cross, and his associates were Robert Dayton and Robert Bane. This board decided not to build any but concrete bridges, several of them of the two-span type, and a number of the one span-type were constructed during the life of this body. It was this board that began the movement in favor of good roads by constructing five miles of hard-surface road up New Creek from Keyser, for which they provided the machinery, and while doing this inaugural work on the new type of road they also maintained the old dirt roads. A bond issue was floated about this time, its promotion being backed by Mr. Klencke and as a result of his zealous work in its behalf was voted for at the polls. The Piedmont District was bonded for $75,000, and the New Creek District for $250,000 and with the money thus raised the county built a concrete road between Piedmont and Keyser, and Main and Fairview streets of Piedmont were hard-surfaced with Warnite with this fund. With the expiration of his second term Mr. Klencke once more retired to private life.

On January 26, 1877, George Edward Klencke married at Piedmont, Annie Sullivan, a daughter of John Sullivan who was killed while serving as a soldier in the Confederate Army during the War of the '60s. Mrs. Klencke was born in Rockingham County, Virginia, in March, 1857, and she passed away April 16, 1920. Mr. and Mrs. Klencke had the following children: Frederick, who is a carpenter of Piedmont, married Virginia Parks, and they have a son, Kenneth; Buena Vista, who married Andrew Harmon of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, has two children, Reginald and William; Carrie, who is the wife of John R. Keller, of Westernport, Maryland, has three children, George, Evelyn and Robert; May, who married John Baldwin, lost in the service during the World war, has two children, John Edward and Vivian. Mr. Klencke was reared in the Lutheran faith and although he is not a member of any church, is inclined to follow the teaching of that denomination in spiritual matters. A sound, dependable and upright citizen, Mr. Klencke has always striven to do what he believes is his duty, enjoys in the highest degree the confidence and respect of all with whom he is associated. Mr. Klencke at the present time is the oldest citizen now living in Piedmont. He was born and raised on the same street and he recalls when there was but one house on the north side of the main street. This was in the early '50s. The street is now built up through its entire length.

AVIS LAYTON WAMPLER is connected with the Baltimore & Ohio Railway, but his most interesting distinction is that he was elected mayor of Littleton before he had been a resident two years. He is giving Littleton a progressive, moral and businesslike administration that fully justifies the confidence of the voters who chose him to this responsibility.

Mr. Wampler was born near Staunton, Virginia, July 26, 1891. His grandfather, Jonas Wampler, was also a native of Augusta County, where the Wampers settled in Colonial times on coming from Germany. Jonas Wampler was born in 1813, owned a large farm, and did a prosperous business as a stock raiser, and lived in Augusta County all his life.

He died near Staunton in 1903. His wife was a Miss Long a life-long resident of Augusta County. Samuel L. Wampler, father of the Littleton mayor, was also a resident of Augusta County throughout his life. He was born in 1838 and died at his farm near Staunton in 1912. His interests were those of a successful farmer. He served in the Civil war, in Company E of the First Virginia Cavalry, joining that organization before the formal outbreak of the war and continued until the close. He participated in the first battle of Bull Run and in many other campaigns. After the war he became a republican, and was the only republican who ever held the office of judge of elections in his precinct. He was a leading member of the Church of the Brethren. Samuel L. Wampler married Mollie Grove for his first wife. She was born and died in Augusta County. By this union there were eight children: Ida, deceased; Bertie, wife of Jacob M. Jones, of Augusta County; Betty, wife of Sandy T. Weller, a painter at Staunton; Robert Luther, a contracting painter and decorator at Los Angeles, California; Mamie, wife of William M. Harris, a progressive farmer of Augusta County; Samuel Elmer, a merchant, paper hanger and contractor at Pittsburgh; Jennie, wife of Samuel H. Driver, a farmer in Augusta County; and Charles F., a carpenter at Manteca, California. The second wife of Samuel L. Wampler was Lydia Sniteman, who was born in Augusta County May 7, 1851, and died near Staunton January 10, 1919. Her only child is Avis L. Wampler.

Avis L. Wampler was educated in the rural schools of Augusta County. His experiences were found on his father's farm until he was twenty-seven, and when he left home he entered the railway mail service and for fourteen months had a run out of Washington, D. C. After the death of his mother in 1919 Mr. Wampler came to Littleton, and was in the service of the Hope Natural Gas Company until October 1, 1920, when he became assistant agent at Littleton for the Baltimore & Ohio Railway, and was later promoted to agent and located at Glover Gap, West Virginia.

Mr. Wampler was elected mayor of Littleton January 27, 1921, on the republican ticket, beginning his one year term February 7, 1921. In the campaign he opposed one of the strongest citizens, a democrat, but was elected by a substantial majority. It was his personality and his platform that gained him the election. He proposed if elected that the poolrooms of the city should be closed, since these were a constant source of moral deterioration to the youth of the city, and undoubtedly a majority of the citizens believe that this reform alone justified the election of Mr. Wampler. Since becoming mayor he has closed the pool halls. His activity in moral reform is not the only credit to be bestowed upon his administration. He is a good roads advocate, and has constantly kept the attention of the citizens directed to such improvements as sidewalks, city pavements and similar work that will realize the ideals of a good town. Mr. Wampler was urged to become a candidate for a second term and was elected in one of the biggest and hottest contested elections ever held in the town. It was a three cornered fight, with platforms as follows: square deal, citizens improvement and law and order. He was elected on the law and order platform.

June 12, 1911, in Highland County, Virginia, he married Miss Flo M. Coffman, daughter of Rev. Henry A. and Emma (Johnson) Coffman, the latter deceased. Her father, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is now living in Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Wampler have five children: Emma Lydia, born June 27, 1912; Samuel Alfred, born March 29, 1914; Luther Avis, born March 28, 1917; Marvin Edward, born October 7, 1919; and Fred Eugene, born February 17, 1922.

EDWARD EARL MASTON is a representative young business man at Fairmont, Marion County, where he is manager of the Mid-West Box Company. He was born in the City of Wabash, Indiana, February 23, 1886, and is a son of William David and Alice (Rowand) Maston, natives respective of the state of New York and Ohio. William D. Maston was eleven years of age at the time of the family removal from New York to Dayton, Ohio, whence removal was later made, by team and wagon, to Indiana, with settlement on a farm outh of Wabash. The Rowand family removed from Ohio and settled near Goshen, Indiana. William D. Maston was for many years in the employ of the Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati & St. Louis (Big Four) Railroad Company, at Anderson, Indiana, where his death occurred and where his widow still resides.

Edward E. Maston gained his early education in the public schools of Anderson, Indiana, and later attended the celebrated Armour School of Technology in the City of Chicago. At the age of sixteen years he initiated his apprenticeship to the printer's trade, but after six months he abandoned this work and entered the employ of the Sefton Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of wooden boxes and corrugated fibre containers at Anderson, Indiana. He began work as a common laborer in the factory in 1903, and won consecutive advancement until he was made foreman of the corrugating department, in 1911. In that year he was transferred to the company's plant at Chicago, as superintendent of the corrugating department.

In 1914 Mr. Maston returned to Anderson and became general superintendent of the newly organized Mid-West Box Company. In 1915 he was transferred to Fairmont, West Virginia, where he has since had active charge of the local manufacturing plant of this company. He has made his influence felt as one of the loyal and progressive citizens and business men of this city, is a director of the Chamber of Commerce, an active member of the Kiwanis Club, and a member of the Industrial Board of the local Young Men's Christian Association. Both he and his wife hold membership in the First Presbyterian Church.

June 18, 1915, recorded the marriage of Mr. Maston and Miss Sarah Reed, who was born at Ithaca, New York, a daughter of Prof. John S. Reed, a member of the faculty of Cornell University in that city. Mr. and Mrs. Maston have a daughter, Jean Louise, who was born November, 12, 1918.

JAMES C. FORINASH. His many friends and associates at Weston have for years known of and spoken of James C. Forinash as a prosperous business man, and comparatively few are aware of the early struggles and vicissitudes he went through in his determined efforts to earn a substantial success and make a name and reputation.

Mr. Forinash was born near Weston March 4, 1857, son of Jonas C. and Elizabeth Ann (Stanley) Forinash. His father was born in Lewis County, February 28, 1829, and his mother was born February 28, 1828, in the same county, on Stanley's Run, one and one-half miles south of Jane Lew, where her grandfather, John Stanley, had settled. He was born in England in 1736, and died in 1822. His wife, Nancy Gibbons, was born in England in 1749 and died in 1837, and both were buried in the home graveyard on Stanley's Run. Nancy Gibbons was shipped to America presumably to get a fortune left to her, but her stepfather had received it and had sold her to pay for her transportation. John Stanley, met Nancy Gibbons at Red Stone, Pennsylvania, and here they were married. Jacob Stanley, the father of Mrs. Elizabeth Forinash, was born at Red Stone. John Stanley owned all the land from Fisher Summit to Jane Lew, from hill top to hill top on Stanley's Run. The following children were born on the home farm on Stanley's Run to Jacob Stanley, namely, Ruth, Diadem, Matilda, Sarah, Margaret, John, Jonathan, Maxwell, Mary, Elizabeth Ann and Ruby.

Jonas C. Forinash and Elizabeth Ann Stanley were married July 22, 1847, by Rev. John Hardman. Jonas Forinash did farm work for a number of years, and in 1862 moved to Weston, where he worked at various things. He was always industrious, but not an accumulator, and died comparatively poor on February 28, 1877. In politics he was a whig and later a republican. The mother was an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and survived her husband forty years, passing away February 6, 1917. James C. Forinash contributed in many ways to the comfort of his aging mother. There were six children in the family, and the three now living are: James C.; Anna, wife of John Lake, living at Three Rivers, Michigan; and P. C. Forinash, of Elkhardt, Indiana.

James C. Forinash when ten years of age went to live with an uncle for two years, and then for two years worked on a farm at five dollars a month. These circumstances did not favor regular attendance at school, but as boy and man he has always made the best of his opportunities. When he came to Weston Mr. Forinash was employed in the brick yard making the brick for the construction of the Central Building of the Insane Asylum. From the brick yard he went into a planing mill, and after considerable experience there the company sent him out to supervise the building of houses, a work he followed four years. His next employment was in the McBride furniture business, where he learned the art of making furniture according to the hand made methods of that day. He spent seven years with this plant, learning the furniture trade and business and also undertaking.

When he left the McBride firm Mr. Forinash entered business for himself under the firm name of J. C. Forinash & Company. That was in 1883. His partner and financial backer was Samuel A. Steele. Mr. Steele died December 23, 1917, and in his will he bequeathed all his personal and real property to Mr. Forinash, including the building where the Forinash furniture store is. Besides being head of this prosperous furniture business and undertaking establishment Mr. Forinash owns an eighth of the stock in the No Leak Paper Dish Company of Wheeling, a corporation capitalized at a hundred thousand dollars, all paid in.

June 6, 1882, Mr. Forinash married Lizzie Ridgeway. Three children were born to their marriage, but the only one now living is Minnie, a graduate of Mount de Chantal Academy of Wheeling and now the widow of Dr. H. S. Hefner, a dentist at Weston. Dr. Hefner died June 11, 1922. The family are members of the Methodist Church. Mr. Forinash is affiliated with Weston Lodge Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of which he is a past noble grand. He is a republican.

MILTON HAROLD TAYLOR, whose farm is in the Masontown community of Preston County, was a farmer before he really learned farming as a vocation and business, and his work in recent years has demonstrated the value of knowledge as a supplement to brawn in handling the complicated technique of agriculture and stock husbandry.

Mr. Taylor represents an old and prominent family of Preston County. His father, George Washington Taylor, was born October 24, 1828, in Monongalia County, and in 1848 married Eliza Jane Emerson, daughter of John Emerson. She was born about eight miles north of Morgantown, January 25, 1825.

Milton Harold Taylor was the youngest of the nine children of his parents and was born October 7, 1869, at the old Taylor homestead four miles east of Masontown. He learned the work of the fields co-incidental with his lessons in reading, writing and arithmetic in the rural schools. He became an old school farmer, but some years after his marriage and after he was the father of several children he decided to know more about farming, particularly the scientific reasons that underlie agriculture. He entered the State University Agricultural School, taking the special work provided for men who had not completed the regular preparatory training leading up to university. He studied three winter terms, receiving a diploma as a graduate, but all the time he carried on the work of his home farm, directing it over the telephone and in accordance with the new ideas he was getting from day to day and week to week. Mr. Taylor was a classmate and roommate as well in university with Hon. W. D. Zinn, the widely known writer on agricultural topics whose theory and practice of farming have opened the eyes of many to the best methods of getting results on a West Virginia farm. For a time after his graduation Mr. Taylor was in the service of the State Board of Agriculture lecturing and speaking before farmers institutes, and carrying his own knowledge by extension from the laboratories of the university to men whose duties kept them close to the farm.

Mr. Taylor among various agricultural methods exercises a selection of seed, doing this while the ear of corn is still on the stalk or saving the small grain for seed where it has matured the best. His methods of planting and tilling are such as harmonize with the suggestions from the Agricultural Department of the State, and the results far outweigh the haphazard and arbitrary methods in vogue in his childhood and, for that matter, among many of the men on the farm calling themselves farmers today. Mr. Taylor found it a matter of profit as well as satisfaction to eliminate the scrub animal and introduce registered stock. He is a short horn-Durham cattle breeder, and has a stock of blue-blooded Barred Rock poultry. He has also tried the Bronze turkey, the Roscomb Brown Leghorn and the Pekin duck with satisfactory results.

Mr. Taylor's present farm is adjacent to Masontown on the south. At the time of his marriage thirty years ago, he located on a farm two miles southwest of Masontown, bought another place two years later, and in 1901 moved to a farm just north of Masontown, coming to his present place in April, 1903. His farm includes some of the first land cultivated in this part of the state, it having been settled about the time of the Revolution. The improvements are of Mr. Taylor's own planning and construction, and include a house and barn and the first silo erected in Preston County west of Cheat River. He believes in modern machinery, and uses a tractor for power to operate his corn binder, grain binder, harrow, plow and soil packer, tools that are essential to a farmer who believes in getting the work done without loss of time or motion. Mr. Taylor is also a road representative in Preston County for the International Harvester Company, selling motor trucks and threshers and tractors in addition to the varied line of farm machinery manufactured by that corporation.

Mr. Taylor was reared in a republican family, casting his first vote for Benjamin Harrison in 1892. He has been a notary public, was elected a justice of the peace in 1903, and served two terms as county committeeman, but does not indulge in politics for the sake of office for himself. As a youth he was a member of the Evangelical Church, but is now a Presbyterian. He is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Masontown, of which he is a past grand, and is also a member of the Encampment. He has held all the chairs in the Lodge of Knights of Pythias, is a Mason and a member of the Junior Order United American Mechanics. However he has done most of his fraternal work in the Patrons of Husbandry, becoming affiliated with the Grange in 1898. He has held a number of offices in local and state Grange, acted as organizer of subordinate granges, and has assisted in influencing the program of state legislation through the Grange. He was one of the organizers of the Grange Mutual Fire Insurance Company of West Virginia, and served as its secretary. He was one of the organizers and a director of the Bank of Masontown, a director of the Masontown Telephone Company, and was vice president for West Virginia of the Farmers' National Congress. He has been actively associated with a number of the prominent leaders and educators in the West Virginia Farmers' Movement, and has been a member of the State Poultry Association, State Live Stock Association, State Horticultural Association, State Dairy Association and other similar organization.

In Preston County, January 25, 1893, Mr. Taylor married Anna B. Martin, who was born at Clifton Mills, June 18, 1869, daughter of Simon R. and Sarah A. (Liston) Martin. Her father served as a Union soldier three years with the Third Maryland Regiment. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have a family of children inspired with all the progressive ideas and community ideals of their parents. The oldest, Ferris A., graduated from the Old Dominion College near Winchester, Virginia, taught for several terms, and was in the undertaking business in Morgantown when he enlisted in 1917, as sergeant mechanic in the One Hundred and Thirteenth Ammunition Train, Motor Section, was sent overseas, but the armistice was signed before he reached the front. The son Lynn A., who graduated from West Virginia University in 1922, was in the navy during the war, but did not get into action. James O., the third of the Taylor brothers, was a volunteer and a sergeant in the One Hundred and Thirteenth Ammunition Train. Ruth, who married Glenn Pyles, of Mount Morris, Pennsylvania, is a graduate of the Masontown High School and taught in the Valley District High School. Martin is attending the Masontown High School, while Dolly and Viola, the younger children, are pupils in the grades.

S. CHARLES STEELE. In the profession of certified public accountant S. Charles Steele, of Fairmont, is one of the older men in point of service in the State of West Virginia. His abilities have brought him many important honors and responsibilities in this comparatively new field.

He is the grandson of a sometime distinguished pioneer Methodist minister of West Virginia. His grandfather, Rev. Samuel Steele, was born in Ireland, and came to the United States when a young man. He was liberally educated, and almost his entire adult life was a consecration to the service of his church. He was chaplain of the Third West Virginia Infantry of the Union Army during the Civil war, and among other communities that recall his work as pastor were Wheeling and Huntington, and he had charge of the Methodist Church at Buckhannon, Upshur County, when he died in 1886. After coming to West Virginia he married Miss Victoria Lorentz, a native of Weston, Lewis County, and member of an old and influential family there.

The father of S. Charles Steele is George C. Steele, who was born at Parkersburg, Wood County, October 30, 1860, but since early youth has lived in Morgantown, where he has had a prominent part in both business and civic affairs. He was for several terms mayor, being the first mayor of "Greater Morgantown," when the several adjacent independent municipalities were merged with the Morgantown. For many years he has been engaged in the insurance business. George C. Steele married Laura May Williams, a native of Greensboro, Greene County, Pennsylvania, and daughter of Charles and Melissa (Johnson) Williams.

At the home of his parents in Morgantown S. Charles Steele was born July 24, 1885. His education was one in preparation for a business and professional career. He attended the grammar and high schools of his native city, West Virginia Wesleyan College and the University of West Virginia. An employment that had much to do with the choice of a permanent vocation was with the office of the attorney general of West Virginia where he devoted nearly a year to making confidential reports from Richmond, Virginia, to the attorney general on the Virginia debt settlement. July 1, 1908, Mr. Steele entered the office of Thomas B. Dixey, a prominent certified public accountant of New York City, and under whom he enjoyed an exceptionally broad range of experience and training until March 5, 1910, at which date he established himself in the independent practice of his profession at Morgantown and Fairmont. His certificate as a certified public accountant is dated September 9, 1911. He was the first accountant in West Virginia to be elected a member of the American Institute of Accountants, the date of his affiliation being September 1, 1917. In the past decade he has handled a large volume of important work both for corporations and individuals. Mr. Steele is a member of the West Virginia Society of Certified Public Accountants, the National Association of Cost Accountants, the Old Colony Club, the Fairmont Country Club, and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

March 15, 1918, Mr. Steele volunteered his service to the Government. His ambition was to get overseas, but the authorities found a man of his profession more useful in this country. He was employed as a civilian in the construction division of the quartermaster's department of the army. As a supervising traveling accountant he had supervision over the field auditors at the various army cantonments. He was given discharge from Government service December 15, 1918, and has since given his attention to his substantial and important professional business at Fairmont.

November 1, 1911, Mr. Steele married Miss Margaret Estelle Denniston. She was born in San Francisco, California, but was reared and educated in New York City, and is a graduate of Hunter College. Her parents were William and Annie Denniston.

GEORGE L. PENCE, M. D. One of the most accomplished physicians and surgeons of Summers County is Doctor

S. C. Has. Steele.

George L. Pence of Hinton. Doctor Pence was a captain in the Medical Corps during the World war, saw active service in the field hospitals and light artillery in France both during the war and after the armistice.

Doctor Pence was born at Pence Springs in Summers County, February 24, 1881, son of Andrew P. and Sallie Ann (Lewis) Pence. His father, founder of the noted resort and mineral springs known as Pence Springs, was born near Greenville in Monroe County, West Virginia, in 1839, and died in 1915. The family were pioneers of Monroe County. Andrew P. Pence served four years as a Confederate soldier in the artillery branch of the army. After the war he became a merchant, conducted a store at Green Sulphur Springs and Sandstone, now known as New Richmond, and subsequently was the partner in the business at Alderson. About 1877 he bought from the Jesse Beard estate about 300 acres, including the Pence Springs. He subsequently sold two-thirds in order to enlist capital for the development of the springs, but later bought back the interest. He did much to give publicity to the fine qualities of the mineral water, and established a large hotel that was filled with guests seeking the benefit of the water and the other attractions of the locality. Pence Springs is one of the noted resorts of the state, and is located twelve miles east of Hinton. Andrew P. Pence served as a member of the Legislature in 1910-12, for a number of years was president of the Board of Education in Talcott District, and he was an ardent democrat. His wife, Sallie Ann Lewis, was born at Blakes Mill in Greenbrier County, and is living at Pence Springs at the age of seventy-eight. They have five children: Jacob D., of Pence Springs; Bessie S., wife of O. C. Carter of Alderson; Silas H., of Pence Springs; George L.; and Nellie K., at home.

George L. Pence grew up on the old homestead at Pence Springs, was educated in the public schools there, and was a student in West Virginia University from 1901 to 1903. In the latter year he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, graduating M. D. in 1906 and receiving a similar degree from West Virginia University. From 1906 to 1910 Doctor Pence was associated with The Hinton Hospital. In June, 1911, he was a student specializing in laboratory work in the Post-Graduate School of Medicine in New York. Following this experience in preparation Doctor Pence was engaged in a general practice at Pence Springs until July, 1917.

At that date he joined the army, attending the Medical Training School at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia. He was commissioned a first lieutenant and later promoted to captain. Doctor Pence went overseas with the Fifth Division in June, 1918, and until September was located in the Vosges sector, was in the St. Mihiel campaign and was with the Light Artillery during some of the great operations in the closing months of the war. He was transferred to the Nineteenth Field Artillery on the Moselle River, and was at Thiecourt at the time of the signing of the armistice. He was performing the duties of major in charge of a hospital for some time. After the armistice he was at Luxemburg, Esch, and Mondorf, a summer resort, in all about ten months. Doctor Pence had command of the Twenty-ninth Field Hospital, located at Mondorf for two months previous to returning to the United States in July, 1919.

Since leaving the army he has been established in practice at Hinton. He is a member of the County, State and American Medical Associations, is a Royal Arch and Knight Templar Mason and Shriner, a member of the Elks, the Chamber of Commerce, and is a democrat in politics.

WILLIAM W. GRAHAM. One of the most essential and important departments in the municipal service of a city like Charleston, the proper conduct of which requires unusual abilities of an executive character and rare diplomacy in the handling of a large force of men so that the machine may operate without friction, is the fire department. William W. Graham, the present fire chief of Charleston, possesses the qualities noted, and is also known as a man of much personal courage and cool and broad judgment.

Chief Graham was born on Elk River, Kanawha County, West Virginia, in 1879, a son of Rev. C. B. Graham, a Methodist Episcopal divine and a native of Kanawha County. He preached for thirty years at Wheeling and Charleston, where he was presiding elder, alternating between the two cities. For twenty-five years he was pastor and presiding elder at Wheeling, and he returned to Charleston in the latter capacity, although his last work in the church was as a local pastor. He is now living retired at Charleston, where he is held in the highest esteem by his former parishioners and by those of other denominations who recognize and appreciate his many splendid qualities of heart and mind. His wife, formerly Miss Antoinette A. Hill, of Kanawha County, also survives, and has proven a most faithful helpmate and wise business counselor. William Graham, the grandfather of Chief Graham, came to West Virginia at an early day and became interested in salt plants. He is said to have organized the first Sunday school in the salt section.

William W. Graham attended the public schools of Wheeling, where his boyhood was mainly passed, and subsequently pursued a course at the West Virginia Consolidated Seminary, now Wesleyan College, at Buckhannon. When he was nineteen years of age he engaged in coal operations in the Elk River section, and until 1915 was engaged in producing coal on land owned by his father. In 1915, when Mayor Breece assumed his executive chair and duties, he desired that all departments of the city be placed upon an efficiency basis. Knowing of Mr. Graham's abilities, he prevailed upon him to accept the office of chief of the Charleston Fire Department, which at that time consisted of twenty-eight men, with all horse-drawn vehicles. During the following two years he did much to improve the efficiency of the department, but when the United States entered the great war he left Charleston and went to Nitro, located ten miles below Charleston, on the Kanawha River, where the Government established and operated a great ammunition plant during the war. While there Chief Graham acted as the head of the fire prevention department, but in 1919 returned to Charleston, where he resumed his duties as fire chief. The department now consists of forty-three men, with two automobiles and two steam-pumpers, and with the exception of one span of horses is completely motorized. In addition to the central station there are four outside stations, equipped with electric alarms, Chief Graham having installed an entirely new alarm system, both at headquarters and the outside houses. Headquarters are in the new City Building, just completed, the fire department being the first to be installed in the new structure. The chief of the Charleston Fire Department is forty-three years of age, a vigorous, wide-awake, experienced man, and can be depended upon to maintain the service of which he is the head at its present standard of superiority, and incorporate into the system the methods and improvements indicated by the advancement of mechanics and science. He is a popular member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

Chief Graham married Miss Clyde Meadows, of Putnam County, West Virginia, and they are the parents of one daughter, Josephine, who is attending school.

GEORGE H. TRAINER. Through the process of one modest operation leading to another George H. Trainer has for years been recognized as one of the prominent oil and gas operators in Central West Virginia. His home for many years has been at Salem, and he is one of the most substantial business men and citizens of that locality.

Mr. Trainer was born on a farm in Doddridge County, West Virginia, March 27, 1861, son of William and Louisa J. (Houtt) Trainer. His people were farmers in Doddridge County, and their family consisted of three sons and three daughters. The grandfather of George H. Trainer was Rev. John Trainer, a native of Virginia, who combined the vocation of agriculture with that of a minister of the Gospel.

George H. Trainer acquired a district school education, and he lived on his father's farm until he was twenty-one. On leaving home he became a merchant at Seymour, remaining there four years, and, disposing of his interests, next moved to West Union, where he continued merchant-dising for ten years. While at West Union he became interested in the business of handling oil and gas well supplies, and from this his capital and equipment were called into the scene of practical operations in the oil and gas district. He began production on leased land, and is now associated with his brothers Edward and Frank in the oil and gas business. The oil produced by them is sold to the Standard Oil Company, and at times they have had as many as sixty oil and gas wells in production at once. An important by-product of their business is the manufacture of gasoline from natural gas.

A resident of Salem, Mr. Trainer takes an active part in its business and civic affairs. He is a director in the First National Bank of Salem, is a director in the Clarksburg Trust Company at Clarksburg, a stockholder in the Union National Bank and the Merchants National Bank of Clarksburg and has been a director in Salem College for twenty years. He is a member of the Kiwanis Club, is a trustee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mrs. Trainer is a member of the Seventh Day Baptist Church. She taught in the public schools for a number of years.

On September 27, 1884, Mr. Trainer married Miss Viola C. Davis, a native of New Milton, West Virginia, and daughter of Rev. James B. and Emily V. (Davis) Davis. Her father was a preacher and a farmer.

WILLIAM SPINDLER, whose home is near Clifton Mills, is a man of many interests in Preston County. For many years he has farmed on an extensive scale, is an auctioneer, a licensed veterinarian, and is one of the members of the County Court.

He was born in Grant District, Preston County, October 4, 1860. A full account of the Spindler family, one of the old and honored names of Preston County, is given in the career of his brother, Charles Spindler. William Spindler grew up on the home farm, attended the common schools, and after reaching his majority he left home and found his first work in the grading and construction of the railroad between Uniontown and Brownsville. From this he went to Pittsburgh, was employed a short time in a box factory, and then worked at monthly wages on a farm in Allegheny County. Returning to Grant District, he bought a farm, and since then he has had farming interests of his own to engage his personal attention. He owns a large amount of land, and his specialty is the growing of high class Poland China hogs and Shropshire sheep. For more than a quarter of a century Mr. Spindler has been a licensed veterinarian, and is a recognized and well qualified expert in treating all diseases of domestic and farm animals. For twenty-one years he has been crying sales, and has officiated perhaps at as many sales as any other one auctioneer in the district which he covers.

Mr. Spindler was deputy sheriff four years, beginning in January, 1909, under his brother Charles. In 1909 he was also elected to the County Court as successor of Jeremiah Guthrie. He served one term, and in 1920 was again elected to the County Court. The important work of the present board is road construction of a permanent character, appropriations for the expense of the public schools, the purchase of a set of indexes for the County Clerk's office and the general routine of the court. Mr. Spindler has always been a republican and is a member of the Lutheran Church.

In Preston County, March 25, 1883, he married Mary F. Maust, daughter of Jonas and Mary (Haynes) Maust. The Maust family were identified with the first settlement of Preston County and is of German ancestry. Mrs. Spindler was one of the following children: Wakeman T., of Uniontown, Pennsylvania; Mrs. Spindler; Elma May, wife of Clayton Wolfe, of Cranestown; Nora, wife of J. M. Kelley, of Bruceton; and James D., of Clinton Mills.

Oldest of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Spindler is Lucy E., wife of Frank Collier, of Uniontown, Pennsylvania. James R. lives at Youngstown, Ohio. Harry A., on his father's farm, was with the colors at the time of the World war but did not get overseas. Lizzie is the wife of Walter Barkley, of Uniontown. May, the youngest, is the wife of Russell Smith, a farmer near Clifton Mills. Mr. and Mrs. Spindler also have five grandchildren: Harold W. Collier, Jona and Robert Spindler, children of J. R. Spindler. Sarah Lou Barkley, daughter of Lizzie and Walter Barkley, and Herbert Eugene Spindler, son of Harry A. Spindler, of Clifton Mills.

JUDGE JAMES PAULL was one of the most prominent members of the old Wheeling bar and enjoyed a widespread reputation as one of the profound jurists and able public men of West Virginia. He was born in Belmont County, Ohio, in 1813, the son of George and Elizabeth Paull. George Paull was a member of the Twenty-seventh Regiment of U. S. Infantry (Ohio troops) in the War of 1812, and served bravely under General Harrison in the Northwest Army. He was a son of Col. James Paull, who was a soldier of the Revolutionary war and who also served under William Crawford in his disastrous encounter of the 5th of June, 1872, on the plains of Sandusky, Ohio.

Judge James Paull was thoroughly educated in childhood and youth, and after completing preparatory studies in Cross Creek, Pennsylvania, he entered Washington College in that state, at which he was graduated in June, 1835. He then came to Wheeling and, choosing law as his profession, rented the office of Z. Jacob and finished his legal studies in the law department of the University of Virginia. Nearly the whole of his career as a lawyer and public man was spent at Wheeling, where he was locally esteemed as an estimable citizen. In 1872 he was elected a judge of Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia, a high position which he filled with honor and credit, performing its laborious duties with an industry and application that fatally impaired his health. His decisions rank with the permanent and valuable contributions to the law of the state. Judge Paull also represented Ohio County during two terms in the State Legislature of Virginia. He died May 11, 1875, being at that time a resident of Wellsburg, Brooks County, to which place he had removed eighteen months before.

Judge Paull was twice married, first, to Jane A., daughter of the late Judge Joseph L. Fry, an eminent lawyer from 1831-1852 and Circuit Judge of the First Judicial District of Virginia. His great-grandfather was Col. Joshua Fry, an English gentleman of worth and education, who held many distinguished offices under the Colonial Government, was a civil engineer, professor at Williams and Mary College, commissioner of the Crown, one of the commissioners at the treaty of Logstown and was appointed commander of the Virginia forces by Governor Dinwiddie in 1754. The highest honors of the Colony were within the grasp of Col. Joshua Fry when his death at Willes Creek, en route to Fort Cumberland, closed his career and placed Lieutenant-Colonel George Washington in command. (See Sparks Life of Washington, page 104-126.) The three sons born to Judge James and Mrs. Paull are: Archibald W., Joseph F. and Alfred, all citizens of Wheeling. By his second wife, Eliza J. Ott, daughter of Samuel Ott, deceased, of Wheeling, Judge Paull had five children, as follows: James, Elizabeth, Harry W., Samuel O., and Margaret Susan, deceased.

ALFRED PAULL, senior member of the firm of Alfred Paull & Son, which conducts one of the leading general insurance agencies of West Virginia, with headquarters in the Board of Trade Building in the City of Wheeling and with sub-agencies numbering about 135 at different points in the state, is not only one of the vital and progressive men who have done much to further the civic and material advancement of Wheeling, but is a son of the late Judge James Paull, who was a distinguished member of the West Virginia bar and who served as a member of the Supreme Court of the state. A tribute to his memory is given in the preceding sketch.

Alfred Paull, son of Judge James Paull and Jane A. (Fry) Paull, was born in the City of Wheeling, October 14, 1854, several years prior to the creation of the State of West Virginia, of which his native city became one of the two original capitals. Reared in a home of culture and gracious influences, he supplemented the discipline of the local schools by a course in Washington and Jefferson Col-le, Pennsylvania. From his youth to the present time he has been actively associated with business interests in Wheeling, and his influence has been wide and important. He served as secretary of the Manufacturers Insurance Company, a West Virginia corporation with its general offices in Wheeling. In January, 1885, he became secretary of the Underwriters Insurance Company of that city. He wielded great influence in the upbuilding of the business of each of these corporations and gained authoritative position in connection with the insurance business in the state. He gave long and effective service as secretary of the Ohio Valley General Hospital, from which office he retired January 1, 1921. He is vice president of the Bank of the Ohio Valley, deeply interested in all things pertaining to the welfare and progress of his native city, his civic liberality has been a parity with his civic loyalty. He served four years as member of the City Council and eight years as a member of the Board of Education. Mr. Paull has been influential in the local councils and campaign activities of the republican party, and was specially prominent in the time honored Masonic fraternity, in which his affiliations may here be briefly noted: Bates Lodge No. 33, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Union Chapter No. 1, Royal Arch Masons; Pyrene Commandery No. 7, Knights Templars; and Osiris Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He is a past grand commander of the West Virginia Grand Commandery of Knights Templars, and past potentate of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

Henry M. Cole

Alfred Paull married Lee Singleton, a daughter of Captain W. T. Singleton, of Wheeling, West Virginia. Four children have blessed this union: Alfred S., who is mentioned in later paragraphs; Mary Irwin, married to Arthur K. Hubbard, and they have four children, Lee A., Elizabeth, Chester and Paull; Lydia P., married to Lyman B. Kirkpatrick, of Rochester, New York and their two children are Helen and Lyman; Lee C. married Mary Glessner, daughter of William L. Glessner, and they have two children, Lee C. and William Glessner.

Alfred Singleton Paull, the junior member of the representative insurance firm of Alfred Paull & Son and president of the Saturn Foundry and Machine Company and the McCaskey, Inc., of Wheeling, was born in this city on the 10th of April, 1883. He attended Linsly Institute at Wheeling and later a preparatory school at Lawrenceville, New Jersey, after which he entered Princeton University, of which Woodrow Wilson, former president of the United States, was then the president. In this institution he was graduated as a member of the class of '05 and with the degree of Bachelor of Science. Since that time he has been actively associated with his father in the insurance business, and his energy and progressive policies have contributed distinctly to the expansion of the enterprise. He is a republican of unwavering allegiance, and holds membership in the Rotary, Country, Port Henry and Hampshire Clubs of Wheeling.

In April, 1913, was solemnized the marriage of Alfred S. Paull and Miss Mary Virginia Sands, daughter of Lawrence E. Sands, who was formerly connected with the National Exchange Bank of Wheeling and who is now an executive of the First National Bank of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Paull have one child, Eugenia.

EDWARD K. TOOMPAS is in the most significant degree a self-made man, and his achievement since coming to the United States from his native Greece marks him as a man of strong mentality, determined purpose and worthy ambition. By self-discipline he has broadened his education far beyond the meager compass represented in his limited schooling in his native land, and in material affairs he has won substantial success that now marks him as one of the representative business men of the City of Clarksburg, Harrison County, West Virginia.

Mr. Toompas was born at Pitalia, Trikhala, in Thessaly, Greece, on the 7th of January, 1884, and is a son of Konstantinos and Vasileke Toompas, both likewise natives of that place. In the schools of his native land Edward K. Toompas received a limited education, in which he learned to read and write the Greek language. Thereafter he was variously employed in his home district until he had attained to the age of twenty-one years, when, in 1905, he came to the United States, determined to win in this land of opportunity a place of independence and prosperity. A stranger in a strange land, entirely unfamiliar with the English language and with the customs of the country, he landed in the port of New York City and thence proceeded forthwith to Manchester, New Hampshire, where kinsfolk and other friends were living. There he found employment as an ordinary laborer in a textile mill, and in this connection he applied himself diligently for three and one half years, within which, by study, reading and observation, he substantially advanced himself and learned to read and write the English language, in the speaking of which he had rapidly gained proficiency. After leaving New Hampshire he was employed eighteen months in a restaurant in the City of Annapolis, Maryland, and he continued to avail himself of every possible opportunity for expanding his education and fitting himself for a broader field of endeavor.

In 1910 Mr. Toompas came to Clarksburg, West Virginia, and purchased a one-fourth interest in the Manhattan Cafe, in the conducting of which his associates have been from that time to the present three other ambitious and progressive fellow countrymen, Victor Charpas, John Pappas and Charles Theodoron. The firm conducts two of the best equipped and most popular restaurants in this section of the state. The firm owns the Manhattan Building, on West Pike Street, a modern structure in which is located the Manhattan Cafe, a most attractive marble and tile restaurant with the best of modern appointments and service. Here is to be found the best type of independent refrigerating plants, and here the firm conducts its own bakery, which supplies bread, pastries and other products of the best order. The second place owned and conducted by the firm is the Clarksburg Restaurant, at 110 Third Street, opposite the post office, and both establishments cater to a substantial and representative patronage. In this field of enterprise Mr. Toompas has been most successful, and he also has other business interests of important order. He is vice president of the Palace Theater Company and the Palace Theater Realty Company, of Manchester, New Hampshire, the former corporation operating the Palace Theater, a high grade amusement place. Mr. Toompas is interested also in other theater enterprises in New Hampshire and is associated in the ownership of a fine grain ranch of 2,000 acres in the Province of Alberta, Canada. The record of his career offers both lesson and incentive, and he richly merits the substantial success which he has won.

Mr. Toompas gives his political support to the republican party, is a communicant of the Greek Orthodox Church, and in the Masonic fraternity he has received the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite, his maximum York Rite affiliation being with the Clarksburg Commandery of Knights Templars, besides which he is numbered among the nobles of Nemesis Temple of the Mystic Shrine, at Parkersburg. He has gained a host of friends in business and social circles at Clarksburg, and his name is enrolled on the list of eligible bachelors in this city.

HENRY M. COLE, owns and conducts one of the leading undertaking establishments in the State of West Virginia. His place of business is in Martinsburg, Berkeley County. He was born in Falling Waters District, Berkeley County, and in the same district his father, Samuel W. Cole, was born May 10, 1843, a son of William Cole, who was born in Eastern Maryland, where his father, Alexander Cole, passed his entire life, the family name of his wife having been Van Zant. William Cole came to Berkeley County in an early day and purchased land near the present village of Marlowe. He reclaimed a productive farm and also worked at times at his trade, that of carpenter, but log houses being the rule at that period there was not much demand for skilled carpentry. He married Catherine Lewis. William Cole died at the age of sixty-five and his widow at the age of eighty-six years, their children having been five in number: George T., William Henry, Samuel W., James H., and Joanna. Samuel W.

Cole taught in the subscription schools of the early days, assisted in the work of the home farm and learned the trades of carpenter and cabinetmaker, he having natural mechanical ability and having become a skilled artisan in both wood and iron. He was a soldier of the Union in the Civil war, in which he served in turn in the quartermaster's department and as ambulance driver, in which latter capacity he visited many battlefields in his humane work. In 1875 he settled on his present farm, in Falling Waters District. In 1872 he married Isabelle Virginia Kershner, who was born in Berkeley County, August 21, 1851, her father, Samuel Kershner, having been born in this county in August, 1822, a son of Solomon Kershner, a pioneer who came from his native state of Maryland and who remained in Berkeley until his death, the maiden name of his wife having been Elizabeth Van Zant. Samuel Kershner married Ann Isabelle Williamson, who was born September 7, 1814, a daughter of Samuel and Ann (Johns) Williamson. William and Isabelle V. Cole became the parents of the following children: John S., Henry M., Katherine J., Core V., Samuel Dalton, Charles W. and Mary A. Charles W. became a clergyman of the Methodist Protestant Church and died at the age of thirty-one years.

Henry M. Cole acquired his early education in the rural schools and in his youth he learned the trade of cabinetmaker, under the effective direction of his father. He completed his practical apprenticeship at Uniontown, Pennsylvania, and he continued to follow his trade until he engaged in business as an undertaker and funeral director, his present business having been established at Martinsburg in 1916, prior to which, in 1914, he took a course in anatomy at Johns Hopkins University and became a licensed embalmer. He is affiliated with Berkeley Lodge, No. 37, A. F. & A. M.; Lebanon Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M.; Palestine Commandery No. 2, Knights Templar; and Osiris Temple of the Mystic Shrine, in the city of Wheeling. His fraternal affiliations are further extended to include membership in the Knights of Pythias and Pythian Sisters, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Patriotic Sons of America, the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, and the Improved Order of Red Men.

April 29, 1908, recorded the marriage of Mr. Cole to Miss Rose Helen Duke, who was born at Front Royal, Warren County, Virginia, a daughter of Timothy and Amanda (Thompson) Duke, both likewise natives of that county. John Jackson Duke, father of Timothy, was a native of England and a pioneer of Warren County, Virginia. Timothy Duke was a farmer in his native county at the time of his death, aged thirty-three years, his widow having later contracted a second marriage and having been a resident of Berkeley County at the time of her death, when sixty-seven years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Cole have two children: Norman C. and Amelia Catherine.

GEORGE A. KERSHNER. In May, 1725, a band of sturdy German Reformed churchmen left their native forests, because of the unceasing persecution attendant upon the rise of Lutherism and other faiths which did not acknowledge the supremacy of the Church of Rome, and, attracted by the offers of religious freedom which prevailed in the territory granted to William Penn, settled in Berks County, Pennsylvania. In this community was the stock from which George A. Kershner descended.

Part of the family came south into what is now Washington County, Maryland, where they became farmers and mill owners. Here in 1740 Elizabeth Kershner was married to Jonathan Hager, who founded Hagerstown and named it Elizabeth Town in honor of his wife. This name persisted until changed by an act of the Legislature in 1813. She died April 16, 1765, and lies in the Reformed Cemetery in Hagerstown.

Elizabeth Kershner's kinsmen formed a part of that detachment of Virginia and Maryland border men who saved the remnant of General Braddock's army after his disastrous defeat by the French and Indians before Fort Duquesne. Later Martin Kershner, Jr., served with the Revolutionary Army, first as captain and later as major, and the Kershner family through preceding years has been represented in every war in which the United States has participated.

George Albert Kershner, the subject of this sketch was born and reared near Marlowe, West Virginia, and spent his childhood and youth on the farm of his parents. He is a son of Cyrus and Sarah A. Kershner. Cyrus Kershner was born December 11, 1825, son of Solomon Kershner, Washington County, Maryland, spent his life in Berkeley County. He was apprenticed to a building contractor, and followed that occupation for a number of years. He became interested in the establishment of a more liberal system of free schools, and because of his qualifications was called upon by the people of his district to become a teacher. In addition to his teaching he found time to serve with credit eight years as justice of the peace. He died in 1893, and lies in the churchyard at Old Harmony, near the scenes of his life's work. His wife was Sarah A. Brichner, born in Adams County, Pennsylvania, in 1840. Her father Henry Brichner, married Miss Sourbier; both of the same county. They moved to Berkeley County in 1847. Cyrus Kershner and wife had seven children: Charles E., David C., George A., Daniel G., Lucy C., Teresa and Henry I. The mother is still living at the old home farm.

George A. Kershner spent his youth on the farm, got a rural school education, and at the age of eighteen went to Harrisburg and worked as clerk for two years. Returning to the home farm, he shared in its work until his marriage. After spending several years in Hagerstown he located at Bedington, Berkeley County. There he bought property and built a home where he still resides. He engaged in the repair business at this place. He was twice elected justice of the peace of Falling Waters District.

Mr. Kershner inherited mechanical genius, and the world that presented the greatest attractiveness to him and in which he has found satisfaction and success has been along mechanical lines.

In 1906 he located at Martinsburg a garage and sales room for automobiles, at the time when automobiles were just coming into general use. For a period of twelve years he gave his personal attention to this growing and successful business. In 1920, on account of the ill health of his wife, he leased his establishment at the corner of King and College streets. In 1922 he resumed business with Robert H. and Raymond E. Kershner, his sons as partners.

At the age of twenty-one Mr. Kershner married Amelia M. Willingham, who was born in Mill Creek District, Berkeley County, a daughter of James W. and Mary C. (Mayhew) Willingham. She was of English and German extraction. Her maternal ancestry extends back to John Ludwig Sensenderfer, born at Brettach, Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1690, Martin Sensenderfer, immigrant and founder of the Sensenderfer family in America, and a Revolutionary soldier, born in Germany June 11, 1739, and Captain Lewis Sensenderfer, of the War of 1812, who married Catherine Imboden in 1793, are in the direct line of descent. Her father was a Confederate soldier and of English ancestry. She was an exemplary wife and mother. She died February 18, 1921, and rests in New Norbourne Cemetery. There are four sons: Robert H., Raymond E., George F. and William E. Robert graduated with honors from the Martinsburg High School. He married Mildred McIntyre and has two sons, Robert Jr., and Rex Eugene. Raymond was valedictorian of his graduating class of the Martinsburg High School and attended the West Virginia University at Morgantown and also Washington and Lee University for a time. George F. is also a graduate of the Martinsburg High School, and is now a midshipman at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland. The youngest son, William, graduated from the Martinsburg High School in 1922.

Mr. Kershner is a public spirited and progressive citizen, and is always willing to lend a helping hand to anything which he feels is for the benefit of the community.

ALBINUS POOLE, M. D. With the conclusion of his medical education Doctor Poole chose as the scene of his profesonal labors West Union, and has been one of the busiest and most useful citizens of that community ever since.

Doctor Poole was born on a farm near Frederick, Maryland, August 29, 1869, son of John W. and Mary M. (Riggs) Poole, also natives of Maryland and of English ancestry. His father was a miller by trade, but always lived on the farm and died at the age of seventy-one. The mother passed away at the age of eighty-two. They were Methodists. Their three children were: Albinus, Hattie and Minnie.

Albinus Poole, grew up in the environment of the farm in his father's mill, attended public school, and after attaining manhood he completed his literary education in the Ohio Normal University at Ada, Ohio. He took his first medical lectures in the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, and from there entered the University of Maryland, where he completed his course and received his M. D. degree May 1, 1900. Doctor Poole at once located at West Union in Doddridge County, beginning the practice of medicine and minor surgery. He has gained a large practice, is noted for his progressiveness in his profession, in the matters of public health and in other incidental duties of good citizenship. In 1910, he took a post graduate course at Johns Hopkins University. He is a member of the Doddridge County and West Virginia State and American Medical Association. For fifteen years or more Doctor Poole has been a member of the Board of Pension Examiners for the Federal Government.

He is a democrat, a Methodist and a Mason and Knight of Pythias. He has taken a commendable interest in public affairs and has worked with his fellow citizens in various organized movements for the welfare of the city and county.

In 1897 Doctor Poole married Miss Helen Virginia Fleming, who was born and reared at Fairmont, West Virginia, daughter of Harrison Fleming, a banker. Doctor and Mrs. Poole have one daughter, Helen Fleming Poole, born July 11, 1901, who is a graduate of the Fairmont High School, spent two years in West Virginia University, and finishing her education in Wellesley College of Massachusetts.

T. H. LILLY. One of West Virginia's most prominent business characters is T. H. Lilly, of Hinton. In business lines he has achieved success that has made his name one of national and international standing in the lumber industry. For years he has been a leader ready to assume responsibilities in behalf of every progressive undertaking at Hinton and in the county of Summers.

Mr. Lilly was born May 23, 1868, near the foot of the Flat Top Mountain in Raleigh County. His parents were Thomas Edmond and Abigail (Turner) Lilly, and his grandfather was Elijah Lilly, a descendant of Robert Lilly, who about 1760 made a pioneer settlement in what is now Raleigh County. The Lilly family, includes many men of distinction in the affairs of Summers County and other sections of West Virginia. Thomas E. Lilly was a prominent farmer in the vicinity of Flat Top Mountain.

Thomas Hubbard Lilly did not take kindly to the environment of his birth and the responsibilities put upon him as a boy. Plowing among the roots and over the rough ground disgusted him with farm life. He had a team of oxen named Buck and Darkey. One day he had them yoked to a wagon on a hill side. The oxen decided they wanted a drink, and they pulled out of the road over stumpy ground and rocks, making straight for the creek. The wagon was overturned, leaving the boy Thomas H. underneath. A few days later the same oxen under his care while pulling the plow over the same ground again ran away, and the same night T. H. Lilly left home, being then fifteen years of age. He went to The New Towerhill, and found his first job in the Hawes Saw Mill as a laborer at 35 cents a day. Subsequently he worked in a mill belonging to Judge Lewis. His duties were rolling saw dust from the mill, but he soon learned to set the blocks, learned to operate the saw, and in time learned every detail in the operation of a saw mill.

Mr. Lilly's first teacher was Robert Neely, in a school house with a half dirt floor. His last teacher was Joseph Thompson. He made up for lack of continuous school advantages by the rapid acquisition of knowledge.

After a time Mr. Lilly was able to buy an interest in a sawmill located on Jumping Branch. He also learned the stone mason's trade, and at Hinton he worked on the foundation for the Hinton High School and the building that now contains Rose Pharmacy. There was a period of two years when he again worked at farming, but this he never considered as a permanent occupation. In May, 1895, Mr. Lilly bought a Griffith & Wedge saw mill from Cook and Burkes, agreeing to pay about $1100 for it in five months time, the payments to be made as he disposed of his product. In case of failure to pay the full amount by the end of five months the mill was to revert to its former owners and he was to forfeit all money paid as rental. By phenomenal industry and energy he made the mill pay the debt, and he continued its operation until the spring of 1897, when he sold out. He then opened a store at Dunns in Mercer County, and then another store at Flat Top, near his birthplace. He also operated a mill on Tommies Creek. Selling the store and mill in 1899, he removed to Coburn, Virginia, and purchased two mills from Griffith & Wedge at Zanesville, Ohio. He manufactured lumber on contract for John A. Taylor & Company, a firm that failed in the fall of 1900, causing Mr. Lilly a large incidental loss.

September 15, 1901, Mr. Lilly moved to Hinton and engaged in the wholesale lumber business, an industry he built up in subsequent years to a flourishing condition. In 1907 he organized the T. H. Lilly Lumber Company, Incorporated. However, in 1914 he surrendered the charter and took over the business alone. With mills at various points in West Virginia and as a wholesale jobber for other mills Mr. Lilly sold lumber all over the United States, with a large export to European countries, until the time of the World war. He maintained an office at 1 Madison Avenue in New York, and in April, 1908, he made a trip to Europe, being absent four months, and while there established sales offices at 29 Clements Land, London, and 2 Exchange Street, Liverpool. His T. H. L. brand of lumber became known and commanded a premium in many European markets. This business reached a volume of $1,000,000 annually.

Everything connected with the welfare and prosperity of Hinton has been a matter of concern to Mr. Lilly. In 1907 he was the first to advocate paving the streets, and he also advocated the building of a modern hotel, becoming a stockholder and director in the company that erected the McCreery Hotel, now one of the finest in the state. He was an earnest advocate of good road building, and it is due in no small part to his leadership and influence that every district in Summers County has voted bond issues for good roads. It was his activity on the good road issue that led to his election as county commissioner by over 300 majority on the republican ticket in a county decidedly democratic. He served as chairman of the County Republican Committee.

Mr. Lilly owned the first Buick car in Summers County. That was in 1909. He soon became agent for that car over a number of southwest Virginia counties, but later exchanged this territory for Kanawha County and also Boone and a part of Fayette County. At Charleston he built the famous garage and sales room in that city, but recently sold that. Mr. Lilly is the largest stockholder in the Ruffner Hotel at Charleston. More banquets have been held in the Ruffner at Charleston than in any other hotel in the state. Mr. Lilly is a member of Trinity Baptist Church, and is affiliated with the Elks Lodge.

The Lilly home at Hinton adjoins that of William Plumley. Mr. Lilly made his first acquaintance with Mr. Plumley soon after he ran away from home. Going into the Plumley store to make a purchase, he saw there a fiddle, which he also purchased. His sons say that when his fiddling is accompanied by a good banjo player he can produce music that will make a preacher dance. Mr. Lilly and Mr. Plumley have been staunch friends ever since this little transaction. Among other business connections

Mr. Lilly is a stockholder in the Bank of Summers, has been president of the New River Land Company and the Hinton Steam Laundry.

THOMAS CLARK ATKESON. All who know anything of the organized and cooperative farm movement of America are familiar at least with the name of Thomas Clark Atkeson, for many years prominent in the National Grange. Many who know his work and leadership in national affairs do not associate him with West Virginia, his native state, where for many years he has been known and honored as a practical farmer and teacher of agriculture.

Doctor Atkeson was born at Lawndale Farm, Buffalo, West Virginia, in 1852, son of Thomas and Virginia Harris (Brown) Atkeson. He grew up in a rural community, attended country schools, the Buffalo Academy, West Virginia University, and in 1874 graduated in law from Kentucky University. In later years, in recognition of his attainments and services, Barboursville College in 1892 bestowed upon him the honorary Ph. D. degree, and he received the Master of Science degree from Morris Harvey College in 1897.

For many years Doctor Atkeson had a busy program of activities in journalism, the practice of law and farming as well as teaching. He was a farmer and lawyer from 1878 to 1891. During 1891-93 he was professor of agriculture in West Virginia University. The years 1893 to 1896 were again devoted to farming. In 1896-97 he was president of Barboursville College, and from 1897 to 1911, was dean of the College of Agriculture of West Virginia University. He served the University as professor of animal husbandry from 1911 to 1914, and since the latter year has been professor of animal husbandry emeritus. During 1914-15 he was statistician of the State Department of Agriculture and editor of the West Virginia Farmer at Charleston.

As a young man he became interested in the Patrons of Husbandry or the Grange, and for twenty-four years was master of the West Virginia State Grange. For eight years he was overseer of the National Grange, a member of the National Grange Executive Committee, and since January 1, 1919, has been Washington representative of the National Grange, residing in that city. Doctor Atkeson is author of "Bookkeeping for Farmers," published in 1893; a "Catechism of Agriculture," published in 1913; "Semi-Centennial History of the Patrons of Husbandry," published in 1916; and has written hundreds of articles and bulletins on agricultural, economic and political subjects.

His home is still at Lawndale Farm, near the village of Buffalo. He is a director of the Buffalo Bank, has served as a member of the Board of Education, of the Board of Regents for West Virginia University, as secretary of the State Geological Commission, as member and president of the State Board of Agriculture. He is a democrat and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

July 8, 1878, Dr. Atkeson married Miss Cordelia Meek, at Catlettsburg, Kentucky, daughter of Rev. Z. Meek, D. D. There are four children, Thomas Z. Atkeson, who married Nina Beach; Karl C. Atkeson, who married Lizzie Thomas; Mary Meek Atkeson, Ph. D., author of the chapter "West Virginia Literature and Literary Writers," published in Doctor Callahan's History of West Virginia; and Leda C., wife of Prof. E. W. Sheets, now connected with the Bureau of Animal Husbandry at Washington and formerly professor of animal husbandry in West Virginia University.

MATHEW E. HYMES, mayor of Buckhannon, is one of that city's progressive business men, and as mayor has set a high standard of efficiency in the administration of local municipal affairs.

Mayor Hymes was born on a farm in Barbour County, West Virginia, November 9, 1879. His parents, John C. and Phoebe (Edmonds) Hymes, were natives of old Virginia but were reared and educated in Barbour County, and after their marriage settled on a farm there, where they lived out their lives. John Hymes became a prosperous farmer and was one of the influential men of his community. He was a republican, and both he and his wife were active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Of their six children five are living: Mathew E.; Rosa J., wife of O. C. Williams; H. C., a merchant at Junior, West Virginia; Sherman G., also at Junior; and James R., who served as a soldier in the World war.

Mathew E. Hymes grew up on the farm in Barbour County and had a share in its work and toil. He finished his common school education at the age of fourteen, and soon afterward became a teacher and for thirteen years was closely identified with the educational interests of Barbour County. In the meantime he volunteered at the time of the Spanish-American war and served as a non-commissioned officer in a West Virginia regiment. After his discharge he resumed teaching, was principal of schools at Junior, and when he gave up educational work he became a general merchant there. Mr. Hymes served as mayor of Junior.

In 1911 he removed to Buckhannon, primarily to educate his children. Here he has engaged in the theatrical business, was chief of police three years, and was then elected mayor, an office he is now filling for the fourth term. Mr. Hymes owns the Grand Opera House at Buckhannon, has a half interest in the Inland Auto & Supply Company, and is owner of considerable real estate and lands valuable for gas, coal and oil.

On June 30, 1897, he married Miss O. E. Thacker. They have three children. Myron B., the oldest, is a high school graduate, graduating from West Virginia Wesleyan College, and is now completing his education in Harvard University, specializing in law. The two younger children are Florence E. and Harry M., the former a graduate of and the latter a student in the Buckhannon High School. Mr. and Mrs. Hymes are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias, Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and is a republican in politics.

J. ERNEST LAMBERT, treasurer and manager of the Virginia Supply Company, dealers in lumber and building materials at Princeton, Mercer County, was born in Rockingham County, Virginia, November 20, 1876, and is a son of William J. and Barbara Jane (Michael) Lambert, each of whom attained to the age of seventy-seven years, the father's death having occurred February 2, 1908, and that of the mother on May 2, 1921. William J. Lambert gave his entire active career to the basic industry of agriculture, and was one of the prosperous farmers of his native state, both he and his wife having been born in Augusta County, Virginia. He was opposed to secession of the southern states in the climacteric period culminating in the Civil war, and was one of only two men in his community to vote against secession. When the war was precipitated, however, he was loyal to his home state, and represented the same as a soldier in the Confederate Army, though his military enthusiasm was diminished by his firm belief that the principle of secession had been wrongly adopted by the South. He was a republican in political allegiance after the war, and he and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He was a member of a remarkable family of twenty-two children, his father having been twice married.

John Ernest Lambert, one in a family of seven children, attended the free schools of his native county and also a well conducted "pay school" in the Valley of Virginia. Thereafter he learned the carpenter's trade, at which he worked four years in the City of Nashville, Tennessee. By this means he defrayed the expense of his course in the Dinsmore Business College at Staunton, Virginia, and upon leaving this institution, at the age of twenty-six years, he came to the coal fields of West Virginia as timekeeper for the Pocahontas Consolidated Collieries Company at Maybourn, McDowell County, where he remained four years. Thereafter he entered the employ of J. W. Doss, a contractor and builder, and assisted in the erection of a bank building at Rolfe and a hotel building at Keystone. Later he formed a partnership with Mr. Doss, and in 1907 he became associated with the Rosi Construction Company and assisted in the erection of the high school building at field. In 1909 he formed a partnership with Hoge and they came to Princeton and engaged in the lumber and brick business, the enterprise proving successful and leading to the organization of the present Virginia Supply Company, which is one of the substantial and well ordered concerns of its kind in this section of the state. Mr. Lambert has taken loyal interest and part in the development of the coal fields of Southern West Virginia, and has assisted in the construction of hundreds of buildings in various parts of this section of the state. In politics he is a progressive republican, he is affiliated with Algoma Lodge No. 94, F. and A. M. at Northfork, West Virginia, and with Athens Chapter No. 26, and he and his wife hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

In the year 1908 Mr. Lambert married Miss Cosa Warf, who was born near Marion, Virginia, and who is a daughter of Andrew Warf. Mr. and Mrs. Lambert have no children.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF WILLIAMSON is the oldest banking house in Mingo County, and was organized in 1903. W. J. Williamson was the first president, and has been the effective head of the institution ever since. Ben Williamson was the first vice president and Alexander Bishop was cashier, and the fourth director was John Russell. This bank opened for business in a small wooden building on Second Avenue, but in 1905 moved into its present quarters, a substantial business structure at the northeast corner of Second Avenue and Logan Street. It is a three-story brick building, the first floor being occupied by the bank and stores, and the other floors divided to offices.

This is a commercial bank, now has a capital stock of $200,000, surplus and profits $90,000, and there are only seven stockholders. The present officers and directors are: W. J. Williamson, president; Ben Williamson, vice president; M. Z. White, vice president; Alexander Bishop, vice president and cashier; A. B. Varney, assistant cashier. A stock dividend of $100,000 was declared July 1, 1922, out of the undivided profits and the capital stock increased to $200,000.

CLARENCE EVERETT HAWORTH, vice president and professor of literature at Marshall College, is one of the most versatile men in his intellectual gifts in the state. In his early career he was a successful physician, later an editor and publisher, and outside the routine of his work at Marshall College he is nationally known as a musical composer.

Doctor Haworth was born at Portland, Ohio, May 10, 1860. The Haworth family is English and for some generations lived in a hamlet of that name in the north of England. Doctor Haworth is a son of Samuel Milton and Hannah Louise Haworth. His father was a practicing physician from 1849 to 1886.

Clarence Everett Haworth attended public schools at Ravenswood, West Virginia, and finished his literary education in Colgate Academy and Colgate University, then known as Madison University, in New York State. He graduated from the Academy in 1878 and from the University in 1882. He has also done post graduate work at the University of Chicago. He has the degrees A. B., M. A., Ph. B., while the Doctor of Medicine degree was conferred upon him by Starling Medical College at Columbus in 1885. Doctor Haworth devoted himself to his medical practice as a physician and surgeon from 1885 to 1895.

In 1895. In the latter year he bought the Huntington Herald, with James J. Peters. This joint ownership, with Doctor Haworth as editor, continued until 1897, but from 1897 to 1907 his time was fully taken up with his duties as sole owner and editor of this newspaper. In 1907 he sold the Herald, at which time he accepted appointment as vice president of Marshall College, together with the chair of literature, and his congenial tasks in this institution still engage him.

Doctor Haworth served as a member of the Board of Regents of West Virginia University for two terms from 1901 to 1910. He is a republican and a member of the Episcopal Church. As a musical composer he has published a considerable body of both secular and sacred music. His secular compositions include Slumber Song, Tell Me, Roses, Love Me Till I Die, At Thy Voice, At Last, Love Light, Light of Mine Eyes and others.

Doctor Haworth married at Ironton, Ohio, in 1885, Miss Hattie Vinton, daughter of T. A. Vinton of Parkersburg, West Virginia. At Chicopee Falls, Massachusetts, in 1903, Doctor Haworth married Louise Fay. By his first marriage he has two children, Samuel Vinton who married Mary Watsell in 1920, and James Rodgers who married Marguerite Whitaker in 1915. The son James R. Haworth has two children, Vinton and Elizabeth.

OLBERT C. NOBLE is vice president and general manager of the Tygart Valley Glass Company, one of the most important industrial establishments of Grafton. He is himself a past expert in the glass business, which he has followed since early youth, and has been an executive in the present plant at Grafton over ten years.

He was born at Taylorstown, Pennsylvania, November 15, 1881. His grandfather was a native of Ireland, one of the early stage drivers over the Alleghenies, served as Union soldier in the Civil war, and later was a successful farmer in Washington county. He became wealthy through the development of oil on his farm. He had a family of five daughters and two sons. Lafayette Noble, his older son, was born at Taylorstown, had the advantages of only the common schools and devoted his active life to farming. He died at Washington, Pennsylvania, in 1909, aged fifty-two. He is survived by his widow, whose maiden name was Mary Houston, a daughter of Abram Houston. Of her four children Olbert is the oldest; Harry is superintendent for the contracting firm of Rezan & Hormel at Charleroi, Pennsylvania; Charles is an upholsterer at Washington, Pennsylvania; and Mabel is married and living in Washington.

Olbert C. Noble began his business career with a common school education. His early training was on a farm, and he was about nineteen when he left the farm and went on the payroll of the Hazel-Atlas glass plant at Washington, beginning as a common laborer at 70 cents a day of ten hours. He liked the work because he felt that he was accomplishing something for himself as well as for his employers. That has been the spirit dominating him and his work throughout, and is doubtless the chief explanation of his advancement. Within six months he was shipping clerk of the factory, and in 1905 was made assistant superintendent of an industry with 400 employees. In 1909 he was promoted to superintendent, and continued these duties two years longer at Washington.

The Beaumont Glass Company, manufacturers of tableware, moved their plant from Martins Ferry, Ohio, to Grafton, in 1894. Later it was converted into a plant for the manufacture of glass food-containers, and about that time the business was taken over by the Tygart Valley Glass Company. Its exclusive output is glass food containers, and from a plant employing 100 men and with a daily output of one carload, it is now an industry with 300 persons on the payroll and manufactures four carloads of goods daily.

Mr. Noble moved to Grafton and assumed the active management of this plant in 1911. He is one of the directors of the Grafton Chamber of Commerce. He was superintendent of the Tygart Valley Glass Company two years, then general manager, and since 1917 has been vice president and a director and general manager. Edward C. Stewart of Washington, Pennsylvania, is president of the company, and S. A. Waller, secretary and treasurer.

The Christian Church of Grafton was organized in Mr. Noble's home November 7, 1911, with twelve members, and he has been a stimulating and sustaining member ever since. The congregation has recently completed a new house of worship on McGraw avenue. Mr. Noble is a Master Mason and in politics a democrat. At Washington, Pennsylvania, August 21, 1901, he married Catherine Clemens, youngest of the four daughters of Peter Clemens, a farmer in that county. She completed her education in the Washington high school. Mr. and Mrs. Noble have three children: Harold, who graduated with honors from the Grafton High School in 1921 and is now in West Virginia University; Frances and Olberta, who are in the public schools.

AMOS E. KENNEY, attorney at law at Spencer, is a member of a family that has given a number of successful men to the profession in West Virginia.

Mr. Kenney was born at McConnellsville, Ohio, September 13, 1865, but has spent most of his life in West Virginia. His father, Martin Kenney, was born near McConnellsville, Ohio, in 1841, grew up in Morgan County, was a flour miller at McConnellsville, and about 1869 removed to Burning Springs, Wirt County, West Virginia, attracted hither by the newly opened oil fields, the first important oil operations in the state. He finally retired to Parkersburg, where he died in 1916. He was a democrat and a devout Catholic. His wife, Mary Hosey, was born near Pittsburgh in 1836, and died at Parkersburg in 1916, two weeks after the death of her husband. Amos E., the Spencer attorney, was the first of their children. Alfred, who graduated in law from Georgetown University at Washington, is practicing his profession at Parkersburg. Arthur was a gold prospector in Alaska and died during a temporary sojourn at Tulsa, Oklahoma, in 1906. Rose and Lillie are Sisters in the Visitation Academy at Parkersburg, West Virginia, their convent names being Sister Mary Baptista and Sister Mary Angela. Frank, who graduated from the University of Maryland, Medical Department, is a physician and surgeon at Martinsburg, West Virginia. Miss Evelyn lives with her brother Alfred. Elizabeth is a teacher in a Young Ladies Seminary at Buffalo, New York. George, who graduated in medicine from the University of Maryland, is now practicing in New York City.

Amos E. Kenney was about four years of age when the family moved to Burning Springs, and he finished his education in the high school there and later entered the University of West Virginia, where he took his law course. He graduated in 1898, and was the first to be awarded by the State University the degree Master of Laws. Mr. Kenney practiced two years in Calhoun County, and since then for over twenty years has been one of the active and successful members of the bar in Roane County. Besides his private practice he is secretary of the Roane County Building & Loan Association and a director in the Traders Trust & Banking Company of Spencer, West Virginia, and was for a number of years engaged in the newspaper business. Mr. Kenney is a democrat, a member of the Catholic Church, a fourth degree Knight of Columbus, affiliated with Parkersburg Council No. 694, a member of Parkersburg Lodge No. 198, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Spencer Rotary Club and the Roane County Bar Association. He has acquired considerable property in Roane County, including a farm near Spencer, his modern home on Locust Avenue and a business building on Main Street. During the war he did committee work for the Red Cross, Liberty Loan and other drives.

In 1885, at Elizabeth, West Virginia, he married Elvetta Wise, daughter of John and Harriet (Hoffman) Wise, now deceased. Her father for many years was an active lumberman on the Little Kanawha River. Mrs. Kenney, who graduated from Broadus College, died in 1903 at Spencer. She is survived by two children: Mary Tracy is a graduate of the D'Youville College at Buffalo, New York, with the A. B. degree, and is now teacher of Latin and English in the City High schools at Lockport, New York. The son, Patrick, is completing his education in a Trades School at Arlington, New Jersey.

WILLIAM ROY SHAW. One of the ablest men in the educational affairs of Preston County has been recruited from that county where he grew up and acquired his early education, and following the vision of important service for his fellow men has devoted his life so far to educational leadership in school, agricultural development, and practically every other interest and movement associated with the real welfare of his community.

William Roy Shaw, now superintendent of the Terra Alta schools, was born in Portland District November 1, 1877, son of A. Staley Shaw, the venerable justice of the peace and the oldest ex-sheriff of Preston County. The interesting career of his father and other members of the family is sketched elsewhere in this publication.

William Roy Shaw exhausted the opportunities of the common schools in his home locality and at the age of sixteen qualified and began teaching. For three years he taught in a rural school, and then entered upon his own higher educational training. At the University of West Virginia he pursued all the studies in both the preparator, and college courses, performing eight years work in five years and one term and graduated with the A. B. degree in the spring of 1903.

After his university career Mr. Shaw was for four years a teacher in the State Normal Schools at Fairmont and Athens, and in the summer took special courses in Harvard University. Following this he was for three years in Florida, where he was principal of the Normal Industrial High School at St. Petersburg, and came into close touch with the educational affairs of that state. Returning to his home state, Mr. Shaw while not immediately resuming his duties in the schoolroom took up what is essentially an educational work, in connection with the organization of a local farm bureau. In association with the county farm advisor and associates he perfected the first farm bureau in Portland District. He also promoted and was made secretary of the first Federal Farm Loan Association in Preston County and one of the first in the state. After two years of energetic labors in this direction Mr. Shaw resigned, and since then has been head of the school system at Terra Alta. For two years he was also district superintendent of Portland District, but declined the responsibilities of that position, though he is still secretary of the District Board of Education.

The Terra Alta schools under Mr. Shaw's supervision have held to a high standard, the spirit of thorough education has been completely infused among the pupils, and in recent years more than eighty-five per cent of the graduates go elsewhere to supplement their education in colleges and universities. Terra Alta has honor students at Wellesley College, Goucher College at Baltimore, University of West Virginia, and, in fact, in nearly all the larger colleges of the East. The course of study in Terra Alta has been particularly strengthened in the sciences and languages, and the work done there has generated a reputation that attracts many students from outside the district. The schools comprise twelve grades, and the high school is affiliated with the state institutions so that its graduates enter the freshman year at the university.

Mr. Shaw is not altogether the common type of successful school man. His interest in public affairs led him to serve four consecutive years as mayor of Terra Alta. In that time the greater part of the paving work in the town was accomplished and the program for concrete sidewalks put well under way. After leaving the office of mayor he was recorder and a member of the council for a time.

Mr. Shaw has had a talented companion and adviser in his wife. Before her marriage she was Miss Mary Edna Mayer. They were married December 28, 1904. Her father was the late John C. Mayer, who was born in Germany and became one of Preston County's leading business men, merchant and lumberman, and widely known over the county. He married Arabell Byrer, of Philippi, West Virginia, who died in 1910. The children besides Mrs. Shaw were: Carrie, wife of Harland L. Jones, assistant cashier of the Garrett National Bank of Oakland, Maryland; Frederick B., assistant cashier of the Terra Alta Bank; and Mrs. Virginia Zacharias, of Chambersburg, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Shaw completed her college work in the Wesleyan College at Buckhannon, West Virginia. She taught in the schools of Preston County, and while and her husband lived in Florida she was assistant in the grade school there.

JAMES A. CAMPBELL, M. D. In 1894, nearly thirty years ago, Doctor Campbell began the practice of medicine and surgery at Beckley, and through the intervening years he has not only looked after a large private practice but has established and conducted a splendid private hospital for this community. Doctor Campbell is one of the most progressive surgeons and physicians in the state, and is kept in touch with the advancing knowledge of the profession by association with some of the greatest surgeons and clinics in the country.

Doctor Campbell was born at Cliff Top in Fayette county, West Virginia, October 4, 1873, son of Anthony and Margaret (Nickell) Campbell. The ancestry of the Campbell family is a long and distinguished one, running back into the earliest times of Scotland and also of Colonial America. This ancestral record is too long to go into, but some of the facts are interesting in connection with the career of Doctor Campbell. It is a matter of record that Archibald Campbell, the seventh Earl of the House of Argyle, was associated with one of the very earliest projects to colonize Virginia. There was a Rev. Isaac Campbell who was ordained and licensed by the Bishop of London to preach in Virginia on July 6, 1747. Two cousins, called Black David and White David Campbell, were among the pioneer settlers of Culpeper county, Virginia, and Black David, who was born in 1710, moved from there to Augusta county. Another branch of the family was represented by John and Mary Campbell, who immigrated to America, first settling in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and about 1730 moved to Virginia. Robert and Dugal Campbell moved from Pennsylvania to Orange county. Among the sons of John Campbell, just mentioned, were Patrick, Robert and Davis, who settled in Orange county in 1732. The grandfather of Doctor Campbell was William Campbell, and he was descended from the pioneer Campbells in Orange and Culpeper counties. The Campbells were numerous in the Revolutionary war period.

The father of Doctor Campbell was also born at Cliff Top in Fayette county, while his mother was born at Pickway in Monroe county. Anthony Campbell was a farmer. He was a Union soldier at the time of the Civil war. He and two comrades were captured by some Bushwhackers. Watching his chance as his captors lay asleep he made his escape, reached the home of Bob Scotts at Crow, near Beckley, and after explaining his identity of a Union soldier and his affliction from rheumatism, he was taken in and cared for and was kept in hiding whenever the Southerners came around looking for him. He finally reached home, and had to stay in bed with rheumatism for six months. He was a man given to adventure and had been one of the California forty-niners in search of gold, going out to the coast when only seventeen. At one time he left West Virginia and went out to Decatur, Illinois, where he took up a land claim, but fell sick with the chills and fever and soon returned to West Virginia. Both he and his wife are now deceased.

James A. Campbell after completing his common school education went out to Concordia, Kansas, where an older married sister lived, and while living with her he worked and paid his way while getting a high school course. Later he entered the University of Louisville Medical School, where he graduated M. D. in 1894. Immediately after qualifying for his profession he located at Beckley, and has long stood in the front rank of physicians and surgeons of Raleigh county. Doctor Campbell since the early years of his practice has been taking time to attend medical conventions and clinics and schools of medicine. He returned to Louisville in 1899, took a course in the New York Polytechnic in 1906, took special work under Job Prices at Philadelphia in 1908 and also under J. B. Beavers in the same city in that year. He was a student in the Johns Hopkins University in 1920, attended clinics of the Mayo Brothers at Rochester, Minnesota, in 1921, and of Doctor Ochsner at Chicago in the same year, and also the Crile Clinic at Cleveland. In his post-graduate work he has largely specialized in diseases of women and abdominal surgery.

February 14, 1910, Doctor Campbell organized and began the building at Beckley of the Campbell Hospital. He also built what was known as Hospital No. 2, both of which were burned in a fire that nearly destroyed the town. He is now financially and professionally interested in the Kings Daughters Hospital, which when completed will rank as one of the very finest hospitals in the state in point of equipment. It contains seventy-six rooms.

Doctor Campbell is president of the County Board of Health in Raleigh county, and during the war was a member of the Examining Board. He served in 1920-21 as mayor of Beckley, and when he retired from office January 1, 1922, it was conceded that he had given the city the best administration the community had ever had. Doctor Campbell is not in politics, but his heart and soul are in any community undertaking. He is a member of the Episcopal Church, belongs to the County and State Medical societies, the Southern and American Medical associations, and is a Royal Arch and Knight Templar Mason and Shriner.

October 12, 1906, at Beckley, Doctor Campbell married Hallie Mae Payne, daughter of Charles Henry and Kizzie (Lindsay) Payne, of Newport News, Virginia. Her father was a farmer and stock man. Doctor and Mrs. Campbell have a son, James A., Jr., born in 1911.

WILLIAM PALLISTER HUBBARD. The recent death of Hon. William P. Hubbard of Wheeling makes appropriate a review not only of his notable career but of his father and grandfather. These citizens, constituting three generations, afforded a splendid succession of abilities and services that are linked with the fundamental history of Wheeling and in many respects with the history of West Virginia as a whole.

Dana Hubbard, the pioneer settler of Wheeling, came of a long line of sturdy New Englanders, a descendant in the sixth generation from William Hubbard, who arrived in Plymouth, Massachusetts, in 1630, and for six years was a member of the General Court of the Colony. His son William was one of the early graduates of Harvard College and a minister and historian. The next three generations were represented by John Hubbard, Rev. John Hubbard, of Connecticut, and Maj. Gen. John Hubbard. Dana Hubbard, son of General Hubbard, moved with his family from Connecticut in 1815 to Pittsburgh. In 1819 he came with his family down the river in a flatboat, and the family remained on the boat while he was building a log cabin at Wheeling. From that time forward an important share of Wheeling's industrial enterprise originated in the impulse and management of Dana Hubbard. He built in 1827 the first saw mill and the first grist mill at Wheeling, and later set up the first steam saw mill in Western Virginia. Dana Hubbard lived for some years on a farm in Ohio county. He died October 16, 1852. His wife, Asenath Dorman, died April 23, 1878.

His oldest son, Chester Dorman Hubbard, was not only a leader in the industrial and financial affairs of Wheeling but exercised a great influence in the formative shaping and development of the new state of West Virginia. He was born in Connecticut, November 25, 1814, acquired his early education at Wheeling, worked around his father's mills and later entered Wesleyan University at Middletown, Connecticut, where he graduated valedictorian of his class in 1840. He soon returned to Wheeling to assist his father in business, and continued the management of the lumber mills and related industries until 1852. In that year he and others established the Bank of Wheeling, of which he became president, and later for many years, until his death, he was president of the German Bank of Wheeling. His was one of the most important influences in making and developing Wheeling as an important center of the iron and steel industry. C. D. Hubbard & Company in 1859 leased the Crescent Iron Mills, and later he was an organizer of the Wheeling Tin Company and for twenty years was secretary of the Wheeling Iron & Nail Company. He was among the promoters and builders of the Pittsburgh,

A brief statement of his public record is all that is necessary to indicate the great influence he exercised for many years. He was elected and served as a member of the Virginia House of Delegates in 1852-53. He was a member of the State Convention of 1861 and strenuously opposed the ordinance of secession. At the beginning of the war he promoted the organization of military companies for home defense and these companies proved the nucleus of some of the first Union regiments raised in Western Virginia. He was a member of the Wheeling Convention of May 13th, and also the convention of June 11, 1861. He was a member of the first State Senate of the new state, and subsequently represented the First District in Thirty-ninth and Fortieth congresses. Chester D. Hubbard was for many years a trustee of Linsly Institute at Wheeling and also one of the founders in 1848 of the Wheeling Female Seminary and later president of the trustees of the Wheeling Female Seminary and later president of the trustees of the Wheeling Female College.

Chester D. Hubbard died August 23, 1891. September 29, 1842, he married Miss Sarah Pallister, who was born in England in 1820 and was brought to the United States when a child. Chester D. Hubbard and wife had five children: William Pallister, Dana List, Chester Russell, Julia A., who became the wife of W. H. Tyler, and Anna G., who married Joseph C. Brady.

The late William Pallister Hubbard, though he chose the profession of law rather than banking or industry, had the broad and comprehensive spirit of the man of affairs which distinguished his father. He was born at Wheeling December 24, 1843, and was granted seventy-eight years in which to achieve his destiny and service, passing away December 5, 1921. He was educated in the public schools of Wheeling, in Linsly Institute, in his father's alma mater, Wesleyan University, Middletown, Connecticut, where he graduated A. B. in 1863. In 1866 Wesleyan conferred upon him the Master of Arts degree. Following his college career he read law at Wheeling, was admitted to the bar, and during the closing months of the Civil war served as a lieutenant in the Third West Virginia Cavalry. He was in active practice as a lawyer at Wheeling for nearly forty years. From 1865 to 1870 he was clerk of the House of Delegates, served as a member of the House of Delegates in 1881-82, was chairman of the commission to revise the text laws of the state in 1901-03, and in 1906 was elected by the First West Virginia District to Congress and served two terms, retiring in March, 1911. He was a delegate to the National Republican Convention in 1888 and in the same year on the state ticket for attorney general. In 1912 he was a delegate to the National Convention, and proved a strenuous supporter of Roosevelt in that campaign. Mr. Hubbard had put his business affairs in order a number of years before his death, and that left him leisure, with the blessing of good health, to attend to many public and charitable interests. He was a leader in the Liberty Loan and Red Cross campaigns during the World war. He and his brother Chester Hubbard donated a valuable tract of ground in South Wheeling to be used for playground purposes.

May 21, 1868, Mr. Hubbard married Miss Anna E. Chamberlin of Louisiana. He survived her about twenty years. The children born to their marriage were: Julia P. now deceased, who was the wife of William I. Kelly; Nelson C., his father's successor as a member of the Wheeling bar; Miss Alma R., Louise P., Mrs. W. E. Hudson, of Staunton, Virginia; and Sarah P., who died in infancy.

It is men most prominent in the affairs of Wheeling over a long period of years who can best appreciate and value the character and services of the late Mr. Hubbard. As a lawyer his portrait is presented in resolutions by the Ohio County Bar Association in the following words: "He was a lawyer in the broadest sense, and above that a law giver. Whether in the making of laws or giving them the proper interpretations, the ground whereon he stood, to him was holy ground. He was a statesman; recognized as a leader among statesmen; easily chief in West Virginia; called before the Cabinet, and advised with President Roosevelt. In the practice of the law he walked with those whose final declaration was the law, and he walked their equal—often their counsellor. In all his varied activities—local, state, and national—he was a leader among men, public spirited and generous, always for the right, because above all he was an honest man."

But for the tribute that passes current without depreciation on account of its source, and because the writer spoke with discrimination derived from intimate knowledge, the best that can be appended as a final estimate on the life and character of the late Mr. Hubbard was the editorial in the Wheeling Intelligencer, quoted herewith:

"Death at any time brings a shock to loved ones and to friends, but death that comes in the fullness of years to one who has finished his work well; who has lived a useful and honorable life; who has enjoyed the priceless privilege of seeing his children grow up around him in strength and honor, comes not as a tragedy, but as the seal upon a finished work, a crown of glory.

"Such was the death of Hon. William Pallister Hubbard, who passed away at his home near Elm Grove yesterday morning.

"Mr. Hubbard was born in Wheeling and lived far more than the allotted years of three score and ten in this community. It would have been difficult to find in our citizenship a man whose personality through so many years had been so closely associated with the public, the civic and the industrial development of Wheeling and its immediate section. The name of Hubbard is stamped upon our public places. The imprint of his life will long be felt in numberless organizations and activities having to do with the industry and the business conditions and the social and civic life of this community.

"William P. Hubbard was more than a citizen of Wheeling. He was a citizen of West Virginia and of the American Republic. More than that he was a world citizen, and through the long years of his useful activities he gave many and varied evidences of his profound interest in all things that made for the welfare of humanity. In short space it is impossible to sum up and to estimate the value of Mr. Hubbard's contribution to his city, his state, and his nation. When that contribution is rightly valued it will be found to be splendid not to say monumental.

"Mr. Hubbard's most important public work was undoubtedly in the commission created by the State of West Virginia in 1903 for the purpose of studying the tax laws then existent in the state, and suggesting reforms thereto. Mr. Hubbard took his duty most seriously, and the report of the commission finally made was largely the product of his brain and his hand. Later, in a most memorable campaign of public education, Mr. Hubbard by his writing and his speaking largely effected a change in the public mind in the matter of taxation, which has since been reflected in most of the tax legislation in West Virginia. The power of the influences set in motion at that time is still felt in this state today. Later, as a member of Congress and in private life, as a profound student of public question, Mr. Hubbard took a prominent part in shaping the policy and influencing the thought of the citizenship of this state.

"Admitted to the bar in his early youth, he soon took a leading place as a practitioner, and in the course of time came to be regarded as easily the first lawyer in West Virginia. His grasp of difficult questions and his profound knowledge underlying the principles of law commanded the admiration and wonder of the members of his own profession who were associated with him, and at the time of his voluntary retirement from active practice it is fair to say that he had no superiors and few, if any, equals in the general practice of the law, not only in this state but even in the country at large.

"During recent years Mr. Hubbard had voluntarily refrained from much active employment, preferring to devote himself to his books, to the study of literature and history and to the intimate association of a few warm friends. Nevertheless, he was fortunate in continuing to enjoy good health, and his mind was so broad and so liberal that all good causes appealed to him and found in him sympathetic support. The charities and the public institutions of this community shared liberally his bounty and the civic emotions of the city and the state commanded his thoughtful attention. It is hard to realize that one so full of strength and vigor only a few days ago could so easily be slipped away, but death undoubtedly came to him as he would have willed it himself."

CHARLES E. WARD. With one exception the largest and most important manufacturing industry at Charleston is the Charles Ward Engineering Works. Their distinctive output has been water tube boiling, triple expansion marine engines and shallow draft river steamers, and in the field of entire equipment for river crafts this company is probably supreme.

The founder of the business, Charles Ward, was an inventor and an expert in every line of steam machinery. He was a member of the American Society of Naval Engineers, the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He was born in 1841 at Southam, near Leanington, England. He grew up there, and until he was twenty-two years of age he was employed by a local gas company, learning all the details of gas manufacture. Subsequently he was connected with the Liverpool Gas Company and was made manager of the Large Metal Works in Liverpool.

In 1866 he married, and four years later he came to Cincinnati. In 1871 his services as an engineer were secured during the construction of the Charleston Gas Plant. He was made superintendent of the new plant, and continued that responsibility until 1880. In 1878 Charles Ward demonstrated the value of the Ward boiler on steam packet boats on the Kanawha River. He bought the Katydid, substituted his own boiler and made other needed improvements, and since these early demonstrations the Ward boilers have proved a marked superiority over all others designed for use on steamboats.

The Charles Ward Engineering Works is incorporated, with Charles Ward, treasurer; Charles E. Ward, president and general manager; Harold M. Ward, vice president, and William Keely, secretary. Charles Ward married in 1866, at Liverpool, Margaret G. MacKrell, a native of Halifax. Their two sons are Charles E. and Harold M., and they have a daughter, Mrs. Clifford Ramsden. The Ward family are Presbyterians. Charles Ward is a Knight Templar Mason and a member of the New York Yacht Club.

WILLIAM B. POINDEXTER. Among the younger generation of business men who have come rapidly to the front in the coal industry during recent years, few have made the advancement that has been achieved by William B. Poindexter, vice president of the American Export & Inland Coal Corporation, and West Virginia representative of this concern. With the exception of the time that he was serving a soldier during the World war, his entire career has been passed in connection with the coal industry, his advancement in which has come as a result of his own abilities and efforts.

Mr. Poindexter is a native of the Old Dominion State, born at Ridgeway, Virginia, January 13, 1894, a son of Alexander B. and Sally Carnelia (Perry) Poindexter. Alexander B. Poindexter was born in Yadkin County, North Carolina, March 15, 1861, but has spent practically his entire life in Henry County, Virginia, in his younger years he was a mechanical engineer, but later turned his attention to other activities. A democrat in politics, he is prominent and influential in civic affairs, and held many city offices for years. He is a member of the Christian Church, and as a fraternalist is affiliated with the Masons. Mr. Poindexter married Miss Sally Carnelia Perry, who was born at Farmington, Davie County, North Carolina, and died at Ridgeway, in 1896, William B. Poindexter being the only child of this union. Mr. Poindexter later married Lelia Cahill, who was born in Henry County, Virginia, a daughter of Marshall Cahill, who spent his life in agricultural pursuits in Henry County, where his death occurred. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Poindexter; James F., of the Gay Coal & Coke Co., Logan, West Virginia; Dora Marshall and Nellie Eldridge, twins, who are students of the Ridgeway High School.

William B. Poindexter, was educated in different schools where he finished in 1912, and in the next year began his connection with the coal industry, when he first secured a position with the U. S. Coal & Oil Co., with which concern he remained for several months. On leaving the U. S. Coal & Oil Co., he entered the employ of the Gay Coal & Coke Co., of Logan West Virginia, and for several years was thus employed when the United States entered the World war. In April, 1917, he enlisted in the United States Army and was sent to the Officers Training Camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, where he received his second lieutenant's commission in August 1917, and was assigned to the American Expeditionary Forces. He arrived in France in September 1917. The early part of his career was with the French Forces, in the vicinity of Belfort, France. Later after some American units began to arrive he was assigned to them as instructor in trench warfare, taking part in five major operations in which the American army participated. In May, 1918, Mr. Poindexter was promoted to first lieutenant and in September of the same year to captain. During Christmas of 1918, after the Armistice was signed, he was assigned to the Fourth Section of the General Staff with headquarters at Chaumont, France. On March 1, 1919, he was detailed as an American General Staff representative with the French Ministry of War at Paris to co-operate with the French war department on demobilization and transportation of the American Army to the base sections of France for return to the United States. During this time he received several citations of great value. He returned to the United States in December, 1919, and was mustered out of the service at Washington, D. C.

On January 1, 1920, Mr. Poindexter accepted a position in the purchasing department of the Chesapeake & Virginian Coal Co., of Lynchburg, Virginia, his headquarters however, being at Huntington, West Virginia, which has been his place of residence ever since. From this position he transferred his services to the purchasing department of the American Export & Inland Coal Corporation, of West Virginia, general offices of which company are located at Cincinnati, Ohio. Mr. Poindexter is now vice president and West Virginia representative of this company, which handles upward of a million tons of unequalled West Virginia and Kentucky coals annually. He is likewise vice president of the Island Creek Monitor Coal Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio, and the Clear Creek Coal Co., with mines in Floyd County, Kentucky. He is a democrat in political allegiance, and a thirty second degree Mason, belonging to Aracoma Lodge, No. 99, A. F. & A. M., Logan, West Virginia; Kanawha Commandery No. 4, Charleston, West Virginia; West Virginia Consistory No. 1, of Wheeling and to Beni-Kedam Temple, A. A. O. N. M. Shrine, Charleston. He also belongs to the Guyan Country Club of Huntington. Mr. Poindexter is unmarried.

H. GLENVILLE TONKIN, M. D. While one of the valued and proficient doctors of Martinsburg, Doctor Tonkin is also well known for his service as mayor of that city, and has played a spirited part in the community life there for a number of years.

He is a native of Concord, New Hampshire. Both his father, H. Glenville Tonkin, Sr., and his grandfather, William Tonkin, were born in Cornwall, England, and the latter was of pure English ancestry, the line running back in authentic record to the time of William the Conqueror. William Tonkin served his apprenticeship as a machinist, and a number of years later brought his family to America and located at Concord, New Hampshire, where he became identified with the stone quarry industry as tool maker and tool dresser of the tools particularly required in the quarries. He died there at the age of seventy-three. His wife was Mary Reynolds, a native of Cornwall, who died at the age of sixty-eight. They reared four children, named John, Glenville, Mary and Lucy.

H. Glenville Tonkin, Sr., was reared and educated in Cornwall, serving his apprenticeship as a machinist there, and, coming to America with his parents, also located at Concord and followed his trade in the quarry industries. He died at the age of forty-three. The maiden name of his wife was Christina Peterson, a native of Sweden, who came when a young woman to the United States with a sister. She died at the age of thirty-three, leaving three children, named Alice M., H. Glenville and Alfred.

Doctor Tonkin acquired his early education in the public school of Concord, New Hampshire, graduated from high school, also attended the New Hampshire Institute, and as a youth he earned a wide reputation as a baseball player. For several years he played professional ball in New England, Western and American Leagues. In the meantime he was working toward a professional career, and in 1908 graduated from the medical department of the University of Maryland, and at once settled at Martinsburg to begin practice, where he has enjoyed an exceptional professional business for the past fifteen years. During the World War in 1918 he was commissioned a captain in the Medical Corps and was stationed for duty at Hospital No. 23, Hot Springs, North Carolina.

In 1912 Doctor Tonkin married Miss Mary Licklider, a native of Martinsburg and daughter of Thomas and Amelia Licklider. Doctor Tonkin cast his first presidential vote for Theodore Roosevelt. He was elected mayor of Martinsburg in 1918. His administration of two years was characterized by much progressiveness in the matter of public improvement, and a large amount of sewer construction was done, the filtration plant was completed, and street paving inaugurated. In May, 1922, he was re-elected mayor by a handsome majority. Doctor Tonkin is affiliated with Robert White Lodge, No. 67 A. F. and A. M., Lebanon Chapter No. 2, R. A. M., Palestine Commandery No. 2, K. T., and Almar Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Washington. He is also a member of the Tri County Medical Society, the West Virginia Medical Society, the Southern Medical Society and the American Medical Association.

JAMES SPICER HUMPHREYS, whose only son and child, Albert J. Humphreys, is a prominent Charleston banker and business man, achieved success in business but was even more widely known for his fine character and the great influence he exercised for good among people of his own age and younger people in particular.

James Spicer Humphreys, who died at his home in Charleston July 10, 1912, at the age of nearly eighty-two, was born December 3, 1830, in the Shenandoah Valley, near Charlottesville in Albemarle County, Virginia. His father was also named James Spicer Humphreys and was a Virginia planter. The Humphreys are a long lived family, and while James Spicer Humphreys died at the age of eighty-two, his brothers and sister who preceded him in death all lived to a good old age. His brothers and sister were: Ira; A. Humphreys, who was the father of Col. A. E. Humphreys of Denver, Colorado; Jacob; Joseph; William; and Mrs. Marian Jones, of Kanawha County.

James Spicer Humphreys as a young man moved to West Virginia, locating at Sissonville, Kanawha County. He was a carpenter and building contractor and later a merchant, and for many years conducted a successful business at Sissonville. About twenty years before his death he retired and moved to Charleston, building one of the beautiful homes of the city, at Delaware Avenue and Fayette Street.

James S. Humphreys married Cynthia Martin, daughter of Dow C. Martin, a prominent old time resident of Kanawha County. James S. Humphreys and wife were lovers all their lives and were singularly devoted to each other's welfare and interests.

The late Mr. Humphrey's personality and principles, that seemed a part of him, compelled everybody's friendship and esteem who met him, and to know him was to love him. He was manly, sympathetic, of profound religious faith, and acted in daily life on the principle of the Golden Rule. He loved to encourage young people to do their best and act their best, and while he was a teacher in the true sense he was never a preacher at people. He always believed in putting oneself in another's place when the other person was an object of criticism.

It is appropriate to quote here a special tribute of esteem: "As a teacher—or rather an inspirer of young men in all that is best and highest in manhood, Mr. Humphreys was unique and certainly has won a place on the honor roll of West Virginia's sons by reason of his strong, well rounded, sympathetic character and life long devotion to the great ideals of the Christian religion—in the practical way he carried them out in his daily life. He stamped his impress on the manhood of the State."

He lived simply, was regular and temperate in all his habits, and that no doubt contributed to his long life. He not only lived clean and moral himself, but inspired others to emulate him. It was said that he had a host of friends and not a single enemy. Of a retiring disposition, he did not seek a multitude of friends, but naturally all who came in contact with him were attracted by his fine qualities. Only his intimate friends knew his deepest and finest traits of character. He liked to discuss with those intimates the deepest or highest topics that fire and touch the soul and inspire the reason—faith, religion, God, immortality were to him actual things and not names merely.

ALBERT J. HUMPHREYS is a well known West Virginia banker, being vice president and managing director of the Elk Banking Company of Charleston. He represents a family of prominent connections with financial and industrial affairs in this state and elsewhere. His cousin, Col. A. E. Humphreys, now of Denver, Colorado, is one of the famous mining and oil operators of the West and Southwest.

Albert J. Humphreys was born at Sissonville, Kanawha County, West Virginia, January 9, 1863, son of James Spicer and Cynthia (Martin) Humphreys. This branch of the Humphreys family came from old Virginia, and has been in West Virginia for several generations. James Spicer Humphreys was born near Charlottesville, Virginia, and as a young man located at Sissonville in Kanawha County, where he was a carpenter and later had an extensive business as a building contractor and finally was a merchant. He died at Charleston July 10, 1912. He was a democrat and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Albert J. Humphreys was educated in the public schools, in the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, and during his early years was associated with his father in the contracting business and merchandising. In 1887 he removed to Charleston, where he entered business and where he was joined by his father several years later. He continued his interests as a merchant until the growing importance of his banking enterprise called for all his time and energies.

Now one of the financial bulwarks of Charleston, the Elk Banking Company had a singularly modest beginning. In 1902 Mr. Humphreys and Harrison B. Smith organized and started a small bank on the west side, their banking quarters being window space in a department store. The company has steadily grown in resources and patronage, and for a number of years the Elk Banking Company has occupied large and handsome quarters at Charleston Street and Tennessee Avenue. From the first Mr. Humphreys has been in close touch with every department of the bank, as vice president and managing director.

He has done much disinterested and unselfish work as a citizen. When Charleston adopted the commission form of government he was appointed one of the first three commissioners, and continued in that post for three years. He is a member of the Board of Education of the Charleston Independent School District, and was formerly vice president of the City Board of Affairs and for two terms member of the City Council. He is a democrat in politics, affiliated with the Knights of Pythias, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Elks, the D. O. K. K. and other orders and clubs, and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Mr. Humphreys married Miss Gertrude Harless, a native of Charleston, and daughter of Judge Leroy Harless, a prominent citizen of Charleston, who died October 5, 1911.

COLONEL JOHN STUART was the most famous pioneer of Greenbrier County, the founder of a family of conspicuous citizenship there, and his descendants are still represented in that section of the state.

His father, David Stuart, was born in Scotland, a connection of the House of Stuarts, and participants in the movement to place Charles Edward Stuart on the English throne, a movement that culminated in failure at the battle of Culloden in 1746. David Stuart came to America soon after that battle, settling on the Shenandoah River in August county, Virginia. He was a personal friend of Governor Robert Dinwiddie, who appointed him in 1755 county lieutenant of Augusta County, with the rank of colonel. He was well qualified to serve this important office. David Stuart died in 1767, having been drowned while crossing a branch of the Shenandoah River. His wife was Margaret Lynn Paul, widow of John Paul, a granddaughter of the Laird of Loch Lynn, Scotland, a niece of Margaret Lynn, wife of Col. John Lewis and the mother of General Andrew and Col. Charles Lewis, heroes of the Battle of Point Pleasant.

Col. John Stuart was the only son of David and Margaret Lynn Stuart, and was born at Hebron in Augusta County, March 17, 1749. He exhibited at an early age extraordinary vigor both in body and mind. By the time he was seventeen years of age he was said to have acquired an excellent education both from books and the affairs of life. While young he participated in a number of surveying and prospecting expeditions to the west and north of the then permanent settlements in August County, which brought him into contact with men of various classes and character. On these expeditions he saw much of Indian life.

All of the attempted settlements in Greenbrier having failed prior to that time, in the year 1769 an expedition was organized by citizens of Augusta and adjoining counties, having for its purpose a permanent settlement in that beautiful and inviting country afterwards called Greenbrier County. Of this company John Stuart, then only twenty years of age, was a member. These pioneers came to Greenbrier in the spring of 1769. After arriving in this wild country the settlers found it necessary to organize for definite course of action, on account of developments to be made in their new home, for protection against the Indians and the many dangers by which they were surrounded. John Stuart was chosen their chief adviser and first officer.

He first located near where the town of Frankford now stands, where he built his first home, overlooking a beautiful view towards the east. This place he called "Grunble Thorp." Here he erected the first mill built in Greenbrier, which was propelled by a subterranean stream of considerable volume flowing through a channel cut out by the Indians, to which they had access through the mouth of a large cave. The dam, a large part of which is still standing, was built of stone, and located about 200 feet from the entrance to the cave. The mill itself stood just outside of the mouth of the cave.

He soon moved from his first residence to what is now known as the "Old Stuart Place," about four miles below Lewisburg on the Fort Spring road. Here he first erected a log house, in which he lived until the year 1789, when he built a large stone house of the old English style, which is now the oldest house in the country. This building is still in a state of good preservation and is at this time the residence of his great-grandson, Samuel Lewis Price. Here John Stuart lived for many years, leading an active, busy life, engaged in various occupations and acting for the settlers as adviser and chief defender against the Indians.

Within a quarter of a mile from the place where the stone house was afterwards built there was erected what was first known as "Fort Stuart" and afterwards called "Fort Spring," at the spot where the old Fort Spring Church now stands, which was placed under the command and supervision of Colonel Stuart. At the time this fort was built a large number of settlers of Greenbrier County lived near, and it was used as a refuge during several Indian attacks, of which no mention is made in history.

Colonel John Stuart commanded one of the companies from Greenbrier County in the expedition commanded by General Andrew Lewis at the battle of Point Pleasant in 1774. After that battle, on account of the heavy loss of officers, he was put in command of a large portion of the army. The last of the desperate attacks made by the Indians upon the settlers of Greenbrier occurred in 1778, when a band of Indians crossed over from beyond the Ohio River, surprised and surrounded the settlers of Fort Donally, in what is now known as Radius Valley. The fort was located about eight miles northwest of Ft. Union, where Lewisburg now stands. Colonel Stuart led the enforcement from Ft. Union, raised the siege and drove the Indians off. Within a few days after this attack he was able to raise a sufficient force to drive and frighten the Indians out of the country.

Colonel John Stuart was appointed clerk of the County of Greenbrier, which was organized in 1776. He was appointed in 1780. He was a member of the Virginia Constitutional Convention of 1788, and was a strong advocate for the ratification of the Federal constitution. He was appointed colonel of the Seventy-ninth Regiment of Militia in 1793. He and his wife, Agatha, were large contributors for the building of the old stone church at Lewisburg in 1796. Col. John Stuart possessed a large library for a pioneer, was a man of splendid literary attainments and a finished scholar, was a member of the American Philosophical Society in Philadelphia, and in 1797 he wrote "Memoirs of Indian Wars and other Occurrences," which remained in manuscript until published in 1833 by the Virginia Historical Society. This is one of the important sources of history for everything connected with the early settlement of the Greenbrier. He also left another historical work, entitled "A Narrative," also descriptive of conditions in Greenbrier and the great Kanawha Valley. Colonel Stuart possessed great executive and financial ability, and amassed a large fortune for his time. Some of the lands he acquired are still owned by his descendants. He resigned his post as clerk of the County Court December 22, 1807. The first clerk's office was built by him in his own yard, and that building is still standing. He also gave the site upon which the first Court House was erected. Col. John Stuart died August 18, 1823, in his seventy-fifth year.

November 18, 1776, he married Mrs. Agatha Frogg, widow of Col. William Frogg, who was killed at the battle of Point Pleasant. She was a granddaughter of Col. John Lewis, and a daughter of Thomas Lewis, who was a brother of General Andrew and Col. Charles Lewis. The four children of Col. John Stuart and wife were: Margaret Lynn, born December 31, 1777, and married Andrew Lewis; Jane Lewis Stuart, born February 16, 1780, married Robert Crockett; Charles Augustus Stuart, born April 23, 1782, married Elizabeth Robinson; and Lewis Stuart, born May 14, 1784.

Lewis Stuart, second son of Col. John Stuart, succeeded to the possession of the old Stuart home place, and lived there all his life. He served as clerk of the County Court as successor to his father from September 22, 1807, until June 1, 1830. He was commissioned the first clerk of the Superior Court of Law and Chancery of Greenbrier County, April 17, 1809, and held that office until 1831. Aside from his official duties he maintained a generous home, was fond of good horses, had a genius for friendship and is said to have been one of the best loved men in the whole Greenbrier country.

October 15, 1807, he married Sarah Lewis, daughter of Col. John Lewis, of Bath County, and granddaughter of Col. Charles Lewis, who was killed at Point Pleasant. To their marriage were born five sons and five daughters: John, born July 26, 1814, Charles A., born June 5, 1818, Lewis, born September 7, 1820, all of whom went West where John died February 19, 1838, Charles, July 4, 1888, and Lewis, December 19, 1860. Henry Stuart born October 31, 1824, lived on a farm at Richlands Greenbrier County, and died September 5, 1902. He married, July 12, 1871, Nannie Watkins. Andrew Stuart born March 12, 1827, lived at the old Stuart place near Fort Spring Church, and died in 1892. He married Sallie Cabell. Elizabeth Stuart, born January 13, 1809, died August 9, 1819. Rachel Stuart, born May 30, 1816, became the wife of A. W. G. Davis, and they lived near Fort Spring Station. Agnes Stuart, born September 2, 1812, died January 15, 1899. She married Charles S. Peyton, and they lived at Richlands. Margaret Stuart, born September 15, 1822, and died in 1903, married Col. James W. Davis, and they lived on a farm half a mile below the old Stuart place. Jane Stuart, born September 17, 1810, was married February 6, 1837, to Governor Samuel Price. She was woman of remarkable intellect and great personal charm. She died August 14, 1873.

After Lewis Stuart's death Beau Desert and the large estate connected with it remained in the possession and under the management of his widow, Sarah Lewis Stuart, until after her death, which occurred March 5, 1853. She was born in February, 1790. She was a famous beauty, and until her death was noted for her striking personal appearance. She was fond of the social side of life, and maintained as a widow the hospitality which had characterized the home during the life of her husband. She was also a woman of remarkable strength of character, of a cultivated, forceful and vigorous mind, and she displayed remarkable executive ability in the management of the estate.

GOVERNOR SAMUEL PRICE, of Lewisburg, one of the distinguished men of his generation in the two Virginias, was lieutenant governor of Virginia during the war between the states.

He was born July 28, 1805, in Fauquier County, Virginia, on the maternal side being a descendant of a prominent Revolutionary officer, Major Morris of New Jersey. His mother was Mary Clymann. His father, Samuel Price, moved from New Jersey to Fauquier County with his parents, and in 1815 he established a home in Preston County, in what is now West Virginia. Governor Samuel Price was reared in Preston County, acquired his primary education in old Virginia, and studied law with Judge Hason at Paris, Kentucky. He returned to Virginia and took the census of Nicholas County in 1830, in 1831 was elected clerk of court for that county in 1832 was admitted to the bar at Summersville. He was elected prosecuting attorney in 1833, was chosen for the Legislature in 1834 and re-elected for two succeeding years. While in the Legislature he introduced an important bill providing for the building of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway. In 1836 he moved to Wheeling, but subsequently established his home in Greenbrier County. At that time the sessions of the Federal District Court, the Supreme Court of Appeals, the Circuit and County Courts were held at Lewisburg, one of the most important judicial centers of the Virginias. In the intensely competitive field of this court town, where some of the greatest lawyers of the time gathered, he held his own and was regarded as the peer of any who practiced there.

Vice President Henry Wilson estimated Samuel Price as "the best land lawyer in the two Virginias." In 1847 he was elected representative from Greenbrier County, and was in the Legislature four years. He was a member of the Virginia Constitutional Convention of 1850-51 and again in 1860-61. He opposed secession, but sided with his state when it went into the Confederacy. He was elected lieutenant governor of Virginia, and held that office until the close of the war. In 1865 he was elected circuit judge, but declined to qualify.

Governor Price was a member of the Constitutional Convention of West Virginia in 1872, and was chosen president of the convention. His last important public service was his appointment to the United States Senate, following the death of Allen T. Caperton. He served in that body from December 4, 1876, to January 31, 1877.

On February 6, 1837, Governor Samuel Price married Jane Stuart, daughter of Lewis Stuart and granddaughter of Col. John Stuart of Greenbrier County. A brief account of the distinguished Stuart family of old Greenbrier is contained in another article. Governor and Mrs. Stuart had nine children, three of whom died young. Mary married J. C. Alderson. Margaret Lynn is deceased. John S. married Susan McEllenney, and died about twenty-five years ago, his surviving daughter being the wife of John C. Dice. Sallie Lewis became the wife of John A. Preston, and is survived by two sons, who are individually mentioned elsewhere in this publication. The fifth of the children is Samuel Lewis Price. Jennie Stuart Price lives at Lewisburg.

Samuel Lewis Price was born July 10, 1850, was reared at Lewisburg, attended private schools, and in 1860 went to Kansas. He taught school in Doniphan County and for a time farmed there, but sold his interests and after a year returned to Lewisburg. His life for a half a century has been largely devoted to farming and stock raising, and he is also interested in coal properties in the state. His home is the oldest house in Greenbrier County, the large stone house erected by his great-grandfather Col. John Stuart, in 1789. On the same property is another stone building, now used as an office and which, as stated elsewhere, was the first office of the clerk of Greenbrier County.

October 23, 1878, Samuel Lewis Price married Mary A. McCue, of Augusta County, Virginia. Seven children were born to their marriage: Elizabeth W.; Samuel, a lawyer at Lewisburg; Jane Stuart; Sallie Lewis, wife of Prof. W. W. Wood, of Davidson, North Carolina; Edward Clayton, who died while nearly qualified to graduate at the University of Virginia; Mary McCue, a graduate of Columbia University, who served as a nurse during the World war; and Thomas Lewis, of Lewisburg. Samuel L. Price is an elder in the Presbyterian Church and an active member of the Masonic fraternity.

CHARLES TARNAY, president of the Tarnay Collieries Company, the mines of which are situated on Sulphur Creek, near Matewan, Mingo County, maintains his residence and executive headquarters in the City of Matewan.

Mr. Tarnay was born in Hungary, on the 15th of March, 1878, and is a son of Charles and Helen Tarnay, his father having been a man of wealth and influence in his native land, which is now suffering direly from the effects of the great World War. The subject of this review was for two years a student in the University of Budapest, and thereafter continued his studies for a similar period in the University of Berlin, where he studied law. At the age of seventeen years he came to the United States, and from New York City he came forthwith to the West Virginia coal fields. He found employment in the coal mines on Cabin Creek, and took pride in thus numbering himself among the world's productive workers. He has been employed in various capacities and at many different places in connection with the coal mining industry in West Virginia, and also in mines in Pike County, Kentucky. His ambition caused him to continue his reading and study, and in 1912-13 he attended George Washington University, Washington, D. C., where he specialized in chemistry and engineering. In 1914 he was employed as chemist in the Cabin Creek coal district, and he next became superintendent for the Bessemer Coal & Coke Company at Bessemer, Pennsylvania, where he remained four years. He then became an independent operator in the Pennsylvania coal fields, and the negative success of his enterprise was so pronounced that he lost all of the money which he had previously accumulated. Under these depressing conditions he bravely faced the problems that confronted him, and took the position of track man in the Pond Creek District of Kentucky.

In February, 1920, Mr. Tarnay started a wagon mine at Nangatuck, Mingo County, West Virginia, notwithstanding the fact that he was in debt to the amount of $400 and had in his possession only thirty-five cents. His energy and ability have since combined to gain for him increassuccess, and he is now a substantial figure in connection with coal production. He organized the Shumate Coal Company at Naugatuck, and is president of the same, and in April, 1921, he organized the Tarnay Collieries Company, of which he is president and general manager, this company having 600 acres of extremely valuable coal land. He is a sterling character and recognized ability of Mr. Tarnay has gained to him the co-operation of some of the best men in the town and most influential coal men of this field, and in 1922, working their mines six days a week, while many other mines of the district are closed down. Mr. Tarnay is a loyal and appreciative American citizen, and in the end of his adoption has won substantial and worthy success. He is a man of superior intellectuality, and as a linguist speaks, reads and writes the Hungarian, German, French and English languages with almost equal facility. In the World War period he was instant in patriotic service, especially in connection with the work of the Red Cross, from the general headquarters of which he received a letter highly commending him for his efficient service which he rendered during American participation in the war. In politics he is a staunch republican, and both he and his life are earnest communicants of the Catholic Church. In linguistic attainments Mrs. Tarnay excels her husband, as she speaks eleven different languages, she having formerly been a successful and popular teacher and having been during one year employed by the Government as an interpreter in the City of Washington.

In 1906 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Tarnay and Miss Mary Kovalik, who likewise is a native of Hungary, and they have three children: Isabel, Helen and Charles, Jr.

MARY VIRGINIA McCUNE, M. D. Proprietor of the Shenandoah Sanitarium at Martinsburg, Doctor McCune has achieved a high rank in the medical profession and is one of the older and one of the foremost representatives of women in this vocation in West Virginia.

He began his education in schools of his native locality in Pennsylvania, attended school in Berkeley County, West Virginia, served an apprenticeship at the machinist's trade, and for a time was an employee of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company. Later he specialized in the finer branches of mechanical work, and for years has been noted as an expert safe and lock and cash register mechanic. Fleming H. Addison ader) Alderson. John D. Alderson was born at Summersville, this county, November 29, 1854, a son of Joseph Alderson and a great-grandson of Col. George Alderson, a pioneer and influential citizen of Monroe County, where town of Alderson was named in his honor, the Alderson family having been founded in Virginia in the Colonial days of our national history. Joseph A. Alderson was a university graduate and was graduated also in a law school. He was long engaged in the practice of law at Summersville, and served as prosecuting attorney of Nicholas County, which then included Webster County. He was a member of the Virginia Senate during the Civil war, one of the principal results of this conflict having been the creation of the new state of West Virginia.

Hon. John Duffy Alderson, whose death occurred at Richwood December 2, 1910, was a mere youth when he became actively identified with political affairs, as a vigorous advocate of the principles of the democratic party. He was pointed a page at the West Virginia Constitutional Convention of 1872, later served as doorkeeper for the state Senate, of which he subsequently became clerk, and as an able lawyer he gave effective service as prosecuting attorney of Nicholas County. In 1888 he received the democratic nomination for representative of the Third Congressional District of West Virginia in the Congress of the United States, to which he was elected and in which, after re-election, he served two consecutive terms. He then resumed the practice of his profession at Summersville, and in connection with public affairs he subsequently served as a member of the House of Delegates of the State Legislature. He was one of the strong, upright, broad-minded citizens of West Virginia, held an inviolable place in popular confidence and esteem and achieved high standing in his profession.

To the public schools of Summersville Capt. Fleming Newman Alderson is indebted for his earlier educational discipline, which was supplemented by his attending St. Vincent's College and the West Virginia University, and in the law department of the latter he was graduated in 1907. On the 8th of October of that year he was admitted to the bar of his native state, and for several years thereafter he was associated in practice with his father, with headquarters at Summersville and with a law business that extended into the courts of counties adjacent to Nicholas County. He finally established an office at Richwood, and in this city he now maintains his residence and professional headquarters, the while his distinct achievement marks him as one of the representative members of the bar of this section of the state. During the legislative session of 1911 Captain Alderson represented Nicholas County in the Lower House of the State Legislature, at which session he had the act passed establishing the Nicholas County High School at Summersville. In 1913 he was appointed assistant United States district attorney for the Southern District of West Virginia, an office of which he continued the incumbent three years. His retirement prior to the expiration of his term of four years resulted from his having been, in 1916, made the democratic nominee for representative of his district in the United States Congress, his defeat being compassed by normal political exigencies. As military aide to Governor Cornwell of West Virginia in connection with the nation's participation in the World war he was appointed chief of the Department of Military Censors and Enrollment, with the rank of captain, and in this important position he gave most loyal and effective service. He and his wife are active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and he is chairman of the Board of Trustees of the church of this denomination in his home city. In the Masonic fraternity Captain Alderson is affiliated with Summersville Lodge No. 76, A. F. and A. M.; Richwood Chapter No. 37, R. A. M.; Sutton Commandery No. 16, Knights Templar; Ben-Kedem Temple of the Mystic Shrine in the City of Charleston; and the Consistory of the Scottish Rite in the City of Wheeling.

On the 8th of June, 1921, was solemnized the marriage of Captain Alderson and Miss Rebecca M. Wigton, of LaGrange, Indiana. Mrs. Alderson graduated from the conservatory of music at Oberlin College, Ohio, and prior to her marriage had been supervisor of music in the public schools of Richwood. She is a popular figure in connection with the representative social and cultural activities of Richwood, and is the gracious chateleine of one of the attractive and hospitable homes of this city.

Captain Alderson is attorney for the First National Bank of Richwood and the Nicholas County Bank at Summersville, besides being similarly retained by a number of important industrial and commercial corporations in this section of the state. He is a stockholder and director of the Nicholas Hardware & Furniture Company at Richwood, and is vice president and secretary of the Tioga Coal Company.

LEWIS H. MILLER, a successful attorney of the Ripley bar, has engaged in many useful activities during his brief lifetime of little more than thirty years. He is a man of exceptional educational attainments, and in former years was a teacher. He also has a record of service in the World war.

Mr. Miller was born at Millwood in Jackson County, November 19, 1890. Remotely the Miller family is of German origin, and the name was established in Pennsylvania in Colonial times. His grandfather, Lewis M. Miller, was born in Pennsylvania in 1812, and settled as a pioneer in what is now Jackson County, West Virginia, and was a farmer near Millwood, where he died in 1889. He married Elizabeth Shinn, a life long resident of what is now Jackson County. Leander Miller was born on the present site of Millwood in 1850, and has lived in that vicinity all his life. Altogether he has taught in the rural and graded schools of the county forty-five years, but in conjunction has also conducted his farm, and though he started farming with limited capital he has developed an extensive estate. In the line of public duty he served as deputy sheriff four years under Sheriff J. O. Shinn and four years under Sheriff I. M. Adams. He is a republican, an active supporter of the Methodist Episcopal Church and is affiliated with Ashton Lodge, F. and A. M., at Ravenswood and the Knights of Pythias. Leander Miller married Jessie B. Harrison, who was born near Point Pleasant in Mason County in 1870. Of their large family Lewis H. is the oldest. Benjamin W., now in the insurance and real estate business at Parkersburg and also a farmer, was a first lieutenant in the 89th Division of the American Expeditionary Forces, spent one year in France, and was on duty in the St. Mihiel campaign. Blanche is the wife of Henry F. Pfost, cashier of the Bank of Ripley, and the other children are: Miss Edith, at home; Kate, wife of Dr. Ray Kessel, a physician and surgeon at Charleston; Miss Luella, a teacher in the public schools at Ripley; Pauline, a student in Ohio University at Athens; John, a student in the Ravenswood High School; Hazel, attending high school at Charleston; and Starling, a pupil in the Ripley public school.

Lewis H. Miller spent his early life on his father's farm, attended rural schools, and at the age of sixteen taught for one year in Cooper District of Mason County. Thereafter he taught school alternately with his advanced work as a student and partly paid the expenses of his liberal education. For one year he attended West Virginia Wesleyan College at Buckhannon, and spent five years in the regular course of Ohio University at Athens, where he graduated in 1913 with the degree of A. B. He was a member of the Sigma Pi college fraternity. On graduating in 1913 he became superintendent of schools at Ripley, remaining there one year and for another year was superintendent of schools at Alderson, a town located in both Greenbrier and Monroe counties.

Mr. Miller graduated LL. B. in 1917 from the West Virginia University Law School, and was admitted to the bar October 2, 1917. He at once began practice at Ripley, but turned over his accumulating interest as a lawyer to enlist in the Aviation Corps of the U. S. Navy on July 1, 1918. The first month he was stationed at Cherry Stone Island Naval Base off Cape Charles, Virginia, was then transferred to Norfolk until October 1, 1918, and was on the U. S. S. Pilgrim, but subsequently transferred to Pelham Bay Park in the Officers Training School and on November 1, 1918, joined the Officers Training School at Princeton University, where he remained until December 22, 1918, when he was relieved from active duty but was held in the Reserve Corps until September, 1921, when he was finally discharged. Since his war service Mr. Miller has been busy with his general law practice at Ripley, being a member of the firm of Miller, Boggess & Bell, with offices on Front Street, a partnership that was formed January 1, 1921.

Mr. Miller is a member of the Jackson County and West Virginia State Bar Associations, is a director and member of the Executive Board of the Bank of Ripley, a member of the Advisory Board of the West Virginia Mortgage and Discount Corporation at Charleston, and has accumulated some valuable property interests. He is a republican, a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and is affiliated with Ripley Lodge No. 16, F. and A. M., Purnell Lodge of Perfection, 14th degree of the Scottish Rite at Parkersburg, O. S. Long Chapter of the Rose Croix at Parkersburg, Athens Lodge No. 109, Knights of Pythias, at Athens, Ohio, and Union Grange No. 90 in Jackson County.

December 23, 1917, at Millwood, Mr. Miller married Miss Freda Rambow, daughter of William H. and Emma (Polsley) Rambow, who still live on their farm near Millwood. Mr. and Mrs. Miller have one daughter, Ruth Lee, born January 6, 1920.

CONCORD NORMAL SCHOOL, NOW CONCORD COLLEGE. In the year 1865, at the close of the Civil war, Mercer County, like many of her sister counties in Virginia and other Southern states was without a Court House, it having been burned with almost the entire town of Princeton, by order of Colonel Jenifer, in 1862. As soon as it was determined to rebuild the Court House the question of relocation began to be agitated by the people in the lower section of the county, who had long been complaining of the injustice to them in the location of the Court House at Princeton.

Through the influence of the "Board of Registration" the question was submitted to a vote of the people, which resulted in the location of the Court House at Concord Church, a little village which had been built around a Methodist Church and a post office, Concord Church. After the Court House had been removed from Princeton to Concord the people of Princeton, now in possession of the registration machinery, became very anxious to obtain it again. Before the Court House was completed another vote was taken, which resulted in re-locating at Princeton. The lower end of the county having been cut off to help form Summers County, there was left no hope of ever regaining the Court House for Concord, the unfinished Court House and jail reverting to the original owner of the land on which they stood. He tendered it to the state on condition that a branch of the State Normal School be established at Concord.

Accordingly, on the 28th day of February, 1872, the Legislature passed "An act to locate a Branch State Normal School at Concord in the County of Mercer." This act required buildings to be fitted and furnished for the convenience of said school, free of charge to the state. Before anything was done toward the completion of the building the owner of the land died, leaving his affairs in such confusion as to render it impossible to procure such a title to the property as the state would accept. The friends of the measure, on the 2nd day of December, 1873, procured the passage of an act authorizing the procurement of a title to any other lot in Concord and the erection of suitable buildings thereon without cost to the state. The act further provided this should be done within twelve months from the passage of the bill or the school would be transferred to Princeton.

The last named provision stimulated the people to supreme effort, and to a realization that immediate action was necessary to retain the school. The village consisted of five families, a small number for so great and momentous an undertaking. Capt. William Holroyd, who was the oldest resident, took the matter in hand and impressed the people with the great advantages and benefits to be derived from such a school. On the 29th day of May, 1874, William H. Martin and wife, conveyed to the State of West Virginia six acres of land upon which to erect the Normal School building. One of the conditions was that no money was to be appropriated by the state for the buildings, so the money had to be secured by subscription. With this money a wooden structure was erected at a cost of about $1,700. On February 22, 1874, the corner stone was laid with Masonic honors. April 21, 1875, Capt. John A. Douglass and Hon. William M. Reynolds appeared before the Board of Regents of the normal schools then in session at Charleston and presented the deed made by William H. Martin and wife to the State of West Virginia. The board accepted it in compliance with the act of the Legislature. At this meeting of the Regents, Capt. James Harvey French was appointed principal, salary $700 and Hon. French M. Reynolds, assistant, salary $600. The Regents ordered that Concord Normal School should begin on the tenth of May, 1875, and continue twenty weeks, then take an intermission until the first Monday in March, 1876. The environment was not very inviting on that memorable morning, May 10, 1875 when the school was first opened. Imagine the beautiful rolling lawn, upon the summit of which now stands the Concord Normal Training School, once occupied by the splendid and commodious brick building which was burned in November, 1910, but on that momentous occasion was a wilderness of red brush, chinquapin bushes and stumps, in the midst of which stood a rough, unfinished wooden frame building about 39x18 feet, two stories in height, without either windows or doors, and you can gain a faint idea of the appearance of the first school building as it stood in the May sunshine, guileless of paint or ornament. The inside was not more inviting. There was a floor in the lower story, with a partition of rough boards across the building, dividing it into unequal rooms. With an unobstructed view of the weather-boarding without and the rafters overhead, many of the boys, for want of better seats, sat upon the joists and studied. There was no apparatus whatever. No stoves or furnace, so, on chilly spring days the students, when not reciting, were hovering around fires out of doors made of the logs and debris which were plentiful. There was no bell to ring the assembling of school, the arrangement for that purpose being rather primitive, consisting of a cow's horn, which in 1878 gave place to a very sweet toned bell. The frame building was used until commencement, July 2, 1886. Early in July of that year work was begun on the new brick building for which the Legislature of 1885 had made an appropriation of $5,000. It was completed the first week in January, 1887. On the 10th of January, with Captain French unable to leave his room, and John D. Sweeney in the Legislature, James F. Holroyd began school in the new building.

The transfer of the school from the old church to the new school house marks the beginning of a period of progress beyond the most sanguine expectations of the friends of the institution. The Legislature of 1887 appropriated $3,000 to complete and furnish the building. It was enlarged in 1888 by an addition costing $3,500. The Legislature of 1897, realizing the beneficent influence of this progressive school, appropriated $20,000 for the erection of a still larger building, which, with its many convenient class rooms, fine library, its large auditorium, capable of seating 1,000 people, its literary society halls, its "model school" rooms, was the one destroyed by fire in 1910. In 1891 a Ladies Hall was built on a lot donated by Captain Holroyd. This building has thirty rooms and is now occupied by young men, as the handsome and commodious new Woman's Hall has been built on the campus of the New School Building with a capacity of 150 girls.

In 1886 the name of the post office was changed from Concord Church to Athens, but the school still retains the name of Concord. On the morning of November 10, 1910, three o'clock, peals from a church bell roused the citizens of Athens to witness the deplorable spectacle of the handsome Normal School building being consumed by fire. Even the massive columns of this structure of architectural beauty were tottering upon their foundations and the costly equipment was smouldering in the debris, plans for the continuance of school were being laid and by daybreak sixteen teams were at the disposal of the school officials. Students, teachers and citizens, all loyal and enthusiastic, met at eight o'clock in one of the churches and they were all so perfectly in accord in their sentiments and determination to go on in spite of all obstacles that the hymn they sang seemed very appropriate, "Blest be the tie that binds." Many other towns and communities were anxious candidates for the relocation of the school, but the people of Mercer county and especially of Athens had made many sacrifices, and had struggled with many discouraging problems in fostering the growth of the school and making it an institution worthy of the name it now proudly maintains among the leading educational centers of the state, and so, after many anxious days, were made glad by its relocation at Athens, with the provision that the community donate the land for the new building. Twenty-six acres were secured in which now stands a large, commodious building, fireproof, excelled by none in the state. A fine baseball and athletic field, tennis courts, a bowling alley in the basement, and the management is planning for a new gymnasium. This year's summer school enrolled 550, and at the last meeting of the State Board of Education, Concord State Normal was placed on a Teachers College basis and is now Concord College, granting degrees.

Thus, from a very small beginning, has risen to eminence and distinction the Concord State Normal School.

EDWARD CALVIN LAMBERT, superintendent of the Yukon Pocahontas Coal Company at Yukon, McDowell County, was born in Lawrence County, Ohio, May 1, 1875, a son of Vincent H. and Sarah (Campbell) Lambert, who now maintain their home at Crumpler, McDowell County, West Virginia. The father was born in Nebraska, and the mother in Pennsylvania, of Scotch parents. William Lambert, grandfather of the subject of this review, came from England and settled at Lambert's Point, Virginia. Vincent H. Lambert has been associated with mines and mining since boyhood, and in charge of mining operations conducted by the Means & Russell Iron Company, he was for twenty-seven years in iron ore, limestone and clay mines in Ohio and Kentucky.

The subject of this sketch Edward Calvin, is the eldest of seven children. He gained his early education in the schools of his native city, Ironton, Ohio, and when but nine years old he began work in the mines with which his father was identified. After leaving school he served an apprenticeship in a plumbing establishment at Portsmouth, Ohio, but he never worked at this trade as a vocation. He found employment with the Means and Russell Iron Company in the mining of limestone and fire clay, with which company he continued until he was twenty-four years old.

On July 5, 1899, he was united in marriage with Miss Rebecca Brewster, of Ironton, Ohio, whose mother was a member of one of the oldest and highly respected families of West Virginia. The father of Mrs. Lambert was a native of Virginia. Mr. Lambert established a home for himself and wife at Ironton, Ohio, where he remained for two years, being employed as general manager by the Chas. Taylor Company of Cincinnati, Ohio. In the winter of 1900 he came to Mingo County, West Virginia, and found employment in the mines of Tug River District. These mines are now controlled by the Red Jacket Consolidated Coal Company. He began work on the grades at ninety cents a day, and by efficiency and effective service he won continuous promotions until he was finally made general superintendent of three mines, the Maritime, Lick Fork and Grapevine. He next became superintendent for the Williamson Coal & Coke Company at Williamson, West Virginia, later was manager of mines at Glenalum, West Virginia, and thereafter he was identified with production in one of the finest mining camps of the district, that of the Excelsior Pocahontas Coal Company. In 1917 he went with the George L. Carter Coal Company as general superintendent, remaining for one year, and going from there to the Yukon Pocahontas Coal Company, as general superintendent, by which company he is still employed and enjoys their respect and esteem.

In 1913-14 Mr. Lambert served as state mine inspector of district No. 12, under appointment by Governor Hatfield, and he held the position of chief deputy under Sheriff Greenway Hatfield. He was a member of the County Court of Mingo County, and within his incumbency of this position the new court house was erected. He is an enthusiastic advocate and supporter of the republican party. In the Masonic fraternity he is a member of the Blue Lodge at Williamson; a member of the Chapter of Royal Arch Masons at North Fork; Ivanhoe Commandery No. 10, Knights Templars, at Bramwell; Scottish Rite Consistory at Wheeling; and the Mystic Shrine at Charleston. He is a life member of the lodge of Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks at Bluefield, No. 269.

Mr. Lambert's family consists of four bright interesting boys and one girl. Charles, a graduate of R. M. A., Bedford, Virginia, and now a sophomore at Washington and Lee University, entered the United States Marine Corps when the nation became involved in the World war, he having been at the time only sixteen years old. Like his father, he is a splendid athlete, and he was captain of the football team, while a student of R. M. A. Walter, a graduate of R. M. A. Front Royal, Virginia, will enter Washington and Lee University this fall. Hildred, the only daughter, enters Lewisburg Seminary this fall. Paul, the youngest member of the household, attends his home school. Three members of Mr. Lambert's family are affiliated with the Baptist Church.

JOHN MORGAN PRICKETT is a newspaper man, his father was a printer and publisher before him, and for a quarter of a century he has been associated with the Jackson Herald at Ripley, being business manager of this well known and influential newspaper.

Mr. Prickett was born at Ravenswood in Jackson County, September 25, 1873. His grandfather, John T. Prickett, was a native of Marion County, but spent the greater part of his life as a farmer at Ravenswood, though he also conducted a store for a few years in Wood County. He died at Ravenswood. He married a Miss Morgan, a native of Marion County. Their son Charles Prickett was born in Marion County, grew up there, and as a youth learned the printer's trade. This trade he followed as a journeyman at Fairmont, Charleston and other places, finally locating at Ravenswood where he later became owner and publisher of The Mountaineer, one of the pioneer papers in that section of the state. About 1896 he removed to Ripley, and continued the publication of The Mountaineer at Ripley until his death in 1911. In the Civil war he fought on the Confederate side all through the period of hostilities, and was a staunch democrat in his political affiliations. Charles Prickett married Matilda Knotts, who was born in Jackson County in 1846, and is still living at Ripley. John Morgan is the oldest of her children. Mary is the wife of Joseph A. Woodell, postmaster at Pennsboro in Ritchie County. Mrs. Daisy Whittington died at Hinton. Charles S. is employed in the rubber industry at Akron, Ohio. Ada is a teacher in the public schools at Ripley, and Isaiah, the youngest of the family, is manager for the O. J. Morrison Store Company at Huntington, West Virginia.

John Morgan Prickett attended the common schools of Jackson County, but from the age of fifteen his education was more directly the result of his apprenticeship and experience in the printer's trade. Mr. Prickett worked as a journeyman printer at Charleston, at Huntington, at Cincinnati, and in various towns and cities. In 1896 he located at Ripley and became a printer in the office of the Jackson Herald, and has been continuously associated with that paper ever since. He has been its business manager since 1919. The Jackson Herald was established in 1875, and for many years past has been the official republican paper of Jackson County. It is owned by a stock company known as the Herald Publishing Company. The Herald is a substantial business institution, and as a paper has a large circulation and influence throughout Jackson and surrounding counties.

Mr. Prickett married at Ripley in 1900 Miss Hallie Kidd, daughter of Dr. Washington W. and Margaret (Vail) Kidd. Her father was a physician and surgeon. Mr. and Mrs. Prickett have a daughter, Ruth, born July 17, 1901, who now has completed her education and is assisting her father in the Herald office.

TOM B. BOWMAN early in life learned the value of a knowledge of law and under the guidance of his father acquired legal acumen, though he found the most effective field for his energies and talents in real estate, and that has been his business and profession for a quarter of a century. Mr. Bowman for the past half dozen years has been one of the most successful real estate operators at Charleston, if not the leading dealer in that vicinity, where he is president of the Bowman Land Company and interested in a number of other affiliated companies.

He was born at Valley Furnace in Barbour County and is a son of the late Capt. Adam C. Bowman, one of the distinguished sons of West Virginia. Captain Bowman was born in Randolph County, May 1, 1839, and was a captain in the Confederate Army during the war, being twice wounded. During a portion of his service he was in the cavalry under Gen. J. E. B. Stuart. Captain Bowman after the war enjoyed a wide and successful practice as a lawyer, his office being in Philippi, county seat of Barbour County, but his practice took him to all the courts of Barbour, Taylor, Preston, Tucker, Randolph, Upshur and Harrison counties. Captain Bowman, who died August 25, 1909, married Tacy J. Wilmoth. Their oldest son is Stuart H. Bowman, of Huntington, who is, like his brother, an extensive real estate operator. Mr. Bowman has but one sister, Maud, now married to E. Ray Jones, a successful lawyer at Oakland, Maryland.

Tom B. Bowman was educated in the public schools, taught at the early age of sixteen and for several years worked on a farm, hoeing out his own row in the corn-field, and hauling tanbark during the summer months. He attended the Fairmont State Normal School and the University of West Virginia at Morgantown. While working his way through school at the West Virginia University he associated himself with H. L. Swisher and prepared the first city directory of Morgantown, West Virginia.

When a mere youth Mr. Bowman contracted to sell twenty town lots for Fred S. Byers at Philippi. That was his introduction into a vocation to which few men have brought greater natural abilities. He opened a real estate and insurance office at Philippi. Mr. Bowman made good in the insurance field, and was at one time state agent for the Indiana & Ohio Live Stock Insurance Company, the Walla Walla Fire Insurance Company, and the Florida Home Fire Insurance Company.

With Hunter Atha and Cal Arnett of Fairmont Mr. Bowman promoted the sale of what is known as the Ice Addition to Philippi. It was a profitable undertaking and gave Mr. Bowman a substantial capital for other enterprises. Following this they put on a sale at Belington of the Truman Elliott Addition, in which they sold 336 lots in one day, bringing in about thirty thousand dollars. Mr. Bowman then formed a partnership with his brother, Stuart H. Bowman, under the name of Bowman and Bowman, at Philippi, Tom conducting the real estate end of the business, while his brother looked after the law practice.

Changing business conditions took Mr. Bowman to the Southland. He went to Florida and started in, so to say, "on his own hook," making good, and today is the owner of hundreds of Florida lots and acres of sunshine. In 1917 he came from Knoxville to Huntington with but $5 cash left, bound for Charleston, paying his railroad fare out of this sum to the capital city. It must not be understood he was broke, far from it, but from that time to the present he has made wonderful strides in business ventures without calling on his outside resources. With this unfavorable introduction from the standpoint of financial resources Mr.

Bowman set to work to build up a real estate organization and in the Bowman Land Company he now has a business that controls more real estate than any other firm in the city, and probably more than any two. He is president of the company and owns the controlling stock of the company. Among the larger interests held by this company in the Kanawha Valley might be mentioned the Bowman Land Company Addition to South Charleston, the Highland Terrace Addition to South Charleston, the Bishop Donahoe Addition to South Charleston, the L. C. Massey Addition and the Chilton Addition to Spring Hill, and other tracts and subdivisions in that locality; Chemical City Addition near St. Albans; and two large additions to Nitro, and several farm tracts. The company also has extensive holdings of farm properties around Milton, and parcels of lots and miscellaneous properties at Point Pleasant, Clarksburg, Brushton, Danville, Barboursville, Albrightsville, Buckhannon, Logan, Parkersburg, Philippi, Belington, Kingwood and elsewhere; in fact, in about twenty counties of West Virginia. He owns the controlling interest in the South Side Highlands Addition of the City of Charleston, destined to be a high class residential section.

Mr. Bowman has made a specialty of promoting and conducting auction sales of city and suburban property and farm lands. This business is not confined to West Virginia, but extends over the states of Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Texas. These operations alone run into millions of dollars. During the winter months Mr. Bowman takes personal charge of his Florida office at Orlando as a central operating point, but has subdivisions at Orlando, Acadia, Bradentown, Lakeland, Clermont, Tampa, Titusville and a few lots at scattering points.

Mr. Bowman is interested in the Security Bank & Trust Company, Merchants & Mechanics Bank, Kanawha County Bank, and Equity Finance & Loan Company, all of Charleston; and the Mountain Trust Company of Roanoke, Virginia.

Mr. Bowman is a member of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce, and Kiwanis Club, is a Royal Arch Mason, a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias, Knights of the Macabees, and belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He is a democrat in politics, and active. He married Dollie J. Nutter, daughter of ex-sheriff Eli Nutter of West Union, Doddridge County, West Virginia, and has one child.

CHARLES A. MILLER, a wholesale grocery merchant at Martinsburg, has been busily active in the commercial affairs of that city for many years, and has earned an impregnable position in the esteem of the community by his business ability and the public spirited manifestations of his character.

Mr. Miller was born in the village of Hedgesville in Berkeley County, and both his grandfathers were farmers and planters in that section. His father, Harley Miller, was born on a farm near Cherry Run, grew to manhood there, and on leaving the farm engaged in the mercantile business at Hedgesville for several years, when he retired and was so living at the time of his death, at the age of seventy. He and his wife had nine children, seven of whom reached mature years: J. William, deceased; Adelaide, who had a son, Clarence, by her marriage to Doctor Mitchell and her second husband was Frank Rickard; Charles A.; Laura, who married George W. Appleby; Eugene P.; Robert S.; and Minnie D., who died at the age of twenty-one. The only three now living are Charles, Eugene and Robert.

Charles A. Miller attended school steadily until he was about fifteen years of age, and then went to work as a clerk in his father's store, where he laid the foundation of his commercial experience. At the age of twenty-two he came to Martinsburg, and with his brother J. William engaged in the farm implement and fertilizer business. The association was continued with mutual profit for fifteen years, when the firm dissolved. Charles A. Miller then became associated with his father in the wholesale grocery business, as J. H. Miller & Son. After the senior Miller's death the company was incorporated under the name of the C. A. Miller Grocery Company, which was dissolved December 31, 1920. After devoting many years to the personal management of this business Mr. Miller utilized a leisure interval to go abroad and also make a tour of his own country to the Pacific Coast. While abroad he was in Scotland, England, Italy and many points of interest in battle-torn France. He sailed for home from Cherbourg. Back at Martinsburg Mr. Miller could not be satisfied with leading a retired life, and in November, 1921, again embarked in the wholesale grocery business as sole proprietor of the C. A. Miller Grocery Company.

At the age of twenty-seven he married Miss Sarah Rust Bryarly, who was born near Darkesville in Berkeley County, daughter of Richard and Mary (Payne) Bryarly. Mrs. Miller died in 1916, aged forty-six, the mother of four children: May Dunbar, who died at the age of twenty-six, wife of Doctor Griggs; Sarah Averill, who died aged twenty-three, wife of Dr. Nelson Osborne; Elizabeth Nelson; Charles A., Jr. The only son, a student in the Martinsburg High School, in this year will enter the Junior Class at Phillips Academy, Andover, Massachusetts.

Mr. Miller is an active member of the Trinity Episcopal Church, and is vestryman and senior warden. Fraternally he is affiliated with Equality Lodge No. 44, A. F. and A. M., Lebanon Chapter No. 2, R. A. M., Palestine Commandery No. 2, K. T., the Scottish Rite Consistory and Osiris Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Wheeling. He is also a member of Martinsburg Lodge No. 778, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. Mr. Miller married, May 18, 1922, Miss Sally Scollay Evens at the "Little Church Around the Corner," New York City.

COLONEL JOHN Q. A. NADENBOUSCH, was one of the distinguished native sons of that portion of the Shenandoah Valley that is now within the boundaries of the State of West Virginia, was a gallant officer of the Confederacy in the Civil war, and was one of the most honored and influential citizens of his native county at the time of his death, in the fullness of years and honors.

John Quincy Adams Nadenbousch was born in Berkeley County, Virginia (now West Virginia), on the 31st of October, 1824, and he passed the closing period of his life at Martinsburg, the county seat, the family of which he was a representative having settled in this county in the early pioneer period, when this section of the Old Dominion was virtually on the western frontier. Colonel Nadenbousch received a liberal education, as gauged by the standards of the locality and period, and he was in both character and intellectual powers well equipped for the leadership which long was his in connection with civic and material progress in his native county. As a young man he became an active member of the Virginia State Militia, and soon was chosen captain of the Berkeley Border Guards, which was the local military organization. He was ordered with his company to Harpers Ferry by Governor Wise at the time of John Brown's historic raid, and assisted in the capture of Brown, besides having been stationed with his company at Charles Town, in the present Jefferson County, West Virginia, at the time Brown was there executed by hanging.

When the Civil war was precipitated Captain Nadenbousch and his command were called into active service in the Army of the Confederate States, on the 18th of April, 1861, and proceeded again to Harpers Ferry. He won promotion to the rank of colonel, and commanded his regiment in many important engagements, his service having continued until the close of the war. He took part in the first battle of Bull Run, and at the battle of Gettysburg he was in command of the right wing of the Confederate forces, on Culp's Hill. Colonel Nadenbousch commanded the Second Virginia Infantry in the "Stonewall Brigade," and was second in command in that famous organization. He commanded the brigade at the battle of Fredericksburg. He was badly wounded at the battle of Chancellorsville, at the time and near the place where "Stonewall" Jackson was fatally wounded. He was brevetted for gallantry in action on two occasions, and declined promotion to brigadier general, preferring to continue in command of his regiment, which was chiefly recruited from Berkeley and adjacent counties in the Valley of Virginia, near his home at Martinsburg.

After the close of the war Colonel Nadenbousch returned to his native county, and with the same fine spirit of loyalty he bent his energies to the rebuilding of the prostrate industries of the community. He became the owner of a large landed estate, and he also owned and operated a flour mill at Martinsburg. A man of commanding ability and high ideals, he made his influence felt in connection with all communal interests, and he was one of the most prominent and revered citizens of Martinsburg at the time of his death, in 1891.

December 13, 1848, recorded the marriage of Colonel Nadenbousch and Miss Hester J. Miller, whom he survived by a number of years, their children having been six in number, namely: Smith M., James Frederick, Mary Ella, Eloise Riddle, John Miller and Jane Gray.

ALEXANDER PARKS. As a citizen, business man and public official, Mr. Parks, former member of the West Virginia Senate, has played a large and benignant part in the community life of his home City of Martinsburg, judicial center of Berkeley County, where he has maintained his residence for over fifty years.

Mr. Parks was born in the City of Baltimore, Maryland, on the 22d of April, 1847, and in the same city was born his father, Alexander Parks, Sr., who was a son of Edward Parks, the latter having been born about 1785 and having served honorably in the United States Army. While stationed at Fort Mifflin, Philadelphia, Edward Parks married Mlle. Elise deLoup, who was born in France. Alexander Parks, Sr., was well educated and became a skilled chemist. For many years he was supervising chemist in the laboratories of the great pharmaceutical house of Powers & Wightman in the City of Philadelphia, where he continued to reside until his death. He married Miss Sarah Jackson, who likewise was born in Baltimore, her father, James Jackson, having been born in County Down, Ireland, and having been a kinsman of General Andrew Jackson, who when president of the United States appointed James Jackson to a responsible official position in the City of Baltimore, where the family home was established. The maiden name of Mrs. James Jackson was Bethia Rennie Moore, and she was of Scotch ancestry. Alexander and Sarah (Jackson) Parks, the latter of whom likewise died in Philadelphia, became the parents of seven children: Sarah Jackson, Ann Eliza, Alexin, Mary Roberts, Alexander, Jr., George and Thomas Powers.

He whose name initiates this review was educated in the public schools of Philadelphia and was there graduated in the high school. Upon coming to Martinsburg, West Virginia, he turned his attention to the milling business, of which he has here continued a successful representative to the present time. He first operated the Nadenbousch mill, and since 1898 he has owned and operated the Equality mills, which have the best of modern equipment, and in connection with which he has a large grain elevator, which was erected by him. He is also in active management of his several farms and other real property in Martinsburg and vicinity.

Mr. Parks has been an exponent of liberal and progressive citizenship, and has taken lively interest in all things pertaining to the welfare of his adopted city and state. He served for some time as chairman of the Democratic County Committee of Berkeley County, was for three terms a member, from 1906 to 1909, inclusive, and was president of the County Court of the City Council of Martinsburg, during which period he served one term as city treasurer. In 1890 he was elected to the Senate of West Virginia, as representative of the Thirteenth Senatorial District. In the Senate he gave four years of characteristically loyal and effective service, and he was assigned to important Senate committees, including those on privileges and elections, banks and corporations, militia, enrolled bills, public printing, and agriculture, of which latter committee he was the chairman. He did much to further wise and constructive legislation and to advance the best interests of his constituent district.

At Martinsburg was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Parks and Miss Mary Ella Nadenbousch, who was there born and reared and who is a daughter of Col. John Q. A. and Hester J. (Miller) Nadenbousch, of whom more specific mention is made elsewhere in this publication. Mrs. Parks is deceased, she having been a devout communicant of Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church in her native city, of which church her husband likewise is a communicant, a member of the Vestry and a trustee. The loved wife and mother is survived by five children: John Nadenbousch (individually mentioned on other pages), Elise deLoup, Hester Gray, Sarah Rennie and Alexander B. Mr. Parks is a past master of Equality Lodge No. 44, A. F. and A. M.; is affiliated with Lebanon Chapter No. 2, R. A. M.; is a past eminent commander of Palestine Commandery No. 2, Knights Templars; and is a past most eminent grand commander of the West Virginia M. E. Grand Commandery of Knights Templars. The family home at Martinsburg is a fine old stone mansion that is one of the oldest houses in the city, its interior finishing and decorations being of most artistic type, and on the walls of one of the rooms of this residence is to be seen fine wallpaper that is nearly a century old. The home is further made attractive by an ancient spinning wheel and other relics of other days and of family history.

JOHN NADENBOUSCH PARKS is one of the popular and influential citizens of his native city of Martinsburg, Berkeley County, is a former member of the House of Delegates of the State Legislature and gave distinguished service in connection with the nation's military activities incidental to the World war, he being now a member of the Officers Reserve Corps of the United States Army, with commission as major of infantry. He now commands the Third Battalion, Three Hundred and Ninety-seventh Infantry, One Hundredth Division, Organized Reserves.

Major Parks was born at Martinsburg on July 22, 1876, and is a son of Hon. Alexander Parks, of whom individual mention is made in the preceding sketch. After preliminary training in the public schools of his native city Major Parks took a college preparatory course at Potomac Seminary, at Romney, his education having then been advanced by his attending the University of West Virginia and the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, Virginia. His final course of study was in the historic old University of Virginia, after leaving which he returned to Martinsburg and became associated with business affairs. In the autumn of 1916 he was elected to the House of Delegates of the State Legislature, where he served during both the regular and special sessions, in 1917. He was assigned to various important committees of the Lower House, including the finance committee and the committee on roads, of which he was chairman. At the end of the special session he resigned, in April, 1917, to enlist in the nation's military service, in the same month that the United States formally became involved in the great World war. He proceeded to Camp Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, and on the 26th of the following November was commissioned captain of infantry. He was assigned as instructor of infantry units at several camps and was then transferred to Camp Wheeler at Macon, Georgia, where he was engaged in drilling his troops for overseas service when the signing of the historic armistice brought the war to a close. He received his honorable discharge and was commissioned major of infantry in the Officers Reserve Corps of the United States Army. The Major is a prominent and valued member of the Martinsburg post of the American Legion, which he organized, and is affiliated also with Martinsburg Lodge No. 778, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, of which lodge he is a trustee. He was a member of the sub-committee that drafted West Virginia's first "Good Road Law," in 1917, and as chairman of the committee on roads was chiefly responsible for the passage of the bill in the form recommended by his committee.

DR. LUTHER H. CLARK, came to McDowell County as a young physician and surgeon in the service of the contractor who was building a branch of the Norfolk & Western which opened up one of the largest coal districts in the county. This work finished he remained as physician and surgeon to a number of coal mining companies and also in general practice at Northfork and Kyle. Doctor Clark has been busied with many affairs outside his profession, and among others is president of the Clark National Bank of Northfork.

He was born January 19, 1868, at Peterstown, Monroe County, West Virginia, and represents the old and prominent Clark family of Augusta County, Virginia. One member of this family was the Clark of the Lewis and Clark expedition. His great-grandfather Capt. Jack Peters was a prominent character in Monroe County, West Virginia, and Peterstown was named for him and also Peters Mountain. The parents of Doctor Clark, Lewis Floyd and Cynthia Annie (Byrnside) Clark were both born in Virginia. His father was a merchant at Peterstown and during the Civil war was in the service of the Confederate Government and toward the close of the war into the field with a Virginia regiment.

Luther H. Clark acquired a common school education at Peterstown, and spent four years in the Academy at Pearisburg, Virginia. Following this he worked for an older brother and also for his father in the store, and from his earnings he accumulated the money needed for his medical education. In 1889 he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, where he was graduated M. D. in 1892. Since then he has attended post-graduate courses in New York City and elsewhere as often as his business permitted. Almost immediately after his graduation he returned to West Virginia in association with Dr. C. A. Johnson engaged to handle the medical and surgical work for Samuel Walton, contractor for the construction of the Norfolk & Western Railroad in McDowell and other counties. This contract was finished in September, 1892, and at the opening of the railroad through the coal field Mr. Clark determined to remain and established his home at Kyle. For nearly thirty years he has been physician for the Lynchburg Coal & Coke Company, Powhatan Coal & Coke Company, Elkridge Coal & Coke Company, and Algona Coal & Coke Company, in addition to looking after an extensive general practice with office at Northfork, though his home is still at Kyle.

As a pioneer in this section Doctor Clark availed himself of some opportunities that were presented at the time. He and some others discovered that a tract of forty-three acres across the Creek from the railroad station had been overlooked in entering the lands, and they secured possession of this tract, platted it and leased it for a long period, and Doctor Clark was at the head of the Development Company that handled the land. The locality was long known as Clark's. The Clark National Bank of Northfork was organized in 1912 and in 1913 Doctor Clark bought the controlling interest and became president, with Mr. John Bane cashier.

In 1894 at Baltimore, Maryland, Doctor Clark married Miss Minnie Pinkerton. They have four children, Helen, Mildred, Lewis H. and Wyndham Stokes. Lewis graduated with the class of 1922 from the University of Pennsylvania. The son Wyndham graduated in 1922 from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. Doctor Clark is a member of the Episcopal Church. He is one of the very prominent Masons of West Virginia, active in both the York and Scottish Rite and the Shrine. He was Grand Master of the West Virginia Grand Lodge of Masons in 1904, was High Priest of the Grand Chapter of the Royal Arch in 1918, Grand Commander of the State Knights Templar in 1916, Illustrious Potentate of Beni-Kedem Temple A. O. N. M. S. of Charleston in 1921, and is a member of the Board of Governors of the Masonic Home at Parkersburg. He is a member of the County,

State and American Medical Associations, and belongs to the Bluefield Country Club and the Guyandotte Hunting Club of Huntington.

ROBERT WHITE, who bears the name of honorable distinction in Hampshire County, has been a successful member of the Romney bar for over twenty years, and is serving his third consecutive term as prosecuting attorney.

His great-grandfather was named Robert White. This Robert White was a grandson of a Scotchman, who was a surgeon in the British Navy, and on leaving the service settled in New Jersey, where he married a Miss Hogue. Their son John subsequently became a pioneer in the Valley of Virginia. Robert White, representing the third generation of the family, served as an officer in the American Army during the Revolution, lived at Winchester, Virginia, and was judge of the Circuit Court of that district. Judge Robert White married Miss Baker.

Their son John Baker White was a citizen of prominence in this section of Old Virginia, and he served as clerk of the County Court of Hampshire County before the war. At the beginning of hostilities he identified himself with the Confederate Government at Richmond, and died there before the close of the war. His second wife was a daughter of Christian Strite, a Lutheran minister of Winchester. The children of this marriage were: Robert White, who served West Virginia as attorney general; Frances, who became the wife of S. L. Flournoy, of Charleston, West Virginia; Alexander, a farmer, who died near Wardensville in Hardy County; Christian S.; Lucy, who married Robert Ferguson; Mrs. Susan Armstrong; and Henry, who spent his life at Romney.

Christian S. White, father of the prosecuting attorney, was born in Hampshire County in 1840, and was a volunteer in the Confederate Army, at first in the infantry and subsequently was commissioned a captain of Company I of the Twenty-third Virginia Cavalry. He was never discharged, since his company left the army about the time of the final surrender, started down through the Carolinas but finally came back to Virginia and disbanded. Captain White participated in many battles, was struck with bullets several times, and was twice severely injured and felt the effects of his wounds all through life. After the reconstruction of the state he was elected clerk of the County Court of Hampshire County, and served in that capacity a long period of years, until 1903. He was a lawyer by training, and after leaving public office he was associated in practice with his son, Robert, at Romney until his death on January 21, 1917, at the age of seventy-seven. He was a past master of the Masonic Lodge and was affiliated with the Presbyterian Church, the church of his ancestors.

Capt. C. S. White married Catherine Steele, whose father, Thomas Steele, was the first secretary of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of West Virginia and served the order in that capacity until his death. Thomas Steele was a native of Dublin, Ireland, and died in the early '80s and is buried at Grafton, West Virginia. His daughter Catherine was also born in Dublin, was seven years of age when her parents came to the United States, and she grew up at Fairmont and was married there. She died in 1914, at the age of seventy-two. Her children were: Louisa A., of Romney; Robert; Christian S., Jr., superintendent of mines in Southwest West Virginia; Bessie, wife of B. C. Howard of Baltimore. The first wife of Capt. C. S. White was Bessie Shultz, and their only child was John Baker White, who became a member of the Charleston bar.

Robert White, the prosecuting attorney, was born at Romney, May 28, 1876. He attended the public schools at his native town, and at the age of sixteen began acquiring his first experience in public affairs as deputy clerk of the County Court under his father. At the age of eighteen he graduated from the old Potomac Academy, and two years later began the study of law in West Virginia University. He was graduated in 1899 and, returning to Romney, soon had a promising practice. From 1903 he was associated with his father until 1912, when he was elected for his first term as prosecuting attorney, succeeding J. S. Zimmerman. He has since been twice reelected to the same office. During his term of office the good roads movement has received a great impetus in Hampshire County, and the first concrete bridge was built by the County Court after he became prosecuting attorney. Mr. White comes of a family devoted to democratic principles, and he cast his first vote for president for Mr. Bryan in 1900. He is a past master of the Masonic Lodge and is also affiliated with the Odd Fellows.

January 7, 1903, at Washington D. C., Mr. White married Miss Mabel Glascock Fitch, a native of Vanceburg, Kentucky, and daughter and only child of E. H. and Laura (Glascock) Fitch. She attended Marshall College at Huntington while her family resided there, and finished her education in Washington. Mr. and Mrs. White had five children: John Baker, Mabel Glasgow, Elizabeth Steele, Roberta Huston and Robert, Jr. Mrs. White, the mother of these children, died July 5, 1915. She was an active member of the Presbyterian Church.

HON. HUGH A. DUNN. Since 1900 Hon. Hugh A. Dunn has been a member of the Beckley bar, and during this long period of time had made steady advancement, being accounted today one of the leading members of the Raleigh County legal profession. He is likewise a prominent and influential member of the republican party, and has on numerous occasions rendered efficient public service, having been the incumbent of various offices, both appointive and elective. He is a native son of West Virginia, born on a farm at Peterstown, Monroe County. April 12, 1872, a son of James Patterson and Sarah A. (Workman) Dunn.

Both the Workman and Dunn families are old and honored ones in Monroe County, of English and Irish descent. James Patterson Dunn was born in Monroe County, in 1832, and in young manhood adopted farming, in which he was engaged until enlisting for service in the Union Army during the war between the states. He again engaged in agricultural pursuits after the close of his military service, and continued therein until his death in 1917, when he was accounted one of the well-to-do men of his community. He was an active republican in politics, was a deacon in the Baptist Church for years and was president of the Board of Education in his district for two terms. Mrs. Dunn died at the age of seventy-two years, in 1915. They were the parents of five children: John P., a farmer, stockraiser and merchant of Princeton, Mercer County, West Virginia; Mary E., the widow of J. C. Lucas, of Peterstown, Monroe County, died May 7, 1922; James W., who is engaged in farming in the vicinity of Snyder, Oklahoma; Robert E. Lee, formerly an engineer on the Norfolk & Western Railroad, later a locomotive engineer in the Southwest, whence he went to Cuba, finally became an engineer in Panama, on the Panama Railroad, where he lost his life on his second trip across the Isthmus, on July 23, 1906; and Hugh A.

Hugh A. Dunn attended the free schools of Monroe County, and at Athens pursued a course at the Concord Normal. He began to teach school at the age of eighteen years, and for ten or twelve terms continued as a teacher, in the meantime being married the first time. While teaching he had applied himself to the study of law, and in 1897 entered the University of West Virginia, where he took the law course and was graduated in 1899, with his degree of LL.B. In the following year he located for practice at Beckley, where he has since made rapid strides in his profession and attracted a large and representative clientele. In 1909 he formed a law partnership with John M. Anderson, an association which continued until 1921, when Mr. Anderson was elevated to the bench of the Criminal Court. From 1901 until 1905 Mr. Dunn was United States commissioner, and in 1906 was elected mayor of Beckley. In 1907, during President Roosevelt's administration, he was appointed assistant United States attorney of the Treasury Department, with headquarters at New York City, where he remained for nearly a year. In 1909 he became prosecuting attorney of Raleigh County, a position in which he served until 1913, and again served as mayor of the City of Beckley, in 1914 and 1915. His entire public service has been characterized by capable and conscientious performance of duty and high ideals of the responsibilities of public servants. A republican in politics, he has been active in party work, and has served as chairman of the county committee and attended state and county conventions. His fraternal affiliations include membership in the Masons, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

On December 24, 1893, Mr. Dunn was united in marriage with Miss Virginia Gertrude Basham, daughter of John L. Basham, of Peterstown, West Virginia, and she died two years and three months later, leaving one son, Oakley Waiteman Dunn, who is now in the employ of the Gulf Smokeless Coal Company at Tams, Raleigh County, West Virginia. In March, 1918, he volunteered for service in the United States Army, and was assigned to the air service and trained at Kelly Field, San Antonio, Texas. He was at Newport News, ready for embarkation for overseas duty, when the news of the signing of the armistice was flashed to this country. On January 3, 1913, Hugh A. Dunn was united in marriage with Mrs. Mollie (Bailey) Trump, daughter of George Bailey, of Beckley, and widow of Robert Trump. By her former marriage Mrs. Dunn has one son, Robert S. Trump, now with the Raleigh County Bank at Beckley, West Virginia, who in April, 1919, enlisted in the United States Navy and served until honorably discharged in 1921. Mr. and Mrs. Dunn have one daughter, Eula Edna, born in 1914, who is attending school.

HENSHAW FAMILY. The Henshaw family, one of the most honored names in West Virginia, was founded in the American colonies by Joshua Henshaw, born in England in 1672. Through the act of a dishonest executor he was shipped to Massachusetts and thus deprived of the inheritance of a large property left by his father. His son, John, engaged in business at Dorchester, Massachusetts, and later moved to Philadelphia. After passing the middle period of his life, consulting with his oldest son, Nicholas, they journeyed together to the colony of Virginia, and after examining the country decided to move their families to the beautiful valley between the Blue Ridge and Great North Mountain, called by General Washington "The Garden of America." John Henshaw bought a tract of land from Lord Fairfax in Frederick County, about thirteen miles from Winchester, and subsequently was the means of inducing a number of other families to locate in the then wilderness. His own home was erected on Mill Creek. He died a wealthy and influential man, having established a reputation for honor, honesty, progressiveness and justice.

Nicholas, of the third generation, and son of John, was born in 1705, and died August 19, 1777. His wife, Rebecca, accompanied him to Virginia. Their son, William, was born at Mill Creek, the family homestead in Berkeley County, March 16, 1736, and died in June, 1799. He was educated by private tutors. In 1775 he was one of the first volunteers in the company raised by Col. Hugh Stephenson in Berkeley County for the Continental Army. He was elected one of the lieutenants. He was with the company in the three days of successive skirmishing at King's Bridge, New York. He was also in the battle of Point Pleasant prior to the outbreak of the Revolution. There are many references to published work to the services he rendered the cause of American independence. He married about 1767, Agnes Anderson, a beautiful woman and a belle of Colonial Virginia. Her father, William Anderson, was descended from an ancestor who arrived at Jamestown in 1634.

Levi Henshaw, oldest of the eleven children of William and Agnes (Anderson) Henshaw, was born July 22, 1769, and died September 9, 1843, spending all his life at Mill Creek, Berkeley County. He was educated in private schools and devoted his active career to planting and milling. He was elected justice of the peace in 1810, and served in the Virginia House of Delegates in 1821-22-30-31, and in 1840 as sheriff of Berkeley County. He was a vestryman of the Episcopal Church. His first wife was Nancy Davidson, mother of four children. His second wife was Ann McConnell, born in 1778 and died in 1838, daughter of William and Mary (Cowen) McConnell. Levi Henshaw was the father of fourteen children altogether.

His eleventh child, Levi Henshaw (2), was born at the Henshaw homestead on Mill Creek, July 14, 1815, and died February 21, 1896. He was educated in the private schools supported by the families of the neighborhood, became a planter and miller, owning the Henshaw Flour Mills, and throughout his long life was known and honored as a courtly, polished gentleman, and of sterling worth and integrity. He was an old-line Whig, voting for Harrison in 1840, and was a republican after the formation of the new party. As justice of the peace he became noted for the impartial justice he meted out to rich and poor, white and black alike. He was a member of the Masonic Lodge of Shepherdstown, and for years was a vestryman in the Episcopal Church.

December 16, 1851, at Church Hill, Berkeley County, he married Sarah Ann Snodgrass. She was born at Tomahawk Springs in that county, November 1, 1827, daughter of Col. Robert Verdier Snodgrass and Sarah Ann Snodgrass. She was a descendant of William Snodgrass, who with two brothers came to America in the early days of the eighteenth century. His first son, Robert Snodgrass, was born in 1742, and died in 1832. Robert, Jr., sixth son of Robert, was born March 16, 1773, and died in 1830. His daughter, Sarah Ann Snodgrass, born October 14, 1806, and died November 21, 1891, married her first cousin, Col. Robert Verdier Snodgrass, a son of Stephen and Elizabeth (Verdier) Snodgrass. Colonel Snodgrass was born in Virginia, September 21, 1792, and died January 6, 1861. He was a descendant of the Verdier family, prominent in the history of the Huguenots in France. Nicholas Verdier came to the colony of Virginia about 1688, and Louise Verdier, wife of Stephen Snodgrass, was his descendant in the fifth generation.

Levi and Sarah Ann (Snodgrass) Henshaw were the parents of ten children, the oldest, Robert Levi, dying in infancy. Lillie, the second child, married Dr. M. S. Butler, of Hedgesville, West Virginia. Annie Laurie became the wife of Edward Claggett Williams, of Martinsburg. Robert Levi married Mildred Shoemaker, lived in Clarinda, Iowa, and is now in Seattle, Washington. Edgar Caven, the fifth child, served as postmaster of Hedgesville, also of Martinsburg, is a horticulturist and vice president of the Peoples Trust Company, and married Sallie M. Lingamfelter. Ella Snodgrass, the sixth child, died in infancy. Valley Virginia married Rev. Francis C. Berry, of Dallas, Texas. Francis died in infancy. The youngest of the family, Mabel and Frances Little, are twins. Frances Little is a graduate of Shepherd College State Normal School, and a teacher in the city schools of Martinsburg.

Mabel Henshaw graduated from New Windsor College, Maryland, and taught from 1898 to 1903 in the Fairmont State Normal, being then transferred to Shepherd College State Normal School of West Virginia. She received her A. B. degree from the West Virginia University in 1915. She is the wife of Dr. I. H. Gardiner, of Baltimore. Her daughter, Anna Henshaw Gardiner, is a graduate nurse and enlisted in the World War May 30, 1917, and was a nurse in France for twenty months. Her son, Robert Henry Gardiner, is a pharmacist, a graduate of the University of Maryland.

C. A. FLEGER, M. D. Numbered among the self-sacrificing and skilled physicians and surgeons of Boone County, Dr. C. A. Flegler is rendering a wonderfully efficient service in the mining camps and mines of this region and establishing a record of which he can well be proud. He was born at Montgomery, Fayette County, West Virginia, August 26, 1881, a son of Joseph and Mary (Fath) Flegler. The paternal grandfather was born in Germany, but came to the United States at an early day and settled in Pennsylvania, where his son, Joseph Flegler, was born. The paternal grandmother was born in England, of English parents, and she came to this country direct from England. The mother of Doctor Flegler was born in Alsace-Lorraine, and was brought to the United States by an uncle when a girl of fifteen years. She was born under the French flag, and her native tongue was French, but before she left Alsace-Lorraine that region had come under the German domination, and the speaking of French was positively forbidden. It was, in part, because of the unhappy conditions which arose after the Germans took possession of her old home which led her to seek a new one across the seas. Joseph Flegler was a miner, and a substantial man of Fayette County.

Doctor Flegler attended the public schools of Nicholas County and the Fayette Normal School, from which he secured his certificate to teach school, and for two years thereafter he was an educator of Nicholas County, West Virginia. He then began the study of medicine, and, going to Baltimore, Maryland, attended the Maryland Medical College, from which he was graduated in 1905, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Immediately thereafter he entered upon a general practice at Summersville, West Virginia, and remained there for about eight years. In 1913 he came to Seth for the Lackawanna Coal & Lumber Company, and has remained at this point ever since. He is now the physician and surgeon for the Rockcastle Lumber Company and the Laurel Creek Coal Company, and his work takes him into the lumber camps and the coal mines. During the late war, he was examining physician for the Draft Board of his district, and did everything else in his power to aid the administration to carry out its policies.

In 1907 Doctor Flegler married at Summersville, Miss Emma Umbarger, a daughter of Robert and Orinoco Umbarger, farming people of Virginia. Doctor and Mrs. Flegler have two children: Robert and Lucile. They belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church. Fraturnally he maintains membership with the Masons, in which he has been advanced to the thirty-second degree, and the Mystic Shrine, the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias. Since he cast his first ballot Doctor Flegler has been a zealous republican, but he has not cared to come before the public for office except as a member of the School Board. Professionally he belongs to the Kanawha County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. The work Doctor Flegler is now doing necessitates much self-sacrifice, but he recognizes that in these connections he is able to accomplish much, and render an aid that is greatly needed. While he has not entered public life, he takes a warm interest in the welfare of his home community, and always gives a cheerful and hearty support to those measures looking toward its advancement. Personally he is very popular, and among the men to whom he ministers he is held in the deepest affection.

REUEL EDWIN SHERWOOD, of Charleston, official court reporter and secretary of the West Virginia Coal Mining Institute, has been conspicuously a man of diversified interests and experiences. He has courted the dangers of military service, and as a man of action has sought the front line of activities in various fields.

He was born at Newark Valley, Tioga County, New York, in 1878, son of E. A. and Polly (Woodmansee) Sherwood, who in 1882 established their home at Parkersburg, West Virginia. Through his mother Mr. Sherwood is of Revolutionary ancestry and has membership in the Sons of the American Revolution.

He grew up and received his early schooling in Parkersburg. In 1898, at the age of twenty, he joined the West Virginia Volunteers for service in the Spanish-American war, and was in the training camp at Chickamanga. Later by re-enlistment he went to the Philippine Islands, was in service during the insurrection there, and for several years remained in the volunteer army in the Philippines. He achieved the difficult promotion of rising from the status of an enlisted man to an officer in the Volunteer Army. After leaving the army service Captain Sherwood remained in the Philippines and was treasurer and vice governor of the Province of Masbate under Governor William Howard Taft. His experience in the Philippines covered a period altogether of ten years.

After returning to the United States Captain Sherwood established his home at Charleston. He was made assistant adjutant general of the state under Adj.-Gen. C. E. Elliott, and as such served throughout the strikes and riots in the Cabin Creek Mining District in 1912. Subsequently he took up shorthand reporting as a profession. He established offices in Charleston, now in the Professional Building, and has organized a complete service, employing a staff of expert shorthand reporters. He is official reporter for the three courts in Charleston, the Circuit Court, Intermediate Court and Court of Common Pleas. He is also official reporter for all their sessions in West Virginia of the Interstate Commerce Commission, United States Court of Claims and the Federal Trade Commission. Through his staff he handles practically all the convention reporting work in the state and an extensive legal reporting business in the various courts.

Captain Sherwood takes special pride in his duties as secretary of the West Virginia Coal Mining Institute, which is the oldest organization in West Virginia devoted to the improvement of the mining industry. Its aims have always been along the lines of progress and education, and it has always worked so far as possible in cooperation with the state department of mines and the mining department of the State University.

Captain Sherwood is a member of the Charleston Kiwanis Club, the Army and Navy Club of Manila, and the Order of Elks. He married Miss Edith Bickel, a native of West Virginia. Their three children are Reuel Edwin 2d, Elliot Bamford and Charles Gordon.

MILLARD GILMORE WHITLOW as a young man, graduate of a commercial school, looking for a place in which to utilize his energies and abilities to the best advantage, chose the new town of Bluefield in Mercer County, has lived there thirty years, has linked his own with the larger destinies of the city, and for a number of years has been head of the largest hardware business there.

He was born in Franklin County, Virginia, December 27, 1870, son of E. H. Whitlow, who was of Scotch Irish, and of Sallie C. (Gilbert) Whitlow, of English ancestry. An original spelling of the name was Whiteley. E. H. Whitlow and wife were both born in Franklin County, Virginia, and the former spent his active career as a farmer, but retired some years ago. During the Civil war he was with a Virginia Regiment in the Confederate Army, and was once captured, but otherwise sustained no bad results from the service.

Millard G. Whitlow acquired a common school education in Franklin County, attended school at Martinsville in Henry County, and in 1892 graduated in the commercial course from the Roanoke Business College. Soon afterward he came to Bluefield, and almost from the first was in business for himself in metal working and plumbing. Gradually he expanded his interests to the handling of a general stock of hardware, and since 1904 has been proprietor of a growing and prospering hardware business, now the largest store of its kind in Bluefield and Mercer County. Mr. Whitlow is a thorough business man, but had the broad interest of one who reads a great deal of good literature and keeps in touch with the welfare of his community.

In March, 1915, at Appomattox, Virginia, he married Miss Margaret Flesman, a native of Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Whitlow are members of the Presbyterian Church. He is a Royal Arch and Knight Templar Mason and Shriner, a member of the Elks, and is identified with the Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club at Bluefield.

JOHN H. RINER. With all the calls upon his time and labor involved in the care and ownership of his farm and orchards, John H. Riner acts upon the principle that some of his duty is owed to the community where he lives. He has been an influence for good and orderly government in Berkeley County for a number of years, and is now in his second year of service as county assessor.

Mr. Riner was born on a farm in Falling Waters District of Berkeley County, son of George P. Riner, who was born on the same farm in 1840, a grandson of Henry Riner, whose birth occurred in Bach Creek Valley. The great-grandfather, Peter Riner, was a pioneer in Bach Creek Valley, bought land there and later acquired a tract in Falling Waters District, but did not complete the payments, since his son, Henry Riner, assumed the indebtedness and undertook the further improvement of the land in the Falling Waters District at the beginning of his independent career. When he located there only a few acres had been cleared, and one or two log buildings constituted the other improvements. His industry carried him through, and in later years he enjoyed the revenue from his independent career. When he located there only a few acres had been cleared, and one or two log buildings constituted the other improvements. His industry carried him through, and in later years he enjoyed the revenue from his independent career.

George P. Riner succeeded to the ownership of the old homestead in the Falling Waters District, and lived there the rest of his life. During the war between the states this region was overrun by both armies, and he lost a great deal of produce and live stock. George P. Riner died on April 5, 1906, and his wife died just one week later. Her maiden name was Mary Quilliams. She was born in Opequan District, daughter of Henry Quilliams. George P. Riner and wife had a large family of thirteen children, named Annie, John Henry, George, Lillie and Rosa twins, Mary, Maggie, William, Walter, Bessie, Theodore, Daisy and Elmer.

John Henry Riner grew to manhood in a large household where industry and other good habits prevailed. He attended the common schools, worked in the fields with his father, and at the age of twenty-two he began his independent career as a farmer on rented land. One year later his father bought the farm he had been operating as a tenant, and he continued its management for five years and then acquired the property from his father. That has been his home ever since. The farm is on the Warm Springs Road, and when it first came into his possession it contained ninety-five acres and he has since added about thirty acres. He has good buildings, and ten acres are devoted to orchard.

At the age of twenty-two Mr. Riner married Sarah Elizabeth Beard, who was born in Falling Waters District, a daughter of William and Isabelle (Cline) Beard. Mr. and Mrs. Riner have seven children, named, Mary, Nora, Maggie, Jane, Coe, Emma, and Miller. Nora, who was killed in a railroad accident at the age of twenty-four, was married to Harry Seibert. Emma is married to Gratton Hyer. Mary, is the wife of Champ Payne, and has a son, named Riner. Champ Coe married Agnes Lefevre, and they have three children, Helen Durward, Henry Coe and George. Mr. and Mrs. Riner are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and he is a steward in the church. In politics he has always acted as a republican, casting his first presidential vote for Benjamin Harrison. He has been a delegate to several county conventions, and was elected county assessor in 1920, his offices being in the Court House at Martinsburg. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Junior Order United American Mechanics and Patriotic Sons of America.

J. FRANK THOMPSON is engaged in the real estate and insurance business in his native city of Martinsburg, Berkeley County, where he formerly served as postmaster. His father, Samuel J. Thompson, was born on what is known as the Bower farm, in the south part of Berkeley County, in the year 1831, a son of James Thompson, who was born in County Down, Ireland, his father, Joseph Thompson, having been an Orangeman and his property having, therefore, been confiscated by the government, a property now said to be held by the Duke of Antrim. Upon leaving his native land Joseph Thompson came with his family to America, soon after the War of the Revolution, and he settled in what is now Berkeley County, West Virginia, where he became superintendent of the Dandridge estate and where he remained until his death, he having served as a soldier in the War of 1812 and on this account having been granted a tract of land in Iowa. James

Thompson was twelve years old at the time of the family immigration to America, and prior to this time he had read the Bible through three times, his parents having been devout members of the Presbyterian Church. He learned the trade of weaver, and in this connection eventually was placed in charge of the woolen mill on the Dandridge estate. He was eighty years of age at the time of his death. Samuel J. Thompson was reared on the farm, and he continued his alliance with farm industry until he went forth as a Confederate soldier in the Civil war. He enlisted in Company B, Fourteenth Virginia Cavalry, which became a part of the famous Stonewall Brigade and with which he participated in many engagements, including a number of the important battles of the great conflict. After the close of the war he entered the employ of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, and he served several years as a conductor on its lines. After his retirement he continued his residence at Martinsburg until his death, at the age of eighty-three years. His wife, whose maiden name was Sally Reed, was born at Martinsburg, a daughter of James and Ann (Snyder) Reed, the former of whom was born at Martinsburg in the year 1818, the house in which he was born being now occupied by his grandsons and being one of the landmarks of the city. His father was a weaver and operated a mill on Tuscarawas Run, at East John Street, his son James having succeeded to ownership of the mill and having also erected and operated another mill, on Tuscarawas Run, 1½ miles west of Martinsburg. Samuel J. and Sally (Reed) Thompson became the parents of ten sons and three daughters, namely: James F., Annie Lee, John M., Chester E., Robert S., Harry S., Mildred E., J. Frank, George C., Lewis H., Benjamin J., Sally Virginia and Earl B.

J. Frank Thompson gained his early education in the public schools and thereafter became a clerk in the store of his brother, Col. John Thompson, who was a dealer in men's furnishing goods. He later became a partner in the business, and with the same he continued his active connection until 1913, when he was appointed postmaster of Martinsburg. He served eight years in this office and then resigned, on account of a change in the national administration. He had since been successfully engaged in the real estate and insurance business, of which he is a leading representative at Martinsburg.

Mr. Thompson has taken a lively and loyal interest in civic affairs and has been influential in the local councils of the democratic party, he having served as a member of the party's committee for this congressional district, as well as its executive committees for Berkeley County and for the City of Martinsburg. He is a member of the local Kiwanis Club; Washington Lodge No. 1, Knights of Pythias; the Patriotic Order of the Sons of America and the Improved Order of Red Men. He cast his first presidential vote for William J. Bryan and has since continued an admirer of the "Great Commoner." He and his wife are zealous members of the Baptist Church in their home city, and he has served on its Official Board for twenty-five years as a trustee and also as treasurer.

September 19, 1897, recorded the marriage of Mr. Thompson and Miss Bessie L. Sydnor, who was born in Shenandoah, Virginia, a daughter of Dr. Charles W. and Mary (Davis) Sydnor. The father of Dr. Sydnor came from England to the United States and served as a member of the American Navy in the War of 1812. He was captured by the British and received ill treatment at the hands of his captors. After his release he was placed in charge of an American war vessel, and as its commander he had the satisfaction of capturing the vessel and crew of the British boat that had captured him. Dr. Charles W. Sydnor became a member of the faculty of the medical department of the University of Maryland, and in the Civil war he served on the staff of General Magruder. The wife of the Doctor was a representative of the same family as was Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson have six children: C. W. Sydnor, Joseph L., Mary Louise, Bessie Sydnor, Annie Lee and Helen.

THOMAS ELKINS LEE. In the course of his early business experience, Mr. Lee became associated with the fortunes of that phenomenal industry, the Coca Cola Company of Atlanta, and when, some fifteen or sixteen years ago, he selected Clarksburg as his permanent business headquarters he built the plant for the bottling and distribution of Coca Cola products, and he has since made that one of the most prosperous concerns of the kind in the state.

Thomas Elkins Lee is a native of old Virginia and a descendant of a chain of the Lee family of that date. He was born at Liberty (now Bedford) in Bedford County, June 6, 1870, son of Thomas Newell and Sarah Leak (Gills) Lee. The parents were also born in old Virginia, and while his father lived on a farm he was a man of pronounced technical ability, was at one time a professor of mathematics and for many years a civil engineer engaged extensively in railroad construction work.

One of a family of eight children, Thomas Elkins Lee at an early age stood face to face with the serious responsibilities of life, and after securing an academic education, and at the age of twenty-one, he left home and began the battle of life for himself. For three years he was in the lumber business at Lynchburg, Virginia, then followed farming in his native county four years, and after selling the farm removed to Atlanta, Georgia, where he was connected with the Coca Cola Company for two years. On returning to Virginia he opened up the territory for the sale and bottling of coca cola in the territory adjacent to Danville.

Mr. Lee removed to Clarksburg, West Virginia, in 1906, and acquired the Coca Cola interests for this territory. He is now sole proprietor of the bottling works, and has one of the most thoroughly modern plants of its kind in the state, the building being after his own plans of construction, and equipped with every mechanical device for a thorough and efficient handling of the product. In addition to his bottling works Mr. Lee is vice president of the Acme Ice Company of Grafton, and is vice president of the Federal Carbonic Company of Fairmont.

The reasons that prompted him to locate at Clarksburg have many times been justified, and incidental thereto he has invested heavily in local real estate and is one of the city's most ardent friends. He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis, Country, Allegheny and Cheat Mountain Clubs, is a democrat in politics, a member of the Baptist Church and for thirty years has been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

In 1895 Mr. Lee married Miss Eustons Wells, a native of old Virginia and of a prominent old family of that date. The six children of Mr. and Mrs. Lee are Edward, Jimmie (Miss), Russell, Virginia, Thomas and Eustons.

J. LOGAN HILL is president and general manager of the Hill Motor Company, with headquarters in the City of Welch, McDowell County, and with branches at Bluefield, Northfork Williamson and Mullens. The company in the fall of 1921 completed its fine new plant at Welch, and the same is said to be the sixth in relative size and capacity in the entire United States. Its equipment is maintained at the highest modern standard, with the best of repair shops and storage rooms. The building is six stories and basement, and is used exclusively for the accommodation of the business of the Hill Motor Company. Here the company has the agency for the celebrated Cadillac and Buick automobiles and the White and Commerce Motor Trucks. The company's trade territory includes McDowell, Mercer, Wyoming and Mingo counties, West Virginia, and Tazewell County, Virginia, and the concern figures also as wholesale dealers in gasoline and lubricating oils, as well as in general lines of automobile accessories. The central plant at Welch is probably the most complete in West Virginia, and the business is of broad scope and importance, with a constantly cumulative tendency. The company was organized by Mr. Hill in the year 1916 and was incorporated with a capital stock of $20,000. The business of the company for the year 1921 aggregated about one million and a quarter dollars.

John Logan Hill was born at Alderson, Monroe County, West Virginia, on the 24th of May, 1885, and is a son of Albert and Leona (Tinch) Hill, the former of whom was born at old Brownstown, near Charleston, and the latter in Greenbrier County. The father was engaged in the insurance business at Alderson at the time of his death, in 1889, his wife having died in 1887. The subject of this sketch was thus doubly orphaned when he was a child of four years, and he was reared in the home of his maternal grandfather, James G. Tinch. After having duly attended the public schools Mr. Hill continued his studies in the Allegheny Collegiate Institute at Alderson, and after leaving school he drove a milk wagon for one of his uncles at Richwood, Nicholas County. Later he devoted about eight years to clerking in mercantile establishments, and thereafter he was engaged in the livery business at Alderson two years. He next accepted the position of collector for the firm of Hoffmyer & Degans at Mount Hope, and after serving three years in this capacity he removed, in 1914, to Welch. In 1916 he here organized the Hill Motor Company, and in this connection he has gained fine vantage-place as one of the progressive and representative young business men of the city. He is a republican in politics, and has given loyal service as a member of the City Council. He is a Knight Templar Mason and a member of the Mystic Shrine.

In 1907 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Hill and Miss Arlie E. Sly, of Spartansburg, Pennsylvania, and they have one son, Howard.

REV. JOHN McELHENNEY, D. D., was one of the remarkable characters in the ministry and citizenship of old Greenbrier County. For more than sixty-two years he was pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Lewisburg. This church itself is one of the oldest in the state, established in 1796.

Rev. John McElhenney was born in Lancaster District of South Carolina, March 22, 1781, youngest of the six children of John and Ann (Coil) McElhenney. His father fought as a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and died soon after the close of that struggle. The educational training of the son was largely directed by his older brother, Rev. J. McElhenney. Rev. John McElhenney also attended Washington Academy and the old Liberty Hall Academy, graduating from the latter in 1804. He was licensed by the Lexington Presbytery in 1808.

In the Spring of 1809 he was assigned to the pastorate of Lewisburg, in what is now West Virginia. The Presbyterian Church at that time was the central institution of the community, and its pastor was not only the recognized head of the flock, but a leader in every department of the community's affairs. He had the character that well fitted him for such responsibility, and his life was a long and utmost devotion to his church, the cause of christianity, the counsel and guidance of his fellow men, and both in Greenbrier County and in wider sections of the state he was thoroughly beloved. Few men had as many friends. He administered the affairs of the church and the neighborhood for over sixty years, though in later years he was given an assistant.

Mr. McElhenney, who died January 2, 1871, married on December 7, 1807, Rebecca Walkup. Their children were James Addison, Elizabeth Ann, John Franklin, Samuel Washington, Mary Jane and Susan Emily.

ALONZO C. KELLY is county superintendent of schools for Mason County, and has given about thirty years of his active lifetime to educational affairs.

He was born in Putnam County, West Virginia, May 29, 1863, son of Isaiah Kelly, a native of Pennsylvania, whose active career was spent as a flour miller and farmer in Gallia County, Ohio, where he died in 1875. He was a Union soldier in the Civil war. The mother of Superintendent Kelly was Samantha Jane Barcus, who was born in Ohio in 1844 and died in Mason County, West Virginia, in August, 1918. Her children were Alonzo C. J. John, deceased; Nelson, of Huntington; Maggie; and Isaac.

Alonzo C. Kelly acquired his early education in the rural schools of Gallia County, and in 1876 his mother moved to the Arbuckle District of Mason County, where he continued to attend school and at the age of twenty-one began teaching. In the intervals of teaching he attended Marshall College at Huntington, in 1884-5-6 and in 1915, took a teacher's training course at Lebanon, Ohio, in 1890, and for two and half years was a student of medicine at Louisville, Kentucky. Mr. Kelly was elected county superintendent of schools of Mason in November, 1918, and his four year term began July 1, 1919. Under his supervision are a staff of 194 teachers and a scholarship enrollment of 5400.

Mr. Kelly has figured prominently in the affairs of the county for many years. For four years he was justice of the peace in Arbuckle District, where he owns a farm of 100 acres, and has a residence at Henderson. He was elected on the republican ticket to the State Legislature in November, 1907, and again in 1911. He served during the sessions of 1908-09 and 1912-13. For two terms he was assistant member of the Teachers Examining Board of Mason County, and is active in all the school organizations. He is a member of the Missionary Baptist Church, Point Pleasant Lodge No. 33, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and Junior Order United American Mechanics.

In 1895, at Gallipolis, Ohio, he married Miss Cora Laywell, daughter of Rev. Abraham H. and Catherine (First) Laywell. Her father, now deceased, was a minister of the Missionary Baptist Church. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Kelly: Lowell C., the oldest, saw service in France for a year, being assigned to clerical duty, and is now an employee of the post office department at Washington. Maggie May is a teacher in the rural schools of Mason County. Gladys is the wife of Robert Durst, a mechanic at Henderson, West Virginia. The younger children are Marvin L., Evelyn, Vivian and Lawrence.

JOHN MARION SYDENSTRICKER, whose death occurred on the 31st of January, 1901, was a life long resident of Greenbrier County, and his character was the positive expression of a strong, noble and loyal nature that made him a man of influence in the county and that gained to him the high regard of all who knew him. His age at the time of his death was sixty-four years and two months, and his sterling character and worthy achievement make most impressive his recognition in a tribute in this history.

A son of the late Andrew and Frances (Coffman) Sydenstricker, the subject of this memoir was born on the old family homestead farm in Greenbrier County, the second in a family of seven sons and two daughters, all of whom with his exception are living. The parents provided for their children the best possible educational advantages, and four of the sons are clergymen of the Presbyterian Church, while another is a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Of the earlier phases of the career of Mr. Sydenstricker the following statements have been written: "John M. Sydenstricker, though not a college graduate, was yet a well educated man, receiving his training in some of the excellent classical schools of the county prior to the Civil war, and having been a student at Frankford in 1861, when the war broke out. He taught school a number of years, read extensively, and acquired much literary and general information that was of great service to him in after years.

"Upon the outbreak of the war between the states, in 1861, he volunteered in Company D, Sixtieth Virginia Infantry, Confederate States of America, but was afterward transferred to the Twenty-sixth Virginia (Edgar's) Battalion, in which he served three years, seeing much hard service in battle and on the march. Escaping the dangers of the war, he returned to Greenbrier at its close, taught school for some years, then married and settled down to the active life of a farmer, in which he took a most commendable interest, being always an intelligent leader in every moment for the betterment of his class and the improvement of agricultural and horticultural methods. He studied both from the practical as well as the scientific standpoint, and in all meetings of the Grange or other organizations of the kind was ever ready with valuable suggestions gathered from careful study and observation."

From the same source as the above quotation, a newspaper article that appeared at the time of his death, are drawn, with minor changes, the following additional words of appreciation: "Mr. Sydenstricker held many public positions of more or less dignity and importance, and the number and character of these positions show the esteem and confidence in which he was uniformly held. He was elected justice of the peace in 1872; president of the County Court in 1874; member of the House of Delegates of the State Legislature in 1880, 1886 and 1890; was a director of the Second Hospital for the Insane at Spencer in 1887, was made president of the board of this institution and served five years; received a flattering vote for the democratic nomination for governor of West Virginia in 1892; was commissioned by the Governor, delegate to the International Farmers Congress, Chicago, in 1893, to the Farmers National Congress at Parkersburg, West Virginia, in 1894, and to the National Good Roads Congress, Atlanta, Georgia, in 1895; was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Union Theological Seminary, by appointment of the Virginia Synod of the Presbyterian Church in 1871; was three times a delegate to the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, and in 1893 was appointed state commissioner of labor by Governor Mac Corkle, holding the office four years. His instructive reports as labor commissioner were highly valued by the press and the people. In the latter years of his life Mr. Sydenstricker was president of the Farmers Home Life Insurance Company. He long gave earnest service as an elder of the Presbyterian Church at Lewisburg, from which his funeral was held.

"Mr. Sydenstricker was entirely free from anything like ostentation. He was modest, of a retiring disposition, and inclined to underestimate his own capacity. He was never self-assertive, shrank from contention and strife, and, though holding decided views and opinions, was always modest in asserting them. He was an excellent neighbor, kind and helpful to the poor, liberal in his contributions to any good cause, active in church work, and interested in all movements, social, political or religious, advanced for the good of the people among whom he lived."

In the year 1866 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Sydenstricker and Mrs. Mary Surbaugh, a widow with one daughter, Nannie, both of whom survive him. Mr. and Mrs. Sydenstricker became the parents of three sons: John B., who was born December 5, 1866, was reared on the old home farm, received excellent educational advantages and has continued his allegiance to the basic industries of agriculture, horticulture and stock-growing in his native county. He has been a vital supporter of progressive movements in the advancing of farm industry, and is one of the representative farmers of Greenbrier County, besides which he is serving, 1922, as president of the Greenbrier County Fair Association. His political allegiance is given to the democratic party, and he and his family are members of the Presbyterian Church. October 2, 1889, recorded his marriage with Miss Mary B. Farrier, and their four children are Ernest F., John M., Robert E. and Charles Thomas. Thomas A., the second son of the subject of this memoir, was born June 5, 1868, and is now identified with milling enterprise at Lewisburg. August 11, 1891, he wedded Miss Mary B. Clark, of Pocahontas County, where they maintained their home until removed to Lewisburg, Mr. Sydenstricker having been a farmer in that county thirty years. They have two children: Annie Grace (Mrs. George E. Fuller) and Mary Agnes. Edward W., youngest of the three sons, was born October 27, 1869, has been a successful exponent of farm enterprise and has been prominently identified also with the raising, buying and selling of live stock. He now resides at Lewisburg. December 1, 1919, he married Miss Elizabeth Wilson, daughter of Andrew J. and Bettie (Tuckwiller) Wilson. He was elected a member of the County Court in 1919, and is serving in this capacity at the time of this writing, in the spring of 1922. In the Masonic fraternity he has received the Knights Templar degree.

CHARLES S. ELLIOTT, manufacturer and business man of Clarksburg, grew up in a rural district of Southeastern Pennsylvania, and while he lived in a home untouched by their dire poverty or the luxury of wealth his future depended largely on opportunities of his own contrivance. The prosperous business man of today there is nothing to reveal the youthful struggles and problems he had to meet. His ambition for proper educational equipment was not satisfied until he was twenty-six. Soon afterward he came to West Virginia in the capacity of a civil and mining engineer. For twenty years his home has been in Clarksburg, and throughout this period he has been one of the city's most forceful business men.

Mr. Elliott was born at Redstone, Fayette County, Pennsylvania, February 24, 1872, son of Robert and Sarah (Gore) Elliott, who spent their lives as Pennsylvania farmers. They had a family of ten children and reared nine, six sons and three daughters, Charles being next to the youngest. In such a large household Charles S. Elliott had to be satisfied without special privileges and beyond the common schools of his home district he largely paid for his own education. For eighteen months he attended a state normal school in Washington, Pennsylvania, and subsequently he entered West Virginia University, at Morgantown. He graduated in 1898, with the degree Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering.

The Pittsburg Coal Company then employed him as a mining and civil engineer, and for a time he was employed in a similar capacity by the Monongahela Coal Company. He removed to Clarksburg in 1902 and was the technical expert in opening the Perry Mines at Adamston and the Lucas Mine at Lumberport, both these being Perry properties. After two years Mr. Elliott sold his interest in this business and for eighteen months was superintendent of the Short Line Coal Company at Dala.

About that time Mr. Elliott acquired some stock in the Clarksburg Window Glass Company, manufacturers of hand made glass. For the past twelve years he has been actively associated with this company and for ten years has been its president. He has made this one of the important glass industries of West Virginia, the output being shipped all over the country. It is a business employing about three hundred men.

Mr. Elliott in 1918 helped organize the Hudson Coal Company of Clarksburg, and was its president two years and is still a director. He was one of the organizers in 1914 of the Clarksburg Trust Company, and is one of the original Board of Directors still in service. As a successful business man he has diversified his interests and investments, and is owner of considerable real estate in and around Clarksburg.

Mr. Elliott is a York and Scottish Rite Mason and Shriner, and he and Mrs. Elliott are Presbyterians and both of them active republicans. Mrs. Elliott is chairman of the Harrison County Republican Central Committee. September 15, 1901, he married Miss Emma K. Kinder, of Washington County, Pennsylvania, daughter of H. H. and Marie (Bailey) Kinder. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott live in one of the commodious homes of Clarksburg, at 950 West Pike Street.

GEORGE PARKS WHITAKER. The name Whitaker has been practically synonymous with the iron and steel industry of the Wheeling District for a great many years. It makes up part of the title of the Whitaker-Glessner Company, one of the largest steel industries in the Ohio Valley and subsidiary of the Wheeling Steel Corporation.

He attended the local Linsly Institute, and spent eight years in Lawrenceville Preparatory School and Cornell University, graduating from both. He was a student at Lawrenceville from 1907 to 1911, and at Cornell University from 1911 to 1915. He had the A. B. degree from Cornell in 1915 and is a member of the Theta Delta Chi fraternity. In 1915 he entered the steel industry with the Whitaker-Glessner Company plant at Portsmouth, Ohio. He remained there until August 1, 1920, with the exception of eighteen months in service as First Lieutenant of Artillery. He then came to Wheeling and was elected secretary of the Whitaker-Glessner Company. He is also secretary and treasurer of the Beech Bottom Land Company.

Mr. Whitaker is a member of the Episcopal Church, the Wheeling Country Club, and is a republican. His home is at Bae Mar, Wheeling. April 3, 1918, at Zanesville, Ohio, he married Miss Augusta Connelley Haldeman, daughter of Lunsford and Grace Haldeman, residents of Portsmouth, Ohio, where her father is president of the Kentucky Fire Brick Company. Mrs. Whitaker finished her education at Dana Hall, Wellesley College, Massachusetts. They have two sons, Nelson Evans Whitaker, Jr., born November 11, 1919, and Harry Cecil Whitaker, born August 26, 1922.

EDWARD HINES, who died December 18, 1909, was one of the early settlers of White Sulphur Springs, and one of the men who from the beginning played a very important part in the development of this part of Greenbrier County. Always public-spirited, he looked forward and was able to see the value of a project, not only for the immediate present, but to those who were to come after him, and acted accordingly. So it is that although his earthly career is ended, the influence of what he accomplished while here lives after him and will for a long time have its effect on the lives of the people among whom he spent so many of his useful years.

The birth of Edward Hines occurred at Acres, near Balleyvaughan, County Clare, Ireland, August 9, 1831, and there he grew to manhood, during that period receiving but few educational opportunities. In 1852, with his parents and their other children, he immigrated to the United States and on the same vessel with the Hines family came that of the Leonards, the head of which was Peter Leonard. Edward Hines, or Hynes as the name was originally spelled, found employment after landing in the new country in the construction of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. In 1869, while a resident of Greenbrier County, he took out his naturalization papers. His father died about this time and was buried at Point Pleasant, Mason County, West Virginia.

After the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad was completed Edward Hines came to White Sulphur Springs and here embarked in mercantile pursuits, in which he continued to be active for many years, but prior to his death he retired and for a short period enjoyed the leisure and comforts his industry entitled him to have. On one of his journeys to Baltimore, Maryland, to buy goods for his store he came up with the family of Peter Leonard, and the pleasant acquaintanceship begun on board ship several years previously was renewed, with the result that on May 5, 1867, Edward Hines and Mary Leonard, a daughter of Peter Leonard, were united in marriage. To them were born the following children: John Leonard, Mary, Michael Lawrence, Edward Alphonsus, William Sherman, William Bartholomew and Edward Vincent. From the above it is to be seen that two of the children were named William and two Edward. Of all of these only Mary, John Leonard and William Bartholomew are now living.

The eldest of the family, John Leonard, has attained to world-fame, and is the pride of Greenbrier County and West Virginia. He was educated at West Point, and had become a major in the regular army prior to the World war. With this country's entry into that gigantic conflict he was commissioned a lieutenant colonel; was subsequently promoted to the command of the Twenty-sixth Infantry, and when the armistice was signed he was a corps commander, with the rank of major general.

The only other surviving son, William Bartholomew, was born August 21, 1878, at White Sulphur Springs, and there attended the public schools. He has always been very prominent in the life of his home city, which he served as postmaster for fifteen years. With others he assisted in organizing the Bank of White Sulphur Springs, of which he was first cashier and later president. At present he is conducting the only moving picture theatre at White Sulphur Springs, and through it giving the people clean and entertaining recreation. He is a republican, an Elk and a Catholic.

On September 15, 1915, William B. Hines married Miss Norah Cahill, a daughter of Mathew Cahill, a native of Ireland, where he died. Mrs. Hines was born in County Galway, Ireland.

CHARLES D. BOWMAN. One of West Virginia's native sons who has won his success in the state of his birth is Charles D. Bowman, cashier of the Franklin Bank, of Franklin, and a prominent and influential citizen of his community. For some years he has been identified with the public-spirited movements that have contributed to the advancement of Pendleton County, and formerly was prominent in mercantile affairs at Moorefield and served as sheriff of Hardy County.

Mr. Bowman was born in Lost River District, on Lost River, Hardy County, West Virginia, February 5, 1867, and is a son of Jacob Bowman. He belongs to one of the old and honored families of the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, where was born his paternal grandfather, John Bowman, who spent the greater part of his life in agricultural pursuits in Shenandoah County, but in the evening of life moved to the Lost River country of Hardy County, where he died in 1888, when about seventy-six years of age. On the issues of the war between the states he was unequivocally a Confederate sympathizer, but was not eligible for military service. John Bowman married Mary Hinegardner, who belonged to a family which, like the Bowmans, was of German origin. The Hinegardners were also farming people. Mrs. Hinegardner passed away some years prior to the death of her husband. They were the parents of the following children: Silon, a Confederate soldier during the war between the states and after that a farmer in Hardy County, where his death occurred; Mary, who became Mrs. Bowman; Isaac, who was a farmer throughout life and passed away in Hardy County; Sallie, who married John Harper and died in Augusta County, Virginia; Amanda, who died as the wife of Benjamin Hinegardner; Asemetta, who married Joseph May; John, who is engaged in farming in Shenandoah County, Virginia; Laura, who married John See and resides in Hardy County; and Eliza, who is Mrs. Frank Miller, of Hardy County.

Jacob Bowman was born in Shenandoah County, Virginia, and passed his life in the pursuits of the soil, but while he was a man of industry he did not accumulate a competence, as he lived only to middle life, passing away when his son Charles D. was still young. He and his wife had only this one son. After his death his widow married for her second husband John Mathias, and they had the following children: Jimmie, who died in boyhood; Kate, who married Moses Snyder and is a resident of the Lost River locality of Hardy County; Philip S., who is a farmer and merchant; O. Mathias, that county; Martha, who married Arthur Snyder and is a resident of the Mathias community; John, who is engaged in farming in the Lost River section; and Etta the wife of Loy Moyer, of Rockingham County, Virginia.

Charles D. Bowman attended the district schools of the Lost River community and spent part of a term at the Fairmont Normal School, following which he remained at home and learned the trade of carpenter. After following his trade for something under two years he found that it was not congenial and turned his attention to merchandising at a Lost City, where he remained as a merchant for about six years. Thereafter he left that community and established himself in the hotel business at Moorefield, conducting a well-patronized establishment for four years, at the end of which time he was elected sheriff of Hardy County, to succeed Sheriff John C. Fisher. He served four years in that office, from 1905 to 1909, and when he returned to civil life became a clerk in the general merchandise store of R. A. Wilson of Moorefield. He remained with that establishment for four years and then, in February, 1914, came to Franklin, Pendleton County, which has since been his home. At the time of his arrival Mr. Bowman succeeded C. F. Hammer as cashier of the Franklin Bank, which was organized in 1910 and opened the doors for business in 1911. It is capitalized at $40,000 and is accounted one of the strong and reliable banking institutions of the county. Mr. Bowman has formed many pleasant associations since his arrival at Franklin, and has made lasting friendship which have rebounded to his own benefit and to that of the bank of which he is a representative. A democrat in politics, he cast his first presidential vote for Grover Cleveland and has helped to elect two democratic presidents. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. While a resident of Moorefield in addition to being a member of the Official Board of the church and one of its active workers he served capably as superintendent of the Sunday School.

On November 4, 1895, Mr. Bowman married at Hagers-town, Maryland, Miss Bessie Seldon, who was born at Exeter, Devonshire, England, a daughter of John and Jane (Burrows) Seldon. Mr. Seldon brought his family to the United States in 1873 and established his home on a farm in Hampshire County, West Virginia, where he spent the remainder of his life as a wheelwright and vehicle builder, his death occurring at Cape Bridge about 1890. Mrs. Seldon survived him some years, passing away in 1909. They were highly respected people of their community and had numerous friends. Mr. and Mrs. Seldon had the following children: Will, who is engaged in agricultural pursuits in Hampshire County; Charlotte, who died as the wife of John Nelson; Dan, a resident of Moorefield; Bessie, who became Mrs. Bowman; Fred, who is engaged in farming in Hampshire County; Frank and Eli, who are both deceased; and Eliza, who married Robert Miller, of Akron, Ohio. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Bowman are as follows: Mabel, Harold, Ernest, Irvin and Raymond. The first three children have finished their high school work and Ernest is a graduate of the commercial department of the Keyser Preparatory School. Mr. and Mrs. Bowman take an active interest in all that affects their community, and have been contributors to enterprises which have made for advanced education, better morals and higher citizenship.

JAMES S. CHASE takes just satisfaction in being able to further a work that is of enduring value to the community in which he resides, and he is giving a most effective administration as the incumbent of the office of county road engineer of Clay County, with headquarters at Clay, the county seat.

Mr. Chase was born in Jackson County, West Virginia, May 24, 1873, and is a son of Henry F. and Nancy M. (Windon) Chase. As a youth Henry F. Chase learned the miller's trade, to which he was giving his attention at the time when the Civil war began. His loyalty to the cause the Confederacy was shown by his enlistment in the twenty-second Virginia Infantry, with which he took part in many engagements and made a record as a gallant young soldier. After the war he continued his active association with the milling enterprise for many years, and he and his wife were residents of Jackson County, this state, at the time of their deaths, she having been a member of the Presbyterian church and his political allegiance having been given to the democratic party. Of their four children three are living at the time of this writing: John J. is engaged in the real-estate business at Pleasants, this state; James S., of his sketch, is the next younger; and Linnie E. is the wife of Frank Roush, of Ripley, Jackson County.

The public schools of Jackson County afforded James S. Chase his early education, and later he took a correspondence course in civil engineering. Under the direction of his father he learned the trade of millwright, and he followed the same for a time, his independent career having been initiated when he was seventeen years of age. He gave effective service as county road engineer in Jackson County, and this experience fortified him greatly when he assumed a similar office in Clay County, where he is doing a most excellent work in connection with the improvement of the roads of the county. In politics he is independent, and he supports men and measures meeting the approval of his judgment. He is a past master of Ripley Lodge No. 16, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Ripley, Jackson County, and is affiliated also with Pleasants Chapter, Royal Arch Mason, at Pleasants, Pleasants County. His wife is an active member of the Baptist Church.

Mr. Chase married Miss Myrtle A. Childs, who was born and reared in Jackson County, and they have five children: Maxine M. (wife of E. Muller), Bertha E., Henry C., Helen and James J.

WILLIAM L. FOSTER. The remarkable industrial development of Raleigh County has had an actor as well as a witness in the person of William L. Foster, who has contributed some of the physical labor as well as business management to the progress of this locality. While his early years brought him familiarity with considerable hardship and privation, he is reckoned one of the most prosperous men of the county, and is undoubtedly one of the best known citizens.

Mr. Foster, who is a former sheriff of the county, is president of the Raleigh Herald Company and general manager of the Electric Light and Power Company at Beckley. He was born at Sophia on Soap Creek, in the town district of Raleigh County, September 3, 1872, son of Joseph and Rosie (Gray) Foster. His parents were born in Montgomery County, Virginia, and were children when their respective parents moved to West Virginia. They were married in Raleigh County. The paternal grandfather was Hugh Foster and the maternal grandfather was John W. Gray, both farmers. The Fosters were Methodists and the Grays were members of the Dunkard Church. Joseph Foster, now seventy-one years of age and living at Pipestem in Summers County, has spent his active life as a farmer, and is now a republican, though in early years a democrat. He is a Methodist. William L. Foster was the only child of his mother, who died when he was five years of age. The second wife of Joseph Foster was Martha, daughter of Silas Lemon and sister of Captain James Lemon of Franklin County, Virginia. She died in 1914.

William L. Foster acquired such education as the schools of the town district could afford, and as a boy he labored long hours on the farm, in the lumber woods and the saw mills. At that time Raleigh County had no railroad. It was a very easy matter to know every voter in the county and even his horse and dog. No mining development had been done, and the only use of coal in the locality was in a blacksmith shop. William L. Foster as a youth hauled wood over tracts of land underlaid with a six foot vein of coal. He was one of the very first to work in the coal mine at Glen Jean, under superintendent J. J. Robinson. He himself became a mining superintendent. In 1898 he removed to Beckley, and was employed in the store of E. D. George and later in the store of the Raleigh Coal Company. He then engaged in the fuel business for himself. Mr. Foster in 1908 organized the Raleigh Bottling Works, and had active charge for a time. In 1912 he took charge of the Beckley Electric Light & Power Company. His election to the office of sheriff came in 1916, and during the four years he was in office he resigned the management but still remained vice president and director of the Electric Light Company. During his term of sheriff Mr. Foster probably captured more moonshine stills than all other sheriffs in the state of the county put together.

At the close of his official term on January 1, 1921, he resumed his post as general manager of the Beckley Light & Power Company. The Herald Publishing Company, of which he is president, publishes the Herald, the leading republican paper of Raleigh County.

On June 20, 1900, Mr. Foster married Lottie Selater, daughter of Hamilton Selater. Their three children are Edgar Selater, Roy Gray and William L., Jr.

Under the provisions of the second draft law at the time of the World War Mr. Foster was just a few days too old and his son Edgar just a few days too young to be included within its provision. Mr. Foster is clerk of the First Baptist Church of Beckley, is interested in the Sunday School work. Is a Royal Arch Mason, a republican and a member of the Kiwanis Club and Chamber of Commerce.

OLIVER LEE FOSTER. Many years of successful farming, and stock raising and performance of the duties of local citizenship in the Forrest Hill district of Summers County gave Mr. Foster a reputation over the county that enabled him to command a majority vote of confidence when he was candidate for sheriff in 1920. In this office he has made a splendid record of efficiency, and he is one of the ablest men in the court house at Hinton.

Mr. Foster was born on New River Mountain in Summers County, August 29, 1864, son of James E. and Mary W. (Allen) Foster, both natives of Monroe County. His father died at the age of seventy in 1902, and his mother, at the age of seventy-one in 1898. James E. Foster was a lifelong farmer and widely known as a dealer in livestock, which he bought and collected in this section of the state and drove to market. He was a republican and a Baptist. Oliver Lee Foster is the youngest in a family of six sons and six daughters. He has three living brothers: J. D. Foster, a retired farmer at Columbus, Ohio; J. A. Foster, a farmer on Little Wolf Creek; and P. M. Foster, a farmer at Forrest Hill.

Oliver Lee Foster acquired a free school education. When he was thirteen years of age he joined his older brother, J. D. Foster, then fifteen, in the practical management and work of their father's farm and business. His father had become a cripple, and the management of the farm and the support of the household depended upon these young men. From this rugged apprenticeship O. L. Foster found his business vocation and farming and stock raising have been his main pursuits ever since. He takes special delight in the raising of good livestock.

Mr. Foster in his home locality has been much interested in local politics and local improvements. Some years ago he was drafted as a candidate for member of the School Board, being defeated by only four votes in the Forrest Hill District. In 1912 he was put on the republican ticket for county commissioner, being defeated by one hundred and twenty votes. Summers is one of the strongest democratic counties in the state. In the campaign of 1920 he was elected sheriff by a lead of three hundred votes.

On January 4, 1883, Mr. Foster married Etta Frances Turner, daughter of S. P. Turner, of Forrest Hill. To their marriage have been born eight children, five sons and three daughters. Sheriff Foster is a member of the Board of Stewards in the Methodist Church, and for years was recording steward of his church at Forrest Hill.

THE JARRETT FAMILY. In every community there are certain families deserving of particular consideration, sometimes because of the prominence of their members, and again on account of the length of time during which the name has been associated with local history. The Jarrett family is one of those of Greenbrier County which can claim distinction on both counts, for it is one of the oldest in this section, and those bearing the name have been more than ordinarily active along numerous lines.

James Jarrett I came to Greenbrier County in what is now West Virginia, but was then included in Virginia, in the latter part of the eighteenth century. His first wife belonged to the Griffith family, and his second one was a Vinson. He was the father of eighteen sons and four daughters born to these two marriages. An extensive landowner and slaveholder, he was a man of large wealth, and the Jarretts of Southeastern West Virginia are descended from him.

One of his sons, James II, married Ruth Gwinn, and they had twelve children, and one of them was James III, who married Elizabeth Hickman, and after her death, Ann Boyd, and for his third wife, Julia Ann Ellis. The children of James II were: Samuel, Joseph, Andrew, Ira, Jacob, James III, Belle, Rose, Margaret, Ruth and Delia. The children born to James III were: Margaret Victoria, who married H. H. George, Thompson, Hickman, Floyd, James Henry, Mark and Ira. James II also became a large landowner, and it appears to be a family practice to invest heavily in real estate. He was a magistrate for a time, and by virtue of this was also county sheriff, ex-officio, but instead of serving as such he turned his office over to his son, James III.

James III was born April 25, 1815, and died January 4, 1884. He probably was the largest landowner among the Jarretts. After the close of the war of the '60s he moved to Monroe County, and was elected to represent it in the State Legislature when the capital was at Wheeling, and discharged the obligations pertaining thereto with dignified capability, as he had those of sheriff of Greenbrier County with effective courage. He was a man of strong mind and unusual intellectual attainments, a shrewd trader, equal to his surroundings in all respects, and by reason of his integrity commanded universal respect. He had exemplary habits, and did not use liquor or tobacco in any form. His effort in life seemed to be to educate his children, to give them a start in life, and to bring them up to the dignity of American citizenship.

Thompson Hickman Jarrett, son of James III, was born June 25, 1851, in Greenbrier County, West Virginia. He graduated from Roanoke College, Virginia, in 1877, and for some months thereafter followed the occupation of school-teaching at Henrietta, Texas, but then returned and bought the Andrew Hamilton place near Blue Sulphur Springs in Greenbrier County. Here he has since resided, being engaged in farming and cattle raising. Ever since the Alderson National Bank was organized in 1909 he has served as its president. Prior to that he had become identified with the Bank of Alderson, of which he was president, which, in 1902, became the First National Bank of Alderson, and served the latter as president until 1909. His father was a republican, but he is a democrat, and he was elected to the State Legislature on his party ticket in 1895, re-elected in 1899, and again in 1901. In 1909 he was elected sheriff of Greenbrier County, and served as such for four years. It is a somewhat remarkable fact that both he and his father served as sheriff of Greenbrier County and in the State Assembly, and he, too, is an extensive landowner, holding a larger amount of acreage than any other man in Greenbrier County.

On October 5, 1877, Thompson Hickman Jarrett married George Russell Morgan, and they have the following children: James H. IV, who is mentioned below; Leake, who is Mrs. D. W. Watts; Vivian, who is Mrs. John Malcolm Wood; Nellie Gordon, who married Dr. D. R. Nikell; and Pauline, who is Mrs. J. W. Huff. Of these children James H. Jarrett, IV, married Lelia McClung, and they have eight children: Winnifred, James Hickman, V. Mary, Floyd, Stuart, Georgia, Samuel and Joseph Wing.

Mark Jarrett, another son of James III, was born in 1855, and possessed a brilliant mind and achieved high honors. At Roanoke College, where he was educated, he ranked high in oratory, and it was said of him that he stood second only to his father in intellectual attainments among the Jarretts.

Becoming a lawyer, he maintained an office at Lewisburg and later at Hinton, West Virginia, and was recognized as an attorney of unusual ability. He married Lula Garst in 1883, moved to Portland, Oregon, in 1886, and died there in October, 1888, passing away in the prime of life and the full power of his capabilities.

The only survivor of the children of Mark Jarrett is Mark L. Jarrett, of Alderson. He was born at Portland, Oregon, September 4, 1886, and was there reared. He completed his scholastic training at the University of Virginia, from which he was graduated with honors in 1907, and with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. For two years thereafter he was a law student there, and was admitted to the bar in 1908, and immediately thereafter opened his office at Lewisburg, but he maintains his residence at Alderson. In 1912 Mr. Jarrett was elected prosecuting attorney of Green County, and served very acceptably as such for two years.

On September 7, 1907, Mark L. Jarrett married Miss Katherine Hill, of Tama, Iowa, and they have one son, John Franklin.

From the above brief record of the Jarrett family it is not difficult to determine the reason for classifying it as distinguished. Its members have in each case cited, proved themselves worthy of the approval and emulation of their associates; they have built up large estates and capably managed them; their contributions to the professions have been noteworthy, and as public officials they have been fearless, upright and dependable. In private life they have been equally trustworthy, and the name has become a synonym for integrity and highest ideals.

J. T. FERRELL, M. D. The master spirit of the town of New Haven in Mason County is Doctor Ferrell, who besides his busy practice as a physician and surgeon is president of the bank and president of nearly all the important institutions that give significance to this community, while his interests also extend to the adjacent town of Hartford.

Doctor Ferrell was born in Roane County April 9, 1836, and at the age of thirty-five he has all the attendant energy of youth and with the mature experience of a man of affairs. He is of Irish ancestry, the Ferrells having come from Ireland to Virginia in Colonial times. His grandfather, William Ferrell, was born in Roane County in 1823, spent his active life there as a farmer, and when well advanced in years moved to Jackson County, where he continued farming until his death in 1893. He was a Confederate soldier in the Civil war, going in at the beginning, and fighting at Gettysburg and in other campaigns. He married Rebecca Hammond, who was born in Jackson County in 1829, and died there in 1897. Joshua Ferrell, father of Dr. Ferrell, has spent nearly all his life in Roane County, where he was born February 22, 1861. He is still active in business as a farmer at Higby. Joshua Ferrell is a democrat, a very active member of the United Brethren Church in his community, and is affiliated with the Odd Fellows. He married Senith Audelia Casto, who was born in Jackson County April 6, 1864. Virginia Josephine, the oldest of their children, is the wife of Holley L. Rhodes, a farmer at Vickers in Roane County. Dr. J. T. Ferrell is the second in age. William P. is a farmer at Belgrove in Jackson County. Della May is the wife of Garland Kiser, a farmer at Fletcher in Jackson County. John Wesley lives with his brother Doctor Ferrell and is an employe in the porcelain plant of New Haven. Maggie Florence lives at home and is a teacher in the public schools at Higby.

Dr. J. T. Ferrell was educated in the rural schools and normal schools, taught seven terms in his native county and adjoining counties, and in 1907 graduated in the commercial course from Kentucky University at Lexington. Subsequently he spent a year in medical studies at Louisville, and from 1910 to 1913 pursued his course in the Chicago College of Medicine and Surgery, where he graduated M. D. At the same time he received a diploma from the Northern Illinois College of Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat. Returning to his native state, Doctor Ferrell practiced at Walton for one year, at Clendenin in Kanawha County one year, and since the fall of 1916 has been established at New Haven, where large demands are made upon his ability as a physician and surgeon. He is specializing in nose and throat.

Doctor Ferrell in November, 1910, organized the Mason county Bank of New Haven, and has since been its president. It was opened for business January 20, 1920, and as capital stock of $25,000 and deposits of $100,000 the vice president is Hugo Juhling, of Hartford, and the cashier, Harry L. Dyer. Doctor Ferrell also organized in 1919 and is president of the West Virginia Porcelain Company of New Haven, an important and distinctive industry. The company operates on a capital of $50,000.00, employs forty people, and manufactures large quantities of electrical porcelain, a product that is shipped all over the United States and Canada.

Doctor Ferrell is also vice president of the West Virginia Orchard Company, owns a coal mine, and is president of the West Point Coal Company at Hartford, is a director in the New Haven Flour Mill and owns the Star Theater Building in New Haven. He has other property there, including his residence and office on Pike Street.

Doctor Ferrell is a democrat, a member of the Baptist Church, and is affiliated with Higley Lodge No. 143, F. and A. M., at Highy, with Point Pleasant Chapter No. 7, R. A. M., and with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Banner Lodge No. 22, Knights of Pythias, at Hartford, Clendenin Camp No. 14287, Modern Woodmen of America. He was a member of every committee to raise the quota and perform the service needed by the Government in his locality at the time of the World war.

In October, 1909, at Charleston, Doctor Ferrell married Miss Louise Kerr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David D. Kerr. Her father was a teacher and died at Ripley. Her mother now owns and conducts the Hassler Hotel at Ripley.

OSCAR P. VINES, cashier of the Citizens National Bank at Hinton, judicial center of Summers County, was born in Mercer County, West Virginia, October 17, 1880, and is a son of John W. and Elizabeth (Ellison) Vines, both likewise natives of what is now the State of West Virginia, the father having been born in Monroe County, in 1848, and the birth of the mother having occurred in 1856, she being now a resident of Princeton, Mercer County, where the death of her husband occurred in 1909.

John W. Vines was reared in his native county, and in 1870 he established his residence in Mercer County, where he became a prosperous farmer, besides conducting a general country store at Barn. Thereafter he was for twenty-five years a leading merchant at Princeton, the county seat, and he was one of the honored and representative citizens of Mercer County at the time of his death. His political allegiance was given to the Methodist church, and he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as is also his widow. His father, Silas S. Vines, was one of the early settlers in Monroe County, whither he came from Augusta County, Virginia. He established his residence near Sinks Grove, Monroe County, and being a tailor by trade, he was called upon to make uniforms for Confederate soldiers in the Civil war, besides serving as a soldier in that conflict. Oscar P. Vines, of this review, is the eldest in a family of six children; Daisy remains with her widowed mother at Princeton; Cora is the wife of C. A. Brown, of Chicago, Illinois; Hallie is the wife of W. E. Rice, of Minden, West Virginia; Charles L. is in the employ of a coal-mining company in Fayette County; and Abney holds a position in the Virginian Bank of Commerce at Princeton.

Oscar P. Vines received the advantages of the public schools at Princeton, the Concord Normal School and the Capital City Commercial College at Charleston, in which last named institution he was graduated in 1900. As a boy he had clerked in his father's store, and after leaving the business college he served two years as bookkeeper in the office of the Noyes-Thomason Company at Charleston. During the ensuing two years he was employed in the Bank of Raleigh, at Beckley, Raleigh County, his next position being with the National Bank of Summers at Hinton. Later he was prime mover in the organization of the First National Bank of Peterstown, Monroe County, and after serving five years as cashier of this institution he returned, in 1916, to Hinton, where he has since continued the efficient cashier of the Citizens National Bank.

Mr. Vines is a loyal supporter of the principles of the democratic party, his religious faith is that of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, his wife being a member of the Baptist Church, and he is vice president of the Hinton Chamber of Commerce. In the Masonic fraternity he has received the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite, and he is affiliated also with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Knights of Pythias.

The year 1914 recorded the marriage of Mr. Vines and Miss Mabel Ould, daughter of William T. Ould, of Glenlynn, Virginia, and the one child of this union is a son, Sterling.

Mr. Vines takes deep interest in all that concerns the city and material welfare and advancement of his home city, and here he is serving as a member of the Board of Education.

G. L. Titus. An enterprise identified with the automobile industry which has been developed to appreciable proportions in recent years is the garage and salesroom of G. L. Titus & Son, sole agents for Studebaker automobiles at Huntington. The head of this firm, G. L. Titus, is one of the successful self-made business men of his city, as he started his career in a humble position in the Ohio oil fields and has worked his own way to the forefront through the exercise of diligence, intelligence and good management.

Mr. Titus was born in Elk County, Pennsylvania, July 13, 1861, and is a son of J. L. and Maria (McCracken) Titus. His paternal grandfather, Samuel Titus, was born in 1800, in Scotland, and as a young man, accompanied by his two brothers, immigrated to Oil Creek, Pennsylvania, where he settled in the community now known as Titusville, which was named in the brothers' honor. Samuel Titus resided at Titusville for some years but eventually moved to Crawford County, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death in 1895. He was a man of natural business industry and thrift and made a success of his activities. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Mary Titus, belonged to a different family, early settlers of Pittsburgh. She also died in Crawford County.

J. L. Titus, father of G. L., was born at Titusville, Pennsylvania, in 1837, and was reared in his native community where he received a public school education. He was married at Cochranton, Crawford County, following which he spent three years in the lumber business in Elk County, Pennsylvania, but finally went to Crawford County and applied himself to the vocation of farming, in which he like his father became quite successful. He died in 1906 in the faith of the Presbyterian Church, of which he had been an active supporter. Politically he was a democrat, and his fraternal affiliation was with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mr. Titus married Maria McCracken, who was born in 1845, in Crawford County, Pennsylvania, and died in that county in 1909, and they became the parents of the following children: Ella, who married George McElroy, a retired farmer of Crawford County; G. L., of this notice; William, who is a salesman for the Standard Oil Company, at Franklin, Pennsylvania; Priscilla, who is the wife of Frank McDaniel, a retired farmer of Franklin, Pennsylvania; Charles, a traveling salesman of Cochranton, Pennsylvania; Ida, who is the wife of James A. Bowen, a lease boss in the oil fields; Elizabeth, who is the wife of Allen Oakes, an agriculturist of Cochranton; and Frank M., a salesman for gas engines at Bradford, Pennsylvania.

G. L. Titus was reared on his father's farm until he reached the age of sixteen years, in the meantime receiving a rural school education, and then went to the Ohio oil fields. By youthful industry and thrift he had acquired a team of his own, and with this as his stock in trade entered business as a teamster, a line which he followed one year. He then became an oil well worker or driller, spending 1½ years in this capacity at Lima, Ohio, whence he went to Chattanooga, Tennessee and continued the same line of work for one year. Following this Mr. Titus continued the same line of work at points in Butler County, Pennsylvania, for two years; in Washington County, Pennsylvania, for a like period, and at McDowell, in the same state, for one year. In 1892 he invaded West Virginia, settling first at Sistersville, where he continued working as an oil well driller for 1½ years. His next location was Verona, Pennsylvania, where he remained one year, going then to his former place of residence, McDowell, where he passed eight months. Vencie, Pennsylvania, was then his home and the scene of his activities for two years, and in 1896 he returned to Sistersville, West Virginia. About this time he engaged in contracting in the oil fields of West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Ohio, and continued to be thus occupied until coming to Huntington in 1908, this city having since been his home and the community in which he has made his success. Mr. Titus continued interested in the contracting and oil well drilling business, in partnership with W. O. Dunham, and they are now running tools in West Virginia and Texas.

In 1917 Mr. Titus embarked in another line of activity when he purchased the business of the Three States Automobile Company, at Huntington, changing the name to G. L. Titus & Son, his son, William Roy Titus, being his partner. The salesroom, repair shop and offices are situated at 930 Third Avenue, Huntington, and the firm are the sole agents for the well-known and popular Studebaker cars, not only at Huntington, but for Lincoln, Mason and Wayne counties, West Virginia, and Rome and Union townships, Ohio. They have built up one of the leading enterprises of its kind in West Virginia. Mr. Titus is well and favorably known in business circles and is respected for his absolute integrity and honorable dealing. He is independent in his political allegiance, preferring to use his own judgment to that of party leaders. His religious connection is with the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he is a member of the official board, and also holds membership in the Guyan Country Club of Huntington. Fraternally, he belongs to Huntington Lodge No. 53, F. and A. M. of Huntington; Huntington Chapter No. 6, R. A. M.; Huntington Commandery No. 9, K. T.; Boni-Kedem Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Charleston; Huntington Lodge of Perfection No. 4; Huntington Chapter No. 4, Rose Croix; and West Virginia Consistory, thirty-second degree, of Wheeling. His civic connections include membership in the Huntington Chamber of Commerce, the Retail Business Men's Association and the Kiwanis Club, in the movements of all of which he takes an active and constructive part. Mr. Titus has faith in the future of Huntington and the vicinity and has evidenced this confidence by investing a part of his means in real estate, being the owner of a modern and comfortable home at 501 Tenth Avenue, one of the finest in the city, where he resides; eight dwellings on Guyan and First avenues; and a farm of 320 acres in Lawrence County, Kentucky.

In November, 1893, Mr. Titus married Miss Sarah Bowen, who was born at Woodland, West Virginia, a daughter of William and Sarah (Rulong) Bowen, farming people, both of whom are now deceased. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Titus: William Roy; Mary El, a graduate of the Ward-Belmont Female Seminary, at Nashville, Tennessee, who is now teaching in the public schools of Huntington; Mildred B., who attended Carnegie Institute of Technology, at Pittsburgh, and is now the wife of Thomas Gracey, a stonecutter of Huntington; and Robert, who died at the age of 4½ years. William Roy Titus, who is his father's partner in the firm of G. L. Titus & Son, received a good practical education at Huntington and received his business training under his capable and experienced father. During the World war he enlisted in the United States Army and was in the service for one year, being stationed first at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, later at Camp Sherman, Illinois, and finally at Little Silver, New Jersey. He was already on board a vessel bound for France when the armistice was signed and the vessel was recalled. Mr. Titus married Miss Catherine Freice, formerly a resident of Roanoke, Virginia.

T. WILBUR HENNEEN was one of those rare men who can keep their energies apace with the broadening spread of their interests. Most men as they grow older have to eliminate the less essential things from their program. He continued active in business, church, fraternal and civic affairs, and death found him while still young and completely engrossed in the affairs of life.

Fairmont was always his home. He was born in that portion of the city once known as Palatine, February 21, 1878, son of Thomas J. and Mary Sterling Hennen. His mother died only a few years ago. There are two surviving brothers, William S. and Lawrence M. Hennen, both at Fairmont, and a sister Mrs. Eva M. Mestrezat of Morgantown.

T. Wilbur Hennen acquired a public school education in Fairmont, attended the State Normal School, and as a youth entered the merchant tailoring business, being associated for several years with George Morrow. He was in business for himself in that line several years but after 1913 his energies were chiefly bestowed on real estate and banking. He organized the Community Savings & Loan Association, and under his management it became one of the sound and prosperous financial institutions of the city. Among other tributes one of the most significant is the following: "Wilbur Hennen in business was a banker, and he was really more. When sickness, death or other misfortune came to the home of the lowly, he was not only their banker, but their friend. The little loans that he made to the masses alleviated a world of suffering and of sorrow and made for him a following that did not end until his body was placed in the grave."

For a number of years Mr. Hennen had been one of the ranking Masons of the state. He was master from 1902 to 1904 of Fairmont Lodge No. 9, F. & A. M., was grand master in 1915, held the official chairs in Orient Chapter No. 9, R. A. M., and Crusade Commandery No. 6, K. T., in the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite he was affiliated with West Virginia Consistory at Wheeling, and was a member of Osiris Temple of the Mystic Shrine. He was secretary-treasurer of the Masonic Building Association at Fairmont, having charge of the construction of the building and acting as its manager since. He was a member of the board of governors of the Masonic Home now in course of construction at Parkersburg. It was while attending a meeting of the grand lodge in Huntington that he was taken seriously ill, an illness that ended in his death on November 26, 1920. He was a member of the Knights of Pythias Lodge at Fairmont.

Another prominent interest of his life was the First Methodist Episcopal Church. At the time of his death he was church treasurer and member of the official board. February 21, 1905, Mr. Hennen married Miss Nellie A. Cochran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Cochran. Her father for many years was in the jewelry business at Fairmont. Surviving Mr. Hennen are Mrs. Hennen and two children, Thomas Wilbur, and Mary Emily.

An appropriate conclusion of this brief article is the following editorial from a Fairmont paper: "Mr. Hennen has been prominent in the business, religious and fraternal life of Fairmont for many years, and he was one of the city's best known residents. His range of useful activities was remarkably wide and he will be missed sorely not only in his immediate family but in his church, his lodges and among his banking associates. In all of those fields he was always willing to do more than his share of the work, and whatever he undertook he performed well. Coming as it does in the very prime of his life, Mr. Hennen's death will be a great loss to the city."

SAMUEL A. PALMER just graduated from the University of Virginia and had been practicing law about a year when America entered the war with Germany. He served throughout the entire period of that war, and was awarded the Croix de Guerre for special gallantry in France. Mr. Palmer recently located at Charleston where he is winning a successful place in the bar of that city, and still continues an active interest and leadership in military affairs, being captain of a local company of the National Guards.

Captain Palmer was born at Petersburg, Virginia, in 1895, son of Malvern H. and Jessie Key (Arrington) Palmer. His parents were natives of Virginia and his father a lawyer by profession. Samuel A. He graduated from law school in 1916 and in the same year began practice in his native city.

In April, 1917, he took the examination for commissioned officer in the regular army, was made a second lieutenant and assigned to duty in the training camp at Fort Virginia. Although in the artillery branch his duties were almost entirely with the Ninth and Twenty-third regiments of infantry, to which he was attached as liaison officer. These regiments formed a part of the Second Division, with which he went overseas in December, 1917. Mr. Palmer's service was attended with distinction and gallantry and he was in all the great offensive movements in the summer of 1918, and after the armistice was with the Army of Occupation on the Rhine. He returned to America in September, 1919, and was soon afterwards discharged after having served over two years continuously. JAMES A. MOFFETT. Known in later years as one of the leading officials of the Standard Oil Company and prominent in financial circles both east and west, James A. Moffett began his career in Parkersburg and gained his first distinctions as an expert on the refining and other branches of the petroleum industry in that city.

He was born at Marlins Bottom in Pocahontas County, Virginia, April 12, 1851, son of Dr. George Boone and Margaret (Beale) Moffett. The Moffetts were one of the most numerous families of Augusta County and lived there practically from the beginning of white settlement. Dr. George Boone Moffett was a Confederate surgeon throughout the period of the Civil war, and later became prominent in the affairs of West Virginia.

James A. Moffett was one of three children, his sister dying in infancy, and his brother being Robert H. Moffett. All are now deceased. James Moffett had an academic education and at the age of eighteen came to Parkersburg on the advice of his relative by marriage Col. William Payne Thompson of Wheeling. After coming to Parkersburg he attended for a time the public schools, though his reputation for learning and the great fund of special knowledge he acquired in later years was largely due to private study. Incidentally he read law, not for the purpose of practicing the profession, but to give him a superior equipment for business. Colonel Thompson and Senator Camden of Parkersburg had for several years been prominently interested in the pioneer oil belt of West Virginia, and Mr. Moffett as their clerk was sent to Burning Springs in Wirt County, but shortly afterwards was brought back to Parkersburg and went into the refinery established here by Senator Camden for the purpose of learning the details of the oil business. The Parkersburg refinery eventually became consolidated with the Standard Oil Company, and during his experience there and elsewhere Mr. Moffett achieved recognition as a foremost expert in all branches of the refining art. While still superintendent of the Parkersburg refinery he and others helped build the old pulp mills, afterwards destroyed by fire and flood, and was ever alive to the best interests of his city.

It was the great American capitalist and official of the Standard Oil Company, the late H. H. Rogers, who appreciating the wonderful abilities of Mr. Moffett induced him to move to New York and become superintendent of the Charles M. Pratt refinery, belonging to the Standard Oil group of interests. Six years later he went to Chicago to build and take charge of the Indiana refinery at Whiting, and for eleven years made his home in that city and as superintendent had jurisdiction over several surrounding states. He also became president of the California Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Moffett returned to New York City in 1901 and was made a member of the manufacturing committee, member of the executive board and later became a vice president of the Standard Oil Company. He also had general charge of the Standard Oil interests in most of the western states and in a large measure he was the practical successor of H. H. Rogers in the Standard Oil Company. The relations he enjoyed with this corporation are of themselves the highest word of praise that could be spoken of his capability, his integrity and the specialized knowledge that means power in business. His business character was combined with a kindly, generous and just nature.

Mr. Moffett continued active in business until his death on February 25, 1913. On January 25, 1883, he married Miss Kate Ingersoll Jackson, who survives him and resides at her New York City home, 903 Park Avenue. Her father James Monroe Jackson was long a prominent citizen of West Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Moffett were the parents of five children: George Monroe; James Andrew; Helen Seely, now Mrs. Harold Oakly Barker; Margaret Beale and Robert, both deceased.

CHARLES WILLIAM BELL of Zela, Nicholas County, is an attorney by profession, but the big work and service of his active lifetime has been education with which he has been identified for fully a quarter of a century.

Mr. Bell was born January 7, 1874, on Peters Creek near the present post office of Zela, and represents two lines of early ancestry in Nicholas County. His father was John A. Bell, grandson of Samuel Bell, one of the first settlers of the county. His mother was Margaret Virginia Dorsey, whose people were also among the pioneers of this region.

Charles William Bell was about three years old when his father died and he grew up under handicaps that made his personal advancement dependent upon his self reliance. He attended the free schools during their limited terms, and by hard study and close application he obtained a teacher's certificate and began teaching at the age of eighteen. He taught his first term of school in 1892, and in the thirty years since then has missed only five years from the work of the school room. He received a diploma from the Summersville Normal School in 1897, has a life certificate as a teacher, and has been a student all these years. Mr. Bell owns one of the largest private libraries on general information in Nicholas County. He has been a member of the County Board of Examiners and a grader for State Uniform Examinations, was District Supervisor of Free Schools for Jefferson District, Nicholas County for the school years 1919-20, and since June 15, 1915, has been commissioner of school lands. He was democratic candidate for the office of county superintendent in 1902. Mr. Bell is a recognized authority on local history, and at the present time is engaged in writing a history of Nicholas County.

While teaching he took up the study of law, and in 1909 graduated LL. B. from Cumberland University at Lebanon, Tennessee. During the practice of his profession he was assistant prosecuting attorney in 1919-20. Mr. Bell has prospered in his material affairs, and is interested in farming and stock-raising, owning two farms comprising 200 acres. He is also a stockholder in the Nicholas County Bank. Mr. Bell has been a notary public since 1900, was a justice of the peace in 1903-04, and was candidate for the House of Delegates in 1920. He was one of the selective service men during the World war. He is affiliated with the Masonic Order, the Knights of Pythias and the Patrons of Husbands, but his chief interest outside of education and his profession has been the church. He has been clerk in the Salem Baptist Church since November, 1914, clerk of the Hopewell Baptist Association since 1915, and represented that association as a member of the Executive Board of the Baptist General Association of West Virginia since 1916; was clerk of Hopewell Baptist Sunday School Convention 1904-09 inclusive and again in 1911; for seven years has been secretary of the Hopewell Baptist Sunday School Association and for four years president of the Hopewell Baptist Sunday School Convention for 1917, 1918, 1920, 1921. He was a trustee of Broadbent College in 1919.

WILLIAM YORK, M. D. A very successful physician and surgeon and also a highly respected citizen of Williamson, Dr. William York has had his professional and business interests in that community for the past fifteen years.

He was born at Glen Hayes in Wayne County, West Virginia, September 10, 1880, and comes of rugged stock of mountain people who have been in this country for several generations. His paternal grandparents lived to a good old age, were natives of Ohio, and in search of timber and mineral lands his grandfather emigrated to the Tug Fork of the Big Sandy River in early times. He acquired timber and mineral lands on a large scale. Doctor York's maternal ancestors were natives of Kentucky. His father John Y. York, was a pioneer of Wayne County and a man of prominence in that locality, serving on the county court and for several years was State Senator, 1901-05. He had a very successful business as a lumber and timberman, and was also extensively interested in agriculture and merchandising. He was a lifelong republican and he and his wife devout church people. For the greater part of his life he was associated with the Christian Church. He died at his home in January, 1917, at the age of seventy-one. His wife, whose maiden name was Fanny S. Keyser, was a daughter of Martin Keyser, an old Kentuckian, and she died in 1891 at the age of forty-three. Their family consisted of seven sons and four daughters.

William York acquired a common school education in Wayne County, and in 1907 was graduated M. D. from the Eclectic Medical College of Cincinnati. In the meantime as a boy he had worked on the farm and he was also associated with his father in the timber industry. Soon after graduating in medicine he established his home at Williamson and has been a resident of that town since June, 1907, and his work has been accorded high recognition so as to rank him among the ablest physicians and surgeons of this county.

Outside the activities of his profession Doctor York is president of the Mud Lick Coal Company of Sharrondale, Kentucky, secretary and treasurer of the Victor Coal Company of Pinson Fork, Kentucky, and has some large interests in Kentucky oil fields and real estate holdings in both Mingo and Wayne counties, West Virginia. Doctor York has been a member of the West Virginia State Senate since 1918, and is an influential worker in some of the most important committees including finance. He is the present clerk of the City Commission of Williamson, being first elected to that office in the spring of 1919 and again elected in 1921. A lifelong republican he has directed his efforts in every appropriate way to promote the success of the party and its program. Doctor York is a member of the Kiwanis Club of Williamson and is a Royal Arch and Knight Templar Mason, a member of the Beni Kedem Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston and is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Moose, Knights of Pythias and Improved Order of Red Men. While not an active member he is a firm supporter of the Christian Church.

Opposite the old home where he was born and reared and on the Kentucky shore of Tug River, Lawrence County, March 2, 1902, Doctor York married Elva H. Hughes, daughter of John W. and Bettie Lola Hughes. Her family originally came from Fluvanna County, Virginia. Doctor and Mrs. York have one son, William Edward York, born in 1911, now attending public school at Huntington.
